AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

SOMERVILLE.

Sunday was observed as "Young Men's Sunday" by the Reformed, Methodist and Baptist churches of Somerville and Raritan. The meeting was under the direction of William D. McRea, State county work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Elkanah Drake, of Newark, spoke in the First Reformed church in the morning, besides conducting a devotional meeting for men and women at the Methodist church prior to the regular morning service. John T. Sproull, president of the State Christian Endeavor Society, spoke at the Second Reformed church; F. W. Langstroth at the Methodist Episcopal church, State Secretary McRea at the Baptist church, and H. E. Parker, of Plainfield, addressed the Raritan Reformed congregation. A very largely attended woman's meeting was addressed by Mr. Drake in the Second Reformed church in the afternoon, and at the same time Somerset Hall was well filled with men, who were addressed by Professor Myron T. Scudder, of Rutgers College. A union service of all the congregations was held in the evening, in the First Reformed church. Somerville has no Y. M. C. A. organization.

The traction engine which is operated by the mining company between the copper mines north of Somerville and the depot here, to haul its coal and other supplies, has been the cause of a complaint. A petiton signed by all the farmers on the road from Pluckemin to Somerville has been presented to the Board of Freeholders, asking that body to compel the company to desist from further using the engine on the public roads. It is claimed by the farmers and others that it is almost impossible to get a horse by the engine and driving is dangerous. They also complain that the noise of running the engine at night prevents sleep, and that the county road is being ruined. Complaints are also heard in the borough. State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Smith was appealed to, and Friday he notified County Engineer Joshua Doughty, Jr., that he had revoked the license of the engine. Its route through the borough has been down Cliff street, from the Pluckemin road to Bridge street, and thence to the railroad.

Frederick A. Pope, who has been hunting for two weeks, in Westmoreland county, Va., has returned home.

Everyone who likes the good things of life and believes in helping a good thing along, will attend the oyster supper to be given tomorrow night in Excelsior hall by the members of Excelsior H. & L. Co. Supper will be served from 6 o'clock to 8:30.

Mrs. James Pope, of Grant avenue, Plainfield, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. John Marsh, of Park avenue.

The Methodist Sunday school will hold its Christmas exercises Friday night, December 24, in the church.

A. A. Storrs, of Belle Mead, has received the appointment as agent at the Fanwood station.

Prof. S. Dana Townsend has returned from a week-end visit with his parents at Orange.

The heavy rain yesterday soon put an end to the skating and spoiled the prospects of sleighing.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The house being built by John Assip, of New York, on Lehigh avenue near the Sunswich Poultry farm is now nearing completion.

The local school will be closed Friday, December 17, on account of the Teachers' Institute held in Perth Amboy.

The meeting of the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Co., will be held in the company's rooms on next Friday night.

Mrs. Fannan, of New Brunswick, has taken a class here in instrumental music.

William Norman was in Plainfield yesterday on business.

WESTFIELD.

Recorder W. B. Toucey, of Westfield, is suffering from injuries received while alighting from a trolley car in Elizabeth. Another passenger attempting to board the car at the same time knocked him down and sprained both his wrists.

Westfield Council will give a public hearing this evening to those who consider that they have been discriminated against by the Board of Assessors. The town has been flooded with circulars on the subject.

Maple Sugar Fudge.

Maple sugar fudge with nuts is made of three cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of maple sugar and one cupful of milk. Boil fifteen minutes, add a lump of butter the size of an egg, a small quantity of vanilla and a cupful of chopped walnuts or pecan nuts. Beat briskly for a few minutes, pour into buttered pans and when nearly cold, cut into squares.

Thousands of Them to Choose From

This is certainly the most wonderful collection of pictures at the popular price of $2.50 that has ever been shown by any store in this country. We speak advisedly because we have specialized pictures at this price so long that we have built up an enormous regular business, and for this season we made great preparations, knowing full well that there would be a great demand for our popular specialties.

Prominent among the features of this great collection are—"The Lady With the Fan" and "The Duchess of Devonshire."

Both of these immensely popular subjects are in beautiful colors, magnificently framed in ornamental gold, both in bright and French antique finish, with bowknot design at the top—a great pair of pictures, truly—pictures that would be appropriate in the finest homes—pictures you will never tire of—and there are so many subjects—etchings, colored landscapes in heavy sweep frames, and colored studies in gold burnished and heavily ornamented frames—stacks and stacks of pictures, crowding the department so that there is hardly walking space, at..... $2.50

The Board of Directors of the American Sabbath Tract Society met on Sunday and transacted routine business.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church will meet this afternoon in Vincent chapel at the usual hour.

The Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church will meet Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to plan for Christmas.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, has changed his evenings at home from Monday to Tuesday of each week.

Dr. Norman H. Probasco will lead the prayer-meeting at the First Baptist church, tomorrow night, which will be in charge of the Young People's Society.

The Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will hold a sewing meeting tomorrow afternoon in the church parlors.

The choir of the First Baptist church is preparing an elaborate program of Christmas music. The Sunday school on Sunday began its rehearsal of carols for a special program.

The Bible teacher training class recently organized by Miss May Serrell at the Y. W. C. A., is progressing favorably and the membership is increasing steadily. It meets every Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock at the association rooms.

The Men's Bible class of the First M. E. church has changed its hour of meeting on Sunday from 12 o'clock noon to 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the latter hour being more convenient for the members. The class was formed under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the church and Samuel Bingaman is the teacher.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Although Secretary Vanderpool had slow returns to his circular asking the names of the delegates it is evident nearly all the sixty clubs in membership will be at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association tonight at Delmonico's. There are no amendments in the constitution or by-laws to be discussed as far as known, and aside from the reading of reports and the election of officers the most important new business will be to select the courses for the M. G. A. amateur and open championships.

The latter has lost any special significance by being open to all professionals, the same as the national, Western and Eastern open championships. Aleck Smith won both the Eastern and M. G. A. this season, with Gilbert Nicholls, of Wilmington, Del., second to him each time. It would be illogical for Nicholls to be the M. G. A. open champion. There has been some talk of reverting to the old conditions and to limit the tournament to professionals under engagement in the M. G. A. district. Should the matter come up tonight the policy of a change will probably be left to the executive committee.

There were thirteen tournaments at the M. G. A. clubs, including the amateur and open championships. The data show Travis had the best of it, with Fred Herreshoff next in consistent work. The records:

Nassau—Winner, Fred Herreshoff (5 and 4); runner up, H. G. Legge; medalists, J. M. Ward and Herreshoff tied at 159.

Morris County—Winner, F. B. Upton, Jr., (6 and 5); runner up, W. F. Morgan, Jr.; medalist, John M. Ward, 77.

Montclair—Winner, J. M. Ward (1 up); runner up, Jerome D. Travers; medalists, O. Woodward, F. R. Upton, Jr., and Ward, tied at 80.

The M. G. A. team successfully defended the Lesley cup in the tri-city matches and the trophy will be on exhibition at the meeting. The nominating committee, C. E. Watson, W. E. Hodgman and C. J. Sullivan, renamed the present officers for election with two exceptions—Mortimer N. Buckner to be treasurer in place of F. C. Jennings and F. S. Douglas to be a new committeeman.

Accepts New Brunswick Pastorate.

Announcement was made at the services held at the Livingston Avenue Baptist church, New Brunswick, Sunday that Rev. Paul Hayne, of Batavia, N. Y., had accepted the call to the church to succeed Rev. A. B. Sears, who resigned some weeks ago to become pastor of the Gloversville, N. Y., Baptist church. The new pastor will take charge on February 1. He will closely follow Rev. N. A. Merritt, Jr., who resigned the pastorate at the Rahway Baptist church, to become pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Rev. Edmund Garrett was formerly pastor. The salary of the local church to which Mr. Hayne comes is $2,000. He got $1,800 in Batavia. Mr. Hayne was born in Tecumseh, Mich., in 1873, and is a graduate of the Rochester Theological Seminary. He went to Batavia from the Tabernacle Baptist church at Syracuse, N. Y. He married Miss Alice M. Cornell, of Rochester, in 1900.

Charges Husband with Desertion.

Mrs. Louis Gelliphant had her husband arrested at New Brunswick Sunday on the charge of desertion. Gelliphant is employed as a clerk in the furniture store of Mrs. Minnie Plean. His wife came here two weeks ago with her two children from Europe, and alleges that Louis, who boards with Mrs. Plean, is too attentive to her. Gelliphant told Recorder Houghton he was willing to support his two children from the $5 a week salary he gets, but not his wife. He intends suing his wife for divorce. The authorities will probably notify the immigration department about the matter.

Plainfield, N. J., December 14, 1909.

Our American press is worrying itself over the uselessness of the British House of Lords, overlooking the United States Senate for the time being. It reminds us of the Biblical injunction about "the mote in thine own eye."

To summon a local clergyman to the bedside of his dying brother, on Sunday, it was necessary for his relatives at Denver, Colo., to use the long distance telephone, that corporation, which has not become so greedy as the Western Union and Postal telegraph companies, maintaining an uninterrupted service here. No matter how urgent may be the demand, it is impossible to get in telegraphic communication with other parts of the world on the first day of the week except for one hour when those corporations condescend to open their offices here.

Plainfield has lost a valuable citizen in the death of Jacob Kirkner. His splendid work for two decades as a member of the Board of Education alone stamped him as a public spirited citizen who had the best interests of the community at heart. It was his constant aim to see that the pupils were given a thorough grounding in the rudiments of education. He was ever and successful the avowed foe of curriculum "fads," and for that he deserved the recognition accorded him by those who desire the public school system to maintain the position intended for it.

The Christmas number of the New York Times, issued last Sunday, was probably the finest and most creditable specimen of newspaper work that American journalism has produced. The magazine section, which outranks the Sun's, maintained its usual high tone and the illustrated section was by all odds the best that has come out of Gotham. But above all, the news sections were complete for they contained all that is really fit to print and all that the intelligent American would desire to see in the paper he reads. The Times is truly a wonderful newspaper and, despite the nauseating boasting permeating the news and editorial columns of its rivals, deserves to be ranked as the disinctively American newspaper.

Can't Recover for Bite.

Peter Yanken, a youth, who brought suit through his father, Clement, against Felix Ezczenowsky, a saloon-keeper, for injuries resulting from a bite by the latter's dog, failed to get a verdict in the District court at Elizabeth yesterday. He demanded $500. The court ruled that it was not apparent that the injury was serious, being merely a scratch, and that the boy was playing with the dog at the time.

ATLANTIC CITY FLOODED.

Resort's Electric Lines Tied Up—Watching for Wrecks.

A high northeast gale, with rain, flooded Atlantic City last night, and the meadows in every direction are under water. The electric lines are out of commission, and when the tide falls there the tracks will probably be buried or washed away.

Except for the barge which turned turtle below Atlantic City, in which the Captain lost his life, no marine damage has been reported as yet, but the beach patrol has been doubled to watch for vessels that may be caught in the storm too close in shore.

DEATH OF JACOB KIRKNER

to this city he lived on Dunellen avenue for a time and later he built the handsome residence on West Eighth street, which he occupied to the time of his death. He is survived by a wife, one daughter, Miss May Kirkner and three sons, George M. Kirkner, J. Caspar Kirkner and John W. Kirkner.

The funeral service will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock and at the request of Mr. Kirkner, it will be a full Knights Templar service, Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., as well as the officers of the Grand Commandery of the State, being in charge.

J. A. CLARK'S REMAINS DUE IN NEW YORK TODAY.

The body of J. Andrew Clark, who died at Kingston, Jamaica, on December 1, is due to arrive in New York today on the Hamburg-American Line steamer Princess August Wilhelm, and it will be met by Undertaker George Cole, of this city, who will at once bring the remains to Plainfield, where the funeral and burial will take place.

Mr. Clark went to Kingston the latter part of November for his health, but the change did not prove beneficial, and he died at the home of Miss E. E. Allen, 80 East street, Kingston, on December 1. He was reputed to be wealthy and V. W. Nash, Jr., who was appointed executor of the estate, at once made arrangements to have the body sent to Plainfield. Mr. Clark is survived by a brother-in-law, C. K. Compton, of the borough, and a nephew, Cornelius Compton. Arrangements for the funeral will be made after the body arrives here.

Fight for Comptroller.

Following the announcement of General Dennis F. Collins that he has withdrawn from the race for city comptroller at Elizabeth, there is talk that former Comptroller Carlton will be a candidate for the office. It is said Mayor Mravlag favors the former comptroller. There is also talk of entering former Alderman Sauer in the race.

RUNAWAY, NOW ARMY DOCTOR, FINDS MOTHER.

Trenton, Dec. 14.—After an absence of twenty years, Edward A. Waldt, a surgeon in the United States army, has been united to his parents and childhood sweetheart. Relatives and friends are planning a reception, and his marriage to Miss Alma L. Alexander is expected.

The accidental meeting of Captain Waldt with his mother on a street corner a few days ago resulted in his reunion with his family. Their meeting was pathetic, for it was difficult for the woman to believe that the man in uniform who approached her with the greeting, "Mother, dear," was the son who ran away from his home when but thirteen years old.

Dr. Waldt met with a greater degree of success than the oridnary prodigal. When he left home his parents were living in Erie, Pa. Stories of Indians caused him to run away.

The boy made his way to Chicago, and after claiming he was a homeless orphan he obtained employment from a Dr. Henry, who died several years ago. The physician became attached to the youth, gave him an education and sent him to a medical college.

Waldt feared his parents would never forgive him, which is why he never communicated with them.

He was appointed an assistant surgeon when the Spanish-American War broke out, and was commended by the medical department for his part in fighting fever in Cuba. A year after the close of the war he was transferred to the States, and procured a month's furlough. He returned to his former home in Erie and found his relatives had moved to parts unknown. Miss Alexander was adopted by the Waldts when a small girl, and she had gone with them.

Last week the doctor was sent to Trenton to examine a deserter who asserted he was not in proper condition to be returned to the army. He was just returning from making the examination when he met his mother.

Forty-eight hours after the reunion the engagement of Dr. Waldt and his childhood playmate was reported.

PRIEST CAUSES THIRD ARREST, ALLEGING LIBEL.

Perth Amboy, Dec. 11.—Henrico Colosimo was placed under a bond of $500 yesterday on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Rev. Columbino Galassi, pastor of the Church of the Holy Rosary. Colosimo is the third man who has been arrested upon complaint of Father Galassi. The others were Francisco Campopiano and Louis de Stephano.

The latter has made a statement in regard to the matter. He told Recorder H. E. Pickersgill that he received an express package from New York, and when he opened it he found that it contained several thousand printed circulars bearing an appeal to the Italians of Perth Amboy for aid in ousting Father Galassi. The priest was denounced for his alleged interference with the courts in behalf of his friends and against those who oppose him.

The circular also alleged that Father Galassi had failed to account for money received by him for the benefit of the Italian earthquake sufferers, although the accused priest has a receipt showing that all such funds were turned over to Bishop McFaul, at Trenton. De Stephano has been an opponent of Father Gallassi since the parish of the Holy Rosary was established here, and he admits that he distributed the circulars, without trying to find out who sent them to him. Campopiano placed one of them in the window of his shoe shop on Washington street and Colosimo distributed several hundred of them in a factory in which he is employed. Bail has been furnished for the three men arrested by Eliseo Ricci, a wealthy Italian resident of this city, who was until recently a very warm supporter of Father Galassi. Other arrests are expected to follow. More than forty witnesses will be subpoenaed to go before the grand jury to tell of receiving the circulars from the three men under arrest and from others. Several copies have been mailed to Bishop McFaul and by him returned to Father Galassi. The priest is attempting to discover other guilty parties by an examination of the handwriting on the envelopes received from the bishop.

ANGER OVER COURT ACT RESULTS IN ODD "AD."

Hackensack, Dec. 14.—Angered because James Esposito was sentenced to only one year in State prison by Judge Milton Demarest after being caught in the cellar of his home on Essex street, four weeks ago, Hartwell Stafford, a publisher, whose officers are in New York, has inserted the following advertisement in papers here and in Paterson. The advertisement reads:

I bought this house for a home. It is ideal in location, arrangement and convenience, and I hate to sell it. Four weeks ago I captured a burglar in the house and he threatened to do me up if I did not let him go. I calculated it would be many years before he would get this chance, but Judge Demarest sentenced him to one year. In a short time, therefore, he will be among us again. If I take a gun and protect myself I will probably get about twenty years, and if he sticks a knife in my back some dark night he will probably get about six months. I do not think the odds are fair, consequently I am going to get out, and so here is a big bargain for somebdy. It doesn't need much cash, just enough to make it sure that the property won't be thrown back on my hands and I won't have to go back there to live.

Will Guard Port.

In order that the port at Perth Amboy be guarded so that foreigners on incoming vessels who are not legally allowed to land, be kept on board, Dr. Charles W. McNaulty, of Perth Amboy, has received his commission as United States immigrant and Chinese inspector for that port. Dr. McNaulty is acting assistant surgeon of the United States Hospital and Marine Corps.

OCEAN WAVES.

Curious Facts About the Irregularities of the Tides.

To the ordinary landsman tides along the coast are most puzzling. He has been taught that the tides rise and fall twice in the twenty-four hours and that this depends in some mysterious way upon the moon. But when it occurs that in his travels he sees a spot along the shore where there is no tide at all he is at a loss to explain the phenomenon.

To be exact, there is only one ocean in the world where the tides follow the moon with absolute regularity. This is the great Antarctic basin, and the reason is that there and there only is to be found a sweep of water entirely uninterrupted by land. The enormous wave raised by the moon's attraction courses round the world south of Cape Horn and the Cape of Good Hope with absolutely nothing to break it. In the northern hemisphere great masses of land interrupt the tidal waves and, combined with the shallowness of inland seas, cause them to perform antics that seem most strange.

The depth of water has much to do with tidal irregularities. Out in the open ocean, when the tide is abyssmal—that is, about 5,000 fathoms—the speed of the waves is amazing. Where the depth decreases to five fathoms the tide travels at a comparatively slow rate. In England, for example, which is surrounded by narrow, land broken seas, the result is that the Britons get some of the most terrible and dangerous tidal races and currents.

The most formidable is the whirlpool between the island of Jura and Scarba, on the west coast of Scotland. This is known as the "Caldron of the Spotted Seas." Here is a race running at a speed to be matched only by a mountain torrent. The force of a heavy tidal current pushing up a wide mouthed river causes what is termed a "bore." The most striking example of this tidal feature is seen on the Amazon, a moving wall of water thirty feet high and reaching from bank to bank rushing inland from the ocean.—New York Tribune.

ILLUSTRATORS' WOES.

Errors That Were Pointed Out by Unfeeling Editors.

"Now, what do you think of that?" asked the youthful illustrator ruefully as he tossed his comrade a letter. It was from an editor, and its mandate was stern. It said:

"Dear Sir—Permit me to call your attention to the importance of reading a story before attempting to illustrate it. I am aware that the modern artist does not observe this rule, but it is imperative in this office. If you will examine the text of the story sent you for illustration you will learn that the army officer mentioned is said to have taken his fishing reel out of his haversack, and you have made a picture showing this officer—who, by the way, is a brigadier general—with a knapsack strapped to his back. A knapsack, my dear sir, is not a haversack. Furthermore, no army officer ever carried a knapsack or ever will carry one. If the general should see your drawing he would be insulted. Will you please acquaint yourself thoroughly with the appearance of a haversack, correct your drawing and return it to this office at the earliest possible date?"

"That's nothing," his studio comrade responded consolingly. "I made an awful break once. I painted a picture to illustrate a story in which a widow got married, and I depicted the bride in a long white veil. Of course I thought the drawing was a beauty and a wonder, and I was ecstatic over the way I had handled that effect in white. Imagine how crushed I was to have the editor—by the way, she was a woman—smile witheringly and tell me that no widow ever wore a veil when being remarried. How was I to know that? I have never been a widow."—New York Press.

A King's Umbrella.

The king of the Belgians once left his umbrella in a hansom when driving to Brussels. This was returned to his majesty a few hours afterward by the proud cabby, who was offered for his honesty by King Leopold the sum of 100 francs. The astute jehu, however, begged a great favor of the king. Could he have the umbrella instead of the money? The favor was granted, and before many days had passed the cabman had put up the umbrella for sale, and it was knocked down to some royal enthusiast for 1,100 francs. When King Leopold heard of this he exclaimed, "Well, I've heard of an umbrella being put up to keep off showers of rain, but this seems to have been put up to bring down showers of gold!"—London Globe.

A Politician's Theory.

"Why did Diogenes adopt those spectacular methods in his effort to find an honest man?"

"Oh," answered Senator Sorghum, "I suppose he had a hard job that paid neither salary nor perquisites that he wanted to work off on somebody."—Washington Star.

Hubby's Plot.

"I wish I were a heroine, George."

"Why, it is easy for you to become a heroine, dear."

"I'd like to know how?"

"The woman who is not afraid to remain alone while her husband goes to a poker party is a heroine."—Houston Post.

Books cannot always please, however good; minds are not ever craving for their food.—Crabbe.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Attorney-General Edmund Wilson will address the men of Seabright at the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday evening, January 30. His subject will be "The World, the Flesh and the Devil."

Jumping from a moving trolley car in Camden Sunday, Charles Risley, forty-five years old, of East Pensauken, sustained a lacerated nose and was cared for at the Homeopathic Hospital.

With the signing of the park deeds by the American Garden owners, City Solicitor Wootten, of Atlantic City, Saturday, said that within ninety-five per cent. of the entire ocean front of the resort is now under control of the city as a city park.

While Mrs. Mary Wilson, an aged colored woman, was warming her feet over an oil stove in her home on Kentucky avenue, Atlantic City, Sunday, the stove upset, setting fire to her clothing. She was badly burned, but is expected to recover.

Following a hot argument over drinks in a saloon in Gloucester late Saturday night, William Toole and Alfred Higginbottom repaired to a secluded spot to fight it out, but after several blows had been exchanged they were arrested by Policeman Elliott.

Seven-year-old Felix Ballow, of 8 Liberty street, Bayonne, was run down near his home Sunday by the driver of a horse which was going rapidly. The child was trampled upon and the wheels crushed his foot. The driver whipped up his horse and got away before the name on the wagon could be ascertained. The boy was taken home.

Robert B. Carhart celebrated Sunday his fortieth anniversary as keeper of records and seals of Montana Lodge, No. 23, Knights of Pythias, of Phillipsburg. He is also the oldest past chancellor in the county of Warren. He believes that he is the only Pythian in New Jersey who can show a record of forty years' continuous service as an official in one capacity in the same lodge.

Stephen Krantz, a Trenton carpenter, is looking for his wife and five-year-old child, who arrived on the Cambria last week. The mother and child were detained on Ellis Island because of being near disease, and the husband was refused permission to see them. He went back to Trenton, but on notice again went to Ellis Island, to be informed that the mother and child had been discharged. Now he cannot find them.

When Justice of the Peace Joel G. Cross, of Camden, goes to Gloucester on a Saturday night again he will probably take a Gatling gun along for protection. One such trip, he says, is enough to last a few years, however. When the 'squire appeared at the police headquarters there last Saturday night he had a sorry tale to tell. He said that as he stepped out of a saloon at Third street and Jersey avenue a man grabbed his watch, while another man helped him go through the magisterial pockets. The pockets yielded $27, all the money the 'squire had with him.

But for the timely assistance rendered them by their companions, Eleanor Blaker, daughter of Theodore Blaker, of East Main street, William Allen third, oldest son of Rev. William Allen, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Fred Pressey, son of Arthur Pressey, would have been drowned in Abbot's Pond, near Haddonfield, Sunday evening while they were skating. Miss Blaker went too near a thin place and before any one could stop her she was in over her head. Allen went after her, and barely succeeded in getting her. Seeing Allen's danger, Pressey went after him. They managed between them to keep hold of the ice until Robert Chew and Harry Thomas rescued them by lying on the ice and drawing them out one at a time.

DIES FROM BROKEN NECK, FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

Franklyin Furnace, Dec. 14.—Adam Seronick was found dying from a broken neck about 9 o'clock Sunday night, in front of bungalow No. 5. He died soon after his body was found.

Coroner Dr. A. N. Jacob was notified and began an autopsy yesterday afternoon. He said cuts were found on Seronick's head that pointed strongly to foulplay.

The coroner learned that Seronick had attended a christening Sunday night and a number of men who attended had been drinking heavily. His friends say Seronick went outside and slipped on some ice, striking his head.

Monument Design in Abeyance.

Princeton, Dec. 14.—Professor Allen Marquand, head of Princeton's art department, said Saturday the battle monument commission of five members had asked Frederick MacMonnies, the sculptor, to design as a monument to the battle of Princeton a colossal figure of Victory, on a low pedestal, or to design as an alternative an equestrian statue of George Washington. The sculptor has submitted one design of a statue of Victory, surrounded by medallions of generals famous in the battle, and the commission fears the elaborate pedestal will distract attention from the central figure. The monument will stand at Nassau street and Bayard lane. The cost is to be paid by federal and State appropriations and private contributions

They Look Good and You See Good.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

When Simpson had gone Patsy remained for a moment speechless, gazing wildly at her sobbing sister. Then she went to her, pulled her hands from her face and held her by the shoulders.

"Nora, look at me!" she commanded. "Have you—have you gone to the bad?"

The girl's sobs stopped instantly. She threw up her head and looked her sister in the eyes, while an angry flush suffused her pale cheeks.

"Why, Patsy!" she exclaimed.

There was an indignation, a fearlessness, in the words that rendered doubt impossible.

Patsy clasped her to her heart in frantic joy.

"Thank God! Oh, thank God!" she cried.

For a few minutes the sisters remained close clasped in each other's arms. Patsy was the first to recover her composure. Then in her business-like way she started in to learn all about it.

"Now, tell me—what about this Crawford?" she questioned.

Nora told her that they had met—by chance—and he had spoken to her. She could not refuse to recognize him. Was he not Dan's partner? He had been very nice, and the next time they encountered each other on the street he had stopped again to chat with her. Now and then she met him that way, that was all. She didn't see any harm in it.

"But Simpson said he'd been blowin' you off to lunches. Is it true? Have you lunched with him?"

"Yes, once," admitted Nora reluctantly.

"Only once? Are you sure?"

"Well, may have been twice," she owned, becoming restive under the cross examination. "He's very kind."

"Kind! The dog! Is it kind gettin' you talked about, compromisin' you, you little fool?"

This time Nora broke out in open rebellion.

"I don't have to tell you everything I do. I'm not tied to your apron strings," she answered defiantly.

A hard look came into Patsy's blue eyes. Her sister's attitude and disinclination to talk roused her suspicions. She determined to get at the truth at any cost.

"Nora," she said sharply, "don't give me none of your lip, or you'll be sorry. You're keepin' somethin' back. Hand it out, an' hand it out quick. If you don't, I'll find it out anyhow, an' I'll put pop an' mom next to your goin's on. You know what that'll mean. You'll be yanked home so quick you'll think you got there by wireless."

"There ain't anything more to tell," she said, weakening.

"Don't lie!" warned Patsy. "What is there to them tips Simpson yawped about? Have you been playin' the races on his say so? Out with it!"

"Ye-es," she faltered.

"Well?"

"He helped me to win money, and he helped me out of debt," she said, hanging her head.

"Debt!" echoed Patsy, astonished. "Who d'you owe money to, I'd like to know?"

"The girls."

"How, the girls? What d'you mean?"

"I placed their bets on the Montgomery handicap. Mr. Crawford gave me the tips. They won, but—but I wanted some things to wear to go to lunch with him. I felt mean and shabby in those swell places. They were awful dear, especially the furs, and—and I didn't have enough left to pay all the bets."

"But what did you do with the clothes? I ain't seen you with no furs except the collarette and muff I give you at Christmas, an' they wouldn't bust no bank."

"They're at Inez Blair's. I went to her place to change when I was to go out with him."

Patsy was more and more amazed at this confession of her sister's duplicity.

"Well, go on about the bets," she ordered, disguising her feelings with admirable stoicism.

"I tried to win back what I had spent. I plunged and lost it all."

"Did he give you the tip?"

"Yes."

"It was a trap."

"Oh, no. But I didn't know what to do. The girls were all asking for their money, and I couldn't pay them. I didn't have a cent. I just had to go to Mr. Crawford and ask him to help me out. I couldn't stand it any longer. He was very kind. He lent me the money. And now—I don't see how ever I'll be able to pay it back. I wish I was dead, I do."

She began to whimper.

"How much is it?" demanded Patsy.

"Three hundred dollars," sobbed Nora.

Patsy gazed at her aghast.

"Three hundred dollars!" she exclaimed. "Three hundred dollars! However could it be so much?"

"The girls each bet $5, and at ten to one it soon mounts up—oh, Patsy, how it mounted up!"

"Three hundred dollars! My God! What's Crawford to you that he'd give you so much money? Say—speak!"

"Why, nothing. He didn't give it to me. It was business. He lent it to me. I signed a paper. Mr. Crawford said to sign pop's name."

"And you did? You forged his name?" demanded Patsy, her voice trembling with her agitation.

"Forged it? No, I just signed—oh, my God!"

The realization that she had done something terrible dawned upon her.

"Patsy, help me, help me! What shall I do?" she moaned, wringing her hands.

"He has us in a trap," said Patsy. "He can make pop pay that money, an' pop ain't got no $300 and couldn't get it. Oh, Nora, Nora, what have you done!"

For a moment she was crushed and held her head, trying to think of a way of escape from the consequences of her sister's act.

"We must get that note back," she exclaimed at length. "We've simply got to have it."

"Perhaps he'd give it me back," said Nora, with sudden hope. "He was very kind. He laughed about it at the time. I'll promise to pay him when I can. He's asked me many times to take supper at his apartments after the show. I'll go this very night. I'm sure he'll give it to me."

"Go to his rooms! Are you crazy? Ain't you got no gumption at all?" demanded Patsy, with angry impatience at her sister's absolute inability to see the wrong and the danger of such a step. "Do you think you can get that note without payin' for it, an' payin' dear? Don't you understand what he wants—can't you understand—after all I've told you? No, no. I'll get it from him. I'll go to his office tomorrow an' tell him a thing or two that'll make him sit up an' see straight."

"He won't give it to you," said Nora doubtfully. "He doesn't like you. If you make him angry he'll tell father and"—

"If he makes a move like that you'll tell pop first," said Patsy grimly.

"No, oh, no, we mustn't tell pop. He'd never forgive me."

To Nora there was no way out of the situation. All avenues of escape appeared to be barred to her. Exposure and disgrace menaced her. The whole universe seemed to be crumbling about her.

"Oh, why did you bring me here?" she wailed helplessly.

The reproach went to Patsy's heart like a heavy blow. She forgot that her sister had insisted upon coming, would listen to no remonstrances and had accused her of being selfish and jealous when she had sought to dissuade her. She took all the blame to herself.

"Why did I bring you here?" she said remorsefully, going to the girl and placing her hand on her shoulder. "Because I felt it in me bones he'd come snoopin' around after I was gone. An' I brings you here right to him, makin' it easy an' convenient for him to play his little game. How he must be givin' me the laff! He knew I was next. I swore to mom I'd look after you an' see no harm 'u'd come to you. If this gets home, it seems to me, I couldn't ever look her in the face again."

There was a knock at the door. Patsy found one of the employees of the theater there.

"Miss O'Brien," he said, "Mr. Mallory ast me to tell you that your father an' mother was in front with him tonight an' would you please hurry after the show."

"Pop and mom! I can't face them I can't face them!" cried Nora, springing up in panic.

"But you got to dance," insisted Patsy. "The curtain's goin' up. Stay here a minute. I'll get somethin' from Coote to brace you."

She hurried out.

Nora gazed around her distractedly.

"I've got to go to him. I can't face pop and mom without that note," she moaned.

"Act's on! Act's on!" shouted the call boy, running along the corridor.

Nora rushed out and stopped him.

CIVIL WAR PURCHASING AGENT DIES IN RAHWAY.

Edmund Mays, who was born in northern England ninety-four years ago, is dead at his home in East Rahway, near the Yacht Club grounds. He died Saturday following an illness of twelve bedridden years, dating back to the death of his wife. He had resided in Rahway more than sixty years, following farming generally since the Civil War, when he was a purchasing agent for the government.

Five sons are living, James, Edward, John, Charles and William, besides three sisters, Mrs. Jane McIntyre and Mrs. John Perrine, of New York, and Miss Mary Mays, of Rahway.

There has never been a death among the children. About thirty grandchildren and almost a score of great-grandchildren are living.

A brother, who was in the Confederate army, was never located after the war, although searched for.

Value of Correct Speech.

Correct speech is largely a matter of imitation. If the persons with whom a child constantly associates speaks intelligently the child will certainly do likewise. No amount of instruction in grammar will avail to counteract the debasing effect of practical tuition in the wrong direction. The home is the true school of speach and the mother the teacher whose influence will be the most lasting.

Narrow Escape of Supt. Luhr.

George Luhr, division superintendent of the Public Service Railway, received a shock during the storm last night which might have been serious. APPOINTMENTS FOR THE CO. K FAIR COMMITTEES

The members of Co. K, at a regular meeting in the armory, last night, decided to hold the annual fair February 19-26, at the armory and Captain Harry B. Kitchell appointed the following as the heads of the various committees:

Floor manager, Sergeant George Apgar; advertising, Sergeant Alfred Tranchand; donations, Private Hartpense; wardrobe, Corporal Archibald Niles; refreshments, Sergeant O. R. Pierson; decorations, Corporal J. L. Niles; secretary to the committee, Samuel Rothberg. They will select their own assistants.

Despite the stormy night all of the 100 per cent. members were present. During the early part of the evening there was a drill. Sergeant Nathan Hort first took command and put the men through the manual of arms in detail. Then Lieut. Charles Peterson took command and put the members through the calisthenic movements which were new to most of the boys, but they all enjoyed them very much. In conclusion Captain Kitchell assumed command and complimented the members for the excellent showing made.

It was announced that the company would go to Trenton Friday night to take part in the annual review. This is the event of the year, and the militia will appear in full dress. Brig. Gen. D. F. Collins will review the regiment on that occasion.

TRAMP SENT TO JAIL ON GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

William Totten, a tramp, was given a sentence of twenty days in the county jail by Judge William Runyon this morning for lurking around the North avenue station and apparently having no occupation. Complaints have been made of the young man by various Front street merchants and numerous articles have mysteriously disappeared from the counters of some of the places which it is known that Totten has visited.

It was alleged that last Thursday he had been guilty of stealing a dollar from the pocket of a man who had befriended him, but no complaint was made to the police. Judge Runyon, however, thought it would be a good thing for Totten to have a bath so he sent him away for twenty days. Totten is about twentyfive years old.

Drinks Poison by Mistake.

In her haste to relieve a paroxysm of coughing, Miss Laura Reed, of Riverside, swallowed laudanum in mistake for medicine. The young woman is suffering with a severe cold and had a cough preparation in a bottle. She picked up the wrong bottle and took some of the poison before the mistake was noticed. A physician was summoned and he applied the stomach pump successfully.

REVIEW OF CIVIL SERVICE

Ackerman Law Commission Makes its Second Report to Governor.

IT NOW APPLIES TO 11,000.

Amply Demonstrating Its Advantages Already Says President Willis Fletcher Johnson.

According to the second annual report of the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, which was created under the law introduced in the Legislature two years ago by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union county, the civil service system is amply demonstrating its advantages not only in maintaining an efficient standard of work required from persons in the public service, but also showing value as an economical proposition for the State, counties and cities that are operating under its provisions.

In reviewing the work of the commission for the past year, as submitted to Governor Fort yesterday afternoon, President Willis F. Johnson says that "complaints and criticisms of the law in its administration have been steadily decreasing in frequency and importance in proportion as familiarity with the law to its practical application has dispelled misapprehension concerning it and has demonstrated its practical utility and benefits." He points out that the system cannot fairly be regarded as adding anything to the net cost of the State government. "It is obvious," he says, "that the work of examining, investigating and otherwise scrutinizing applicants for office so as to determine their capacity and fidelity must be done by some competent person if the public service is to be properly filled. It seems probable that by the assignment of it to a commission specially constituted for the purpose that work will be done not only more thoroughly and fairly but also far more economically, in dollars and cents, than it could be done by leaving it to a multiplicity of heads of departments or other officers upon whose time it would make series demands and with which regular official work it would at times seriously interfere."

"As showing that the civil service system is working to the satisfaction of officials who in the beginning had some doubt as to the safety of engaging employes under it, the report contains a copy of a letter from State Librarian Henry C Buchanan, who relates that "Mr. Kimball, the chairman of the Public Library Commission, had some doubt as to whether it was safe to engage public library assistants on the record made by an examination conducted by the Civil Service Commission, believing that the personality of the applicant was an important factor. We have learned by experience that that is considered in examinations and that the department heads are consulted in the preparation of examination questions." Mr. Buchanan adds that the selection of an assistant organizer of the Public Library Commission, from the eligible list furnished under civil service tests is entirely satisfactory.

On the other hand the report points out that there have been 176 dismissals from the public service for cause, which have been promptly and easily effected under the simple provisions of the civil service law. The dismissals were for a variety of causes, and, according to the report, in many cases heads of departments testified that the civil service had actually facilitated dismissals. On this phase of the work the commission reports: "Only a few dismissals were made for insufficient or illegal cause, and in all cases the careful investigation by this commission and the consequent finding and order resulted in the prompt undoing of the wrong and the reinstatement of the improperly dismissed employes. These facts abundantly demonstrate that the civil service law affords practical and efficient protection to faithful and competent place-holders, while it does not in the least screen the unfaithful and incompetent and does not in any degree prevent the improvement of the services by weeding out unworthy incumbents."

The commission maintains that the complaint that the system "adds stultified by the expression of preferstultified by the expression of preference for that system of local examining boards which formerly prevailed to a limited extent. The fact is that the system imposes no local expense whatever in any case, while it actually relieves of considerable expense those municipalities which formerly had local boards for police and fire department examinations.

At the present there are approximately 11,000 public officers, State and municipal, within the purview of the commission. During the year

TO INSTAL LIGHTING PLANT

Muhlenberg Hospital Governing Board Considering Improvement.

DR. F. J. HUGHES APPOINTED.

Arrangements for Charity Ball, "The Climax," and Hospital Sunday, December 26.

The building and grounds committee of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, at a meeting Monday night, reported favorably on the proposition to instal an electric lighting plant at the hospital. An investigation by experts shows that such a plant would mean a saving of between $500 and $1,000 a year, covering the expense of lighting and heating. However, as it would cost about $4,000 in instal such a plant, it was decided inadvisable to begin work this year. It is hoped that the improvement will be possible in the near future.

The board decided to prepare and distribute in the various churches of the city a circular giving interesting facts about the hospital, acquainting the people with what has been done and what is proposed. This will be done for "Hospital Sunday," December 26, when the annual offering is received for the hospital.

Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow and Dr. N. W. Currie were appointed clinical assistants for the balance of the present hospital year, upon the recommendation of the medical board.

It was reported that over 200 tickets have already been sold for the Charity Ball to be held Friday night, December 31. Attention was called to the fact that "The Climax," with Effingham Pinto in the cast would be presented at the Plainfield theatre that night as an added attraction. Many of those going to the theatre will attend the ball afterwards.

The board appointed Dr. Frederick J. Hughes, a member of the medical board and an assistant in the department of medicine and surgery, house physician in charge of the tuberculosis pavilion. It was also decided by resolution to direct the managing committee of the hospital to confer with the executive committee of the tuberculosis society so that some satisfactory arrangements can be made for keeping accounts, showing the expense of managing the tuberculosis pavilion.

The members thought it best to explain the exact relation between the hospital and tuberculosis work. Last spring the hospital authorities were earnestly requested by the tuberculosis society to permit the erection of a pavilion on the hospital grounds as an experiment for a definite period of about one year. The society agreed to build and equip the pavilion complete and turn it over to the hospital with the understanding that the hospital should have entire control and management of the pavilion and entire care of the patients.

The society was to have the right, however, to nominate the patients to be treated in the pavilion, and agreed to provide all necessary funds for the operation and management of the pavilion, so long as it remained on the hospital grounds. In other words, while the funds for operating the pavilion are entirely provided by the tuberculosis society, the management and operation is under the sole control of the hospital.

These conditions were entirely agreeable to the tuberculosis society, which felt that the hospital could better undertake such management than the society. The hospital governors felt it their duty to undertake the work, being interested in everything that pertains to the welfare of Plainfield and the health of its citizens. Of course, the society owns the pavilion, although located on the hospital grounds. The board expressed great satisfaction over the fact that it is able to lend its aid.

A large audience listened with pleasure to the fine concert given in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium by the association orchestra last night and applauded the various numbers on a lengthy program to the limit. Miss Bertha Van Nuise Willis sang charmingly two group songs and made a decidedly favorable impression. She was particularly pleasing in Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me," followed by "I Love You," by Schultz.

The orchestra under the direction of Martin A. Korff acquitted itself with commendable work and was very clever in Jungmann's quintet for violins, flute, clarionette and piano, played by G. Spier, E. Faber, W. Sampson, J. McNabb and C. E. Spier. Herbert B. Smith, accompanied on the piano by Miss Elsie L. Knowlton played exceedingly well a 'cello solo, a romance in F by Ball.

Miss Marienscheck was severely bitten on the right hand and the wounds were cauterized by Dr. F. J. Hughes.

Dr. Hughes suggested that the police notify the owner of the dog to keep the animal chained up for a period of ten days so that it may be determined whether it has rabies.

CREW'S SUPERSTITION DELAYS CLARK FUNERAL

The body of J. Andrew Clark, formerly of Plainfield, but who died in Kingston, Jamaica, December 1, did not arrive in New York yesterday on the Princess Augustus Wilhelm, as expected, but instead it is due to arrive on one of the Red D line steamers in New York on Sunday night. V. W. Nash, Jr., who is the executor of the Clark estate has received a cablegram from the American consul that the body was sent on the Hamburg-American Line steamer, but late yesterday afternoon he received another cablegram from the consul explaining that it had been sent on another steamer and would arrive in New York Sunday night.

Inquiry brought forth the information that after it had been decided to send the body on the Princess Augusta Wilhelm, the captain of the steamer refused to allow it to be taken aboard, explaining that his crew would not make the trip if this was permitted. Accordingly, the body was left at Kingston to be placed aboard another steamer

Mr. Nash has met with many obstacles in his efforts to have Mr. Clark's body and effects brought home. He gave the American consul explicit instructions in a cablegram to have the body sent in a hermetically sealed casket and at the least possible expense. Instead of this, he received a bill from the Kingston undertaker for $400, and was informed that an iron casket had been used, as a metallic casket was not available. Mr. Nash says when Mr. Clark died he had on his person a little over $400 in United States Express Company money orders, but as they were not endorsed, could not be collected. He is of the opinion that the Kingston undertaker was determined to get about all of Mr. Clark's ready cash for his work

Before Mr. Clark died he gave instructions to have his body and personal effects sent to Mr Nash. The American consul wrote Mr. Nash that he would comply with the request, provided he forwarded to him a copy of the probate will, but otherwise he could not follow out the instructions. This further complicates matters, the lawyer says.

Undertaker George Cole was at the Hamburg-American Line pier in New York yesterday waiting the arrivial of the steamer on which the body was supposed to be. He spent several hours there, only to learn that the body would not reach New York until Sunday night No arrangements for the funeral will be made until the body reaches Plainfield.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION AGAINST WHITE PLAGUE BEGUN HERE WHEN DISTINGUISHED MEN SPEAK

Dr. James Miller, Homer Folks and Dr. S. Adolphus Knopf Lecture and Paper by Bishop Mc Faul is Read by Father Powers.

Several hundred people were in attendance and applauded heartily the speakers at the mass meeting held in the High School auditorium last night under the auspices of the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis. Right Rev. Dr. James A. McFaul was too ill to be present, so his secretary, Rev. John Powers, read the bishop's paper.

Speeches were made by Dr. James Miller, who is connected with the tuberculosis clinic of Bellevue Hospital, New York; Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church; Homer Folks, secretary of the N. Y. State Charities Aid Association, and Dr. S. Adolphus Knopf, who is connected with the New York City Health Department.

The speakers were introduced by the president of the local society, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace P. E. church, who presided at the meeting.

Bishop McFaul's paper was interesting from the array of facts which it presented the work of his church during many centuries in connection with the establishing of hospitals all over the world. The Catholic church began this work during the Middle Ages and has continued up to now creating and maintaining through its various religious orders a system of help to the sick. He said it was due to the work of Pope Innocent III that the modern hospital is due. The hospital which was modeled after the great Montpelier hospital in Paris, is still standing near St. Peter's at Rome.

St. Bartholomew's, in London, is another monument to the indefatigable work of the Catholic societies and from these two has emanated the work which now concerns the world at large.

Bishop McFaul's speech was in part as follows:

"The Bishop of Fano in Italy has issued a circular letter directing the priests of his diocese to carry out the following regulations: (1). In every church the floor must be regularly cleaned with sawdust, saturated with a strong sublimate solution. This thorough cleansing should take place particularly after holidays, when great masses of the people have visited the church. (2). Every week all ordinary chairs and confessional chairs must be thoroughly cleaned with moist rags. (3). The grate of the confessionals must be washed every week with lye and then polished.

"Now if the Christian churches all over the world, and all those who are interested in the welfare of humanity would engage in this campaign—the campaign of the education of the masses, and a campaign of the eradication of the great white plague, it would not be very many years before we would have its terible ravages under control.

"I have followed the example of my brother Bishop in Italy, and I have issued a pamphlet entitled: 'Tuberculosis, Its Prevention and Relief.' In this way I have endeavored to instruct my priests and the 150,000 people under my charge on the nature of consumption and the means to be adopted against it. I have even gone further than having the pamphlet read in all the churches for I have purchased a large farm on a mountain a few miles out of Trenton contiguous to railroad and trolley, on which I intend to erect a modern sanitarium with adjoining shacks for the treatment of incipient cases. I am also one of the honorary vice-presidents of the New Jersey Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis. Lately his Excellency, Governor Fort appointed me a member of the State Tuberculosis Commission, of which I have the honor to be chairman.

"So you see, the Catholic church in New Jersey is striving to do her part in the battle which is being waged against this disease.

"Let me detain you a little longer. In describing the necessity of this campaign, consumption or tuberculosis has long afflicted the human race. It deserves, from the number of its victims to be called the disease of the masses. A great disaster like the recent earthquake in Italy arouses the sympathy of the world, and millions of dollars pour in for relief, yet the ravages of tuberculosis are so extensive and so unceasing that the destruction brought about in a few seconds by the gigantic forces of nature sinks into comparative insignificance. It has been estimated that there are between one hundred and one hundred and fifty thousand deaths every year from consumption in the United States. In New Jersey during last year there were 3,749 deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis alone. I may observe, here, that although tuberculosis and consumption are frequently employed as interchangeable terms, they do not convey exactly the same meaning. Tuberculosis is the seed which ordinarily ends in the production of consumption.

"Consumption has been defined as a disease caused by the growth of certain micro-organisms in the tissues of our bodies. These micro-organisms grow in us, much in the same way as wheat, timothy and clover grow in a field. It is a complication of diseases or we should say rather a mixture of diseases, and that picture of human suffering, distress and bodily decay known as consumption, has received its name from one of its most striking symptoms, waste of the body.

"Dr. Koch, of Berlin, discovered the cause of tuberculosis, viz.: The tubercle bacillus. The word bacillus means a little rod, and as the tubercle bacillus is rod-shaped this term has been applied to it. It is a small parasite belonging to the vegetable kingdom, and is the specific cause of all tuberculosis. It gradually destroys the lungs by associating with other micro-organisms, which produce ulceration and generate certain poisons which result in consumption properely so-called.

"The bacillus is propagated by fission or self-division. The spores resemble small seeds and are contained in the tubercle. The mode of propagation by fission is very interesting. Each bacillus contracts in the middle and divides into two parts. The rapidity of this process may be conceived when we learn that the progeny of one bacillus may be multiplied into many millions during twenty-four hours. (No race suicide).

"It will be unnecessary for me to trespass further on the knowledge which it is the office of the specialist to disseminate, further than to say that to prevent consumption two things are required, the removal of the source of contagion and the removal of predisposing causes. When we take into consideration that these means must be made effective on the masses of society, we readily conclude that success can only be obtained through the aid of a wise government, skillful physicians and an intelligent people.

Until recent years it was thought that a consumptive should be kept in a warm, close room, but now we are certain that he ought to have plenty of fresh air, sunlight, nourishing food, and in some cases light exercise.

"I should emphasize the fact that consumption is pre-eminently a house disease. Therefore, it is reasonable to expect that the contagion will abound wherever the consumptive dwells.

"It has been observed that tuberculosis is very prevalent in certain localities. Indeed, it may be said that because careless patients have resided in certain houses for a long time, or because the soil on which they had been erected or the modes of construction favorable that the infection always exists in those places. When the infection cannot otherwise be satisfactorily exterminated these buildings should be pulled down. As disinfection is a very difficult operation, it can, for the most part, be performed efficiently only by experts. Hence, wherever possible, disinfection should be the work of the board of health.

"The church can be of great assistance in this campaign, first by educating the people to a knowledge of the disease and the proper methods of its prevention; secondly, in a thorough cleansing of all religious, educational and charitable institutions under her control; thirdly, by the erection of sanitoriums and the employment of capable nurses.

"Finally, no disease perhaps is more deceptive in its duration than consumption. It may terminate fatally in two weeks, or it may cover many years. When the disease is rapidly undermining the system, the patient has a severe cough, night sweats and weakness, the clergyman should be called in, because death may occur suddenly. Here is where the clergyman as the minister of the church can do great good, for his ministrations will be productive of JUSTICE VOORHEES SITS IN HIS HOME TOWN.

Justice Willard P. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, presided at the opening of the Middlesex County Court at New Brunswick yesterday, Justice Bergen being engaged trying a murder case in Union county. Justice Voorhees spoke of the pleasure at presiding where he had practised for so many years and meet the members of the bar with whom he had grown up.

In his charge to the jury he referred to the oath they took and also called attention to the law on excise matters. He laid particular stress on illegal sales of liquor without a license, and on Sunday. Edwin Furman, of Sayreville, is foreman of the grand jury.

SCHOOLBOY ACCUSED OF FORGING TICKETS.

Jersey City, Dec. 15.—Robert Hurwitz, fifteen years old, of 190 Third street, this city, when arraigned before Judge Farmer in the First Criminal Court, was held in $500 bail for the grand jury, charged with forgery of Hudson and Manhattan Tunnel tickets. At the main office where the tickets for the day's business were checked up it was discovered that the Fourteenth street, New York, and Exchange Place Station, Jersey City, were the only stations receiving the spurious tickets. Only a few would appear each day.

Detectives were placed at both of the stations yesterday morning and as each ticket was dropped into the chopper's box, it was closely scrutinized. Passengers wondered at the new game, and many asked questions, but received a blank look in return to their query. Hurwitz came along and dropped a ticket in the box. Special Detective Willhem spotted his ticket and immediately seized the youth. He was taken to the City Hall Station, and questioned by Captain Murphy.

Hurwitz is a pupil in the Stuyvesant School for Boys, in Manhattan. He admitted that he had forged the tickets with pen and ink. They were crude but effective until a watch was set for him.

Former Mansion Given to Borough.

Princeton, Dec. 15.—At the dedication of Thomson Hall, the gift of the late Mrs. Thomson-Swann to the borough, Mayor George McClellan, of New York; Professor William M. Sloane, of Columbia University, and Bayard Stockton were the speakers Saturday. The hall is located opposite Princeton Inn. It was formerly a mansion, built in 1825 by Commodore Stockton for his niece. In his address Mayor McClellan said it was at one of Mrs. Thomson's receptions in the mansion, while he was in college in 1886, that he wore his first dress coat. When the speechmaking ended, Francis Larkin, Jr., Professor Sloane and Bayard Stockton formally presented the building to the borough. It will hereafter be used as a public hall, for lectures and entertainments.

COHEN RISKS LIFE TO SAVE HORSES.

While trying to rescue three horses from a burning barn in Bond street, near First, Elizabeth, at 11 o'clock last night, Julius Cohen, a grocer, was burned about the limbs and body. He was removed to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital. Three horses were burned. Two of them are dead, while the third will be shot to end its suffering. Cohen is a member of the firm of Cohen Bros., grocers and butchers, at 202 First street.

The flames started mysteriously and had gained considerable headway in a short space of time. Cohen, on discovering the blaze, rushed to the barn, and, ignoring the rapidly-spreading flames, dashed to the stalls. He was overcome, but was rescued.

The barn was partially destroyed. This is the third fire within eight hours, two of which resulted in injuries to three persons.

Dying Mother's Appeal Vain.

The recent death of Mrs. Mary L. When Mrs. Eberwein saw death was threatening her, she advertised in several cities for her daughter to come see her before she died, but no trace could be found of the missing woman.

STATE DENTISTS DON'T REGISTER ANNUALLY.

Trenton, Dec. 15.—The State Board of Registration and Examination in Dentistry has submitted to Governor Fort a report outlining the work accomplished during the past year. At the meeting of the board in December, 1908, eleven candidates for licenses were examined, and at the meeting last July there were sixty candidates.

The board has made every effort to compel practitioners to observe the provisions of the law requiring the filling in and signing of an annual registration blank, but notwithstanding all that has been done about half the blanks sent out have not been returned.

Unless wholesale proceedings in court are instituted the board sees no way to compel compliance with this section of the law. The report outlines the prosecutions which have been conducted by the attorney-general's office during the year. These included criminal proceedings against three dentists in Jersey City, two in Paterson, two in New Brunswick and one in Newark.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will hold a box social on Friday night at the chapel.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Regarding the national championships it seems to be conceded that one of the three will be voted to the Fox Hills Golf Club at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association on January 21. About Boston the opinion is that the Country Club, Brookline, will receive either the amateur or open championship. The preference is for the amateur, as it has never been held on a Boston course. The Lesley cup matches are to be at a Boston links this fall and the Massachusetts amateurs expect to make a good showing.

Will Anderson, who has won more open championship medals in this country than any professional, writes from the St. Augustine Country Club that he will be near Manhattan next season whether he gets a club hereabouts or not.

Of the changes for the betterment of the game needed at Van Cortlandt Park the most important one is a nine hole course for beginners, so as to bar them from the full course until they are up to some fixed standard. As it is now they mar the turf *by their slaffed iron shots and de*lay the progress of competent players by their slowness.

No player should be allowed on the main course if a practice course is opened who cannot do the eighteen holes in at least 110 strokes. A professional greens keeper and relief putting greens are also needed. Regarding the official there is no way to hire one except under the title of park foreman. Tom Bendelow and his successor, Val Flood, were so rated when they were the Van Cortlandt professionals.

There is no need of a professional there now, for several who are good instructors in the game make the course their headquarters. But the public course has never had a greens keeper competent and with the authority to direct the workmen. An expert could do wonders with the turf at Van Cortlandt. For instance he would get the worm casts off the putting greens by systematic use of a worm eradicator and do other things that would suggest themselves.

The course is played over by so many and is so valuable a help to public health that Mayor Gaynor may make a special effort to improve the playing conditions—at least the golfers are to petition him to do so—and also to keep an eye on the care of the greens at the Pelham Bay and Forest Park courses.

EDITOR HARDEN SUES EX-WIFE'S HUSBAND.

New York, Dec. 15.—Percival L. Harden, proprietor and editor of The Club Fellow, a weekly paper, appeared Monday in the Supreme Court to press his suit against William T. Hoops, a young broker, from whom he is asking $150,000 damages for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections. Hoops married Mrs. Harden four hours after her divorce decree was signed in Chicago.

Hoops' reply to the charge of the editor is as follows: "Since the year 1905 Maude Harden did not have any love or affection for the plaintiff which could in any way be alienated by the defendant or by any one else."

Harden's presence in the court yesterday was in behalf of his application to Justice McLean for the appointment of a commission to take the deposition of bookkeepers at the Curley Hotel, Allenhurst, N. J.; the Hathaway Inn, Deal Beach, N. J., and certain lawyers in Chicago. He asserted that all of these people will be able to aid him by their testimony in establishing the relations which existed between his divorced wife and her present husband before her second marriage.

The Chicago lawyers whom Harden desires to examine are Alman W. Balkley, Edward E. Grey and Claire E. More. These attorneys, he claims, will be able to show that Hoops furnished the money by which his divorced wife paid for the litigation that freed her from him.

200 VETERANS ENTERED KEARNY HOME IN YEAR.

The annual report of the New Jersey Home for Disabled Soldiers at Kearny shows that at the close of the fiscal year on October 31 there were 593 inmates in the home. At the close of the preceding year there were 575 inmates and 200 were admitted during the year, making the total number of beneficiaries 775. Ninety-eight inmates were discharged and eighty-four died. Of those who died seventy-six were Civil War veterans, whose average age was between seventy-one and seventy-two years.

The financial statement of the home shows total receipts amounting to $95,092.13. The principal expenditures were as follows: Administrative expenses, $19,085; table supplies, $33,208; clothing and clothing material, $8,113; heat, light and power, $6,588; repairs, $7,202. Cost of maintenance per capita was $180.55. Of the inmates cared for during the year 459 served in New Jersey regiments and 127 in New York regiments.

118 competive examinations have been held, at which 2,290 applicants have been examined. Of these 668 were placed on the eligible lists, while 1,146 failed to pass examinations and were consequently rejected. The remaining 45 are yet to be passed upon.

Since the beginning of the operation of the law there have been 2,593 to all classes of positions in the service of the State and of the municipalities.

One of the difficulties encountered by the commission has been that in some examinations there has been a dearth of applicants and the commission has been embarrassed to devise a suitable eligible list. Concerning the situation the report says: "This state of affairs has almost invariably been due to the smallness of the salary paid, or to the undesirable nature of the work and the commission has at times been unjustly censured for not providing candidates for appointment, when the real fault lay in the places themselves, or in the appointing officers or those who fix the compensation and the amount and character of the services required. Confirmation of this opinion has recently been given at the State Hospital for the Insane at Trenton, where suspicion has arisen that inmates have been ill-treated by attendants and where the medical director has expressed a wish that he might be empowered to pay higher salaries so as to secure better and more permanent service. It seems highly desirable that sufficient salaries should be paid to make it possible to secure intelligent and humane care for the most helpless and pitiable wards of the State."

Referring to the complaint that the law gives State officers control of local appointments the report says that "no appointments whatever outside of its own offices are ever made, suggested or in anyaway controlled by the commission, save in the requirement that applicants shall, if possible, be taken from among the actual residents of the community which they are to serve and not be imported there from other communities, and in, of course, the fundamental requirement that they have shown themselves qualified for the places which they are to fill, the only preference being given to those whose qualifications are highest."

TEACH BOYS WAR GAME.

England's Purpose Is to Prepare Them for Conflict.

To teach the young idea how to shoot, ride and march—and above all, to "Look Out!" to be alert—such is the imperial program of the Boy Scouts of England. Fifteen thousand of them recently mobilized on the archery ground of the Crystal Palace, London. They held contests in pioneering, signaling, ambulance work, camp craft, hurdle-making, swimming and life-saving. Major-General Baden Powell, Earl Roberts and the king have sent greetings and cheer to the boy warriors.

General Baden-Powell's message to the "recruit" says:

"It is the simplest thing in the world to join the Boy Scouts. I want every boy between 10 and 18 to help this country by coming in touch with us.

"You all take the Scout's oath, that is, your promise, on your honor, three things, namely:

"1. To be loyal to God and the king.

"2. To help other people at all times.

"3. To obey the Scout law."

Two hundred thousand lads have been enrolled through the length and breadth of Britain. There are badges of merit and tests to win the badges. For the ambulance badge they learn to improvise a stretcher, fling a life-line, show the position of the main arteries and how bleeding may be stopped. For this badge the scout learns as much as a private of the Royal Army medical corps. Other badges with a strict regime are those for pioneering, signaling the seamanship.

The hidden purpose of the organization is to interest boys in war craft, to get their thoughts turned toward the army and imperial defense. It is all a part of the anti-German, Dreadnought big army program which has run over England with the speed and vigor of prairie fire. It is doubtful if modern educational leaders will approve of this return to the outworn motive of fear, which used to be so constantly played upon in childhood. Mr. Kipling, ever obediently tuneful to the demands of imperialism, has written a lyric for the boys.—Collier's.

Too Near the Pole.

"Omit, if you please, the first verse of the hymn," said the minister.

The congregation looked surprised.

"It mentions 'Greenland's icy mountains,'" explained the minister. "We cannot afford to introduce into this peaceful gathering any subject likely to lead to acrimonious debate."—Philadelphia Ledger.

TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN

resignation and consolation, and be assured that there is no one more deserving of sympathy than the poor consumptive."

Dr. James Miller, who followed Father Powers, complimented Plainfield and the Plainfielders on the start they have made in the work of establishing a pavilion where some preventive work can be done. He told of the things which are considered essential for the prevention of tuberculosis. To get the best results the people who are suffering should be taken from their present surroundings and brought into the environment of health which is provided by the free open air. If this preliminary step is taken ninety per cent. of those afflicted would get well.

The Sanitoria movement has spread all over the country and through the establishment of them it is hoped that tuberculosis will eventually be stamped out. The movement in this city, he said, should have the support of everyone. He made a strong plea for help for the extension of the work and compared the laggards in this respect with the men of the bread line in New York who had no other ambition than to get the bread which was doled out to them night after night. Dr. Miller was liberally applauded.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, in a brief speech made a most impressive appeal for help in the great cause which the Plainfield Society has taken up, and said that the Christmas spirit which is prevalent just now ought to move the hearts of all individuals to devote something to the work of helping.

The address of Hon. Homer Folks was a studied and masterly speech which carried conviction to his hearers and excited thoughts of the possibilities which lie within each individual to do something for somebody else.

"We are only superficially a Christian people. We are willing to do a little, but not much. We are shocked at the sudden approach of death, but do we feel it enough to prevent it coming to others? There are four hundred lives taken every day by consumption, yet we stand horror struck at a calamity like the recent coal mine disaster in Cherry Hill, Illinois. But the four hundred I have been telling about can be saved if you will only put your shoulders to the wheel and help.

"This work, of course, has marked limitations. The visits of nurses to the homes of the afflicted, physicians' splendid efforts and the care of the patients themselves will show the best results when attended by ordinary care."

Mr. Folks quoted some statistics which showed that only per cent of patients were "very careful," twelve per cent. ordinarily careful, and sixty-three per cent. careless, while twenty-three per cent. were grossly careless. These people must be educated up to the need of care in their personal habits.

Dr. S. Adolphus Knopf, the last speaker of the evening, gave the audience something to think about and did it in a very humorous way. He urged the necessity of instruction, the desirability of calling in competent physicians, leaving alone the scientific and Christian Science, told of the benefit derived from a health viewpoint from the presence of a sanatarium in a city and gave his reasons for believing that tuberculosis is not hereditary, but a predisposition to the disease possibly hereditary.

Dr. Knopf rapped patent medicines and the sure cure for consumption" advertisers and struck a blow for temperance all in one paragraph. The injudicious use of whiskey and other stimulants instead of being a remedy for the disease are a direct aid to its propagation. He said that to effect the best results, where the breadwinner of the family is afflicted the anxiety should be removed from him by proper and judicious care for those from whom he is removed. The true charitable work will begin here and will end with the cure and return of the well man to his family. Advice as to ventilation and other sanitary measures were also given by Dr. Knopf. The applause which followed his speech lasted so long that the doctor was obliged to bow his acknowledgements several times.

During the evening a considerable amount was realized for the society by the sale of Red Cross stamps.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob C. Butler, of Phillipsburg, celebrated their golden wedding Monday.

The annual meeting of the Mayors' League of Seashore Resorts will be held on February 6 at Cape May.

While roaming through the woods Sunday, Clayton Dubois and Richard Haines, of Millville, found the carcass of a large three-pronged buck in a thicket, where it had crawled after having been wounded by hunters.

The Trenton Board of Estimate at a meeting Monday evening in Mayor Madden's office adopted a resolution providing for the issuing of bonds aggregating $70,000 for the proposed addition to the William G. Cook School, in Cuyler avenue.

A week ago two young men drove hurriedly into the hotel yard at Mantua, hitched their team and took a car for Philadelphia. They told the hostler they would return at midnight. The team is still there, but the young men have not been seen.

While employes at Skinner & Son's cut glass works at Hammonton were moving glassware from another building to the stockroom they overloaded a large shelving, the supports gave way and the entire lot was precipitated to the floor, breaking every article into fragments. The loss is estimated at between $1,500 and $2,000.

Convicted on a charge of manslaughter in the killing of her husband, James Wood, colored, who was steward at the Camden Country Club, at Collingswood, Louisa Wood was Monday sentenced to one year in jail by Supreme Court Justice Garrison in Camden, the sentence to begin from the day she was convicted, on November 9.

At the meeting of the Hoboken Board of Fire Commissioners Monday night, F. H. Thornly, of 834 Willow avenue, complained that he lived on the top floor of a five-story flat house, and the fire escapes are so blocked by rubbish stored upon them that they cannot be used. Chief Engineer Dunn was instructed to make the fire escapes serviceable.

At a caucus of the majority members of the Camden Council at the city hall Monday night it was agreed to reappoint all the present officials whose terms expire January 1, with the exception of City Clerk Bradley, who will be succeeded by William D. Brown, former under-sheriff, and Commissioner of Streets Louis Mohrman, who will be succeeded by Alfred L. Sayers, director of the Board of Freeholders.

As though eviction for non-payment of rent were not trouble enough, Mrs. Marie Neilson was forced Monday night to see her twelve-year-old daughter run down by an ice wagon at Twenty-first and Federal streets, Camden. The child was injured and was cared for by Dr. Martindale. Mrs. Neilson was searching for a habitation while the storm beat furiously when her little girl got into the path of the heavy wagon and was run down.

Samuel G. Young, a Pennsylvania Railroad engineer, had his leg broken in a wreck at Raven Rock, on the Belvidere Division, Monday afternoon. Young was in charge of a light engine bound for Trenton, and was following an extra freight known as the "Buck Rabbit." Young, it is said, ran past a caution signal and struck the caboose of the train ahead of him. Young lives in Phillipsburg. He was removed to his home.

The Atlantic City police have started open warfare on young hoodlums of the resort following a vicious attack upon Colonel John A. Manz and Otto W. Manz, a hotel man, late Saturday night. The Manz brothers went to the rescue of an aged negro who had been set upon by a crowd of young men and were themselves badly beaten before the arrival of the police. Policemen who arrested two of the young men declare that idle youths have banded for the purpose of making trouble and orders have been issued to make general arrests.

The contractor who has the job of digging out Marshelder Channel, across Tuckerton Bay, to connect deep water with the already dredged Tuckerton Creek, is having a serious time of it. First, he found that the dredge and barges he brought from Delaware were too heavy of draft and couldn't be got to the scene of the work. Then he secured a new outfit, and while coming up the beach from Delaware Breakwater was caught in a storm and lost two scows. However, the Secretary of the Treasury has asked Congress for $30,000 more to dredge Tuckerton waters, so Tuckerton business men are hoping for the best.

Skates After Surf Bath.

Asbury Park, Dec. 15.—For several days Dr. William S. Cummings, a local resident, has been enjoying a skate on Fletcher Lake after his usual daily bath in the ocean. After disporting about ten minutes in the surf he dresses, buckles on his skates and warms up on the ice. Dr. Cummings was formerly athletic instructor at Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania.

ORDERING SUPPLIES by TELEPHONE

THE retail merchant's telephone serves not only as a salesman, but also as a purchasing agent.

When a merchant finds that he is going to run out of a line of goods, he calls up the wholesaler or factory and not only orders a new stock, but comes to an agreement on the price and the time of delivery.

The unexpected needs of his customers can be met with the least possible delay.

If the merchant cannot find what he wants in town, the Long Distance Service of the Bell System brings him into immediate communication with other cities and other markets.

WANT STATE BOARD TO SHOW WATER CONTRACTS.

As a corollary to the fight which the Somerville Common Council is making against the efforts of the Somerville Water Company to lay a thirty-six-inch water main through Cliff street, a resolution was adopted Monday night instructing James L. Griggs, counsel for the Council, to make complaint to Governor Fort because of the refusal of Charles Folwell, secretary of the State Water Commission, to permit counsel to get copies of certain contracts filed with the commission by the water company. These contracts show, it is understood, that it was the purpose of the company to furnish water to various towns all the way to Elizabeth, while the water company in their application for an injunction to prevent the town authorities from interfering with the laying of the main had held that they only wanted to improve the service for Somerville.

Mr. Griggs states that Mr. Folwell, after consultation with Foster M. Voorhees, president of the water commission, refused to let him have a copy of the contracts.

There is talk by the Common Council now of establishing a municipal plant. The Somerville Water Company refuses to furnish a guaranteed pressure and until they do this the Council seems determined to refuse their application to lay a thirty-six inch main through the borough. The borough is in great need of more water pressure for fire purposes and the company claim that it can be supplied by the large main. The Council wants a guarantee that the desired pressure will be furnished before water is allowed to pass through the borough to other towns beyond.

Little for Lincoln Park Creditors.

Camden, Dec. 15.—When argument was heard before Vice-Chancellor Leaming here Monday for the discharge of the receiver for the Lincoln Park Consolidated Transportation Company, which operated a park down the river some years ago, it developed that there is enough to pay just about one per cent. to the creditors. The matter has been before the Chancery Court for ten years or more. Decision was reserved for one week.

Delay High School Project.

Hackensack, Dec. 15.—After a lengthy discussion on the subject of a new High School the Board of Education of this city, at its regular meeting Monday night, decided to lay the matter over until next spring. The proposed new High School, it is estimated, will cost about $285,000.

CHAPTER VIII.

CRAWFORD was a man of taste and discrimination in some things at least. His apartments showed this. They were furnished with quiet sumptuousness and an eye to comfort.

Crawford had just gone out when Nora called. By the time the cab had rolled from the theater district and up the west side of the city to the house in West End avenue where Mallory's partner lived her excitement had cooled considerably, and with it her courage had fizzled out. She had never been to Crawford's house before, although her curiosity had more than once almost induced her to accept his invitations, given pressingly. She felt that she was not doing right, and when the elevator boy had let her off his car on the floor on which Crawford's apartments were situated her first impulse was to run downstairs again. Twice she extended her finger to press the button of the electric bell at the door and twice she drew back, afraid.

What would he think of her? She lamented helplessly that she had spent the money won for her companions and got herself into this predicament. Patsy's words buzzed in her ears:

"Go to his rooms! Are you crazy? Ain't you got no guimption at all?"

The elevator was speeding upward again. The passengers on it were talking and laughing. They might be coming to Mr. Crawford's. Mr. Crawford himself might be coming with friends. Thoroughly terrified now, she dashed for the stairs, descended to the first bend, and shrank into the corner behind the car as it shot past her. It did not stop at Crawford's landing. She leaped upstairs again and, desperate, pressed the button of the apartment bell. Her heart beat so violently as she heard the muffled "dring" and whited, that it almost suffocated her.

In a few moments the door opened and the staid Rogers appeared. Nora had expected that Crawford would respond to the bell, and she was taken aback.

"I—I'm afraid I—I've made a mistake. I was looking for Mr. Crawford's," she stammered.

"This is Mr. Crawford's," said Rogers suavely. "Won't you walk in, madam?"

He effaced himself and, traversing a short entrance hall, she found herself in Crawford's "den."

Rogers advanced an easy chair for her near a fire of imitation logs fed by gas that blazed cheerfully in the fireplace, and she sat down.

"Mr. Crawford will be here in a few minutes, madam," he said respectfully. "He is at his club, but he told me to communicate with him if anybody called. Whom shall I tell him is waiting?"

Nora hesitated.

"Just tell him that a lady wishes to see him and it's very important," she directed.

"Very well, madam," said Rogers, with a bow and an almost imperceptible smile.

He went out, closing the door behind him, and called up Crawford at the Athenaeum club from a telephone in the hall.

"Lady here wishes to see you, sir," he said when Crawford responded.

"Yes? What is her name?" he inquired.

"She didn't give me any name—just told me to tell you that she wanted to speak with you and that it was important."

"Important, eh? What does she look like—old, young?"

"Young and very pretty, sir. She's dressed for dinner or the opera, I think. Leastways, she hasn't any hat."

"That so? Well, ask her to be so kind as to wait one minute. I'll come up right away."

Rogers conveyed the message to Nora, put a newspaper and a book on a small table beside her and withdrew.

Nora, left alone, began to look around her. There was an air of luxury about the place that was pleasing. The rug beneath her feet was thick and soft. With the red paper on the walls it recalled one of the fashionable hostelries on Fifth avenue where he had taken her to lunch. In the center of the room was a square table of ebony, somewhat massive, with ornately carved legs. An elegant electric reading lamp upon it connected with a chandelier above. Scattered around the lamp were novels and a few of the latest magazines, mostly having to do with sport in some shape or form. On the smaller table beside which she was seated, a round one, was a delicately chased vase of silver in which were some American Beauty roses. Evidently they had been there for three or four days, for they were drooping and faded. Heavy double curtains, red also, were looped apart at the two windows, disclosing other long hanging curtains of cream lace.

A handsome bookcase beside a door opposite the lounge extended from the door to the corner of the room at right angles to the mantelpiece. It was filled with books, partly French, bound and in paper covers, packed in wherever there was room for them.

From the bookcase her eyes wandered to the door. She wondered where it led to. Then she walked to the mantelpiece and looked at the portraits, framed and unframed. The originals of some she knew at least by sight and name. She took in her hand the portrait of one woman, unknown to her and very beautiful, which stood in a shining silver frame, obviously a new one. Something was written across it in a fine, delicate scrawl. She held it to the light and read:

The portrait impressed her disagreeably. She was vaguely jealous of this beautiful unknown, and she replaced the photograph rather impatiently and roughly. As she did so she caught sight in the mirror of her own face, all farded and rouged and powdered. She uttered a little cry of dismay. It seemed to her that she looked hideous. Mr. Crawford must never see her like that; she must wash her face somehow. But how? Where? There was nothing with which she could do it there, not even a glass of water. She wondered whether she could ask the valet to bring her one on the pretext that she was thirsty. She went to the door leading to the hall, but the man was not to be seen, and she did not like to call him. Suppose she were to try the other door? She went to it, but hesitated. She was afraid to open it. Yet something had to be done. Mr. Crawford would arrive at any minute—he might at that very moment be on the elevator. She looked around in perplexity, not knowing what to do, and noticed the roses. Immediately a happy thought struck her. Here was water! Quickly she went to the vase, but stopped again nonplused. With what was she going to wipe her face? She had no handkerchief in her stage dress. With febrile haste she searched the cloak, hoping against hope that there might be one there. The cloak, though sleeveless, had a pocket, but there was nothing in it save a little book of face powder paper. Her woman's wit came to her aid. She tore a large piece off her petticoat and, removing the roses, bathed and rubbed her face vigorously until not a vestige of the fards remained.

When he opened the door Crawford started with astonishment at seeing who his visitor was.

"Well, well! This is a pleasant surprise, Nora. You have said 'no' so often that I had long ago given up hope of seeing you here," he exclaimed, advancing toward her with both hands outheld. Unthinkingly she extended her own, and he saw that her arms were bare. Her action also parted the cloak sufficiently to reveal that she was in deep decollete.

"How beautiful you look!" he added, with genuine enthusiasm.

Nora, in great confusion, hastily withdrew her hands and pulled the cloak about her.

"It was awfully good of you to come," he continued. "How did you manage to get away so early?"

"I didn't go on tonight. I—I wanted to see you," she replied.

"Not half so much as I wanted to see you, I am sure. Come, sit down and make yourself comfortable," he urged, reaching for a cushion on the sofa and placing it against the back of the easy chair in which she had sat before. "I want you to feel that you are at home whenever you do me the honor to pay me a visit. And now that you have come once I hope you will come often. Let me take your cloak."

"Oh, no, thank you, Mr. Crawford," she refused. "I can't stay, really. I've got to get back to the theater right away."

"Never mind about that—that'll be all right," he said reassuringly. "They won't make any trouble. I stand pretty well at the Long Acre, and I'll square it for you."

"It isn't the theater, it's— The fact is I'm in great trouble," she explained.

"In great trouble? Dear me! What's the matter?"

"I must have that note tonight."

"What note?"

"The note I—I—signed—the note for $300. Father and mother are in front. I dare not see them unless I have it. As soon as I learned they were there I was so frightened, so upset, that I came away without stopping a minute, just as I was, to get it."

Crawford looked grave.

"Do they know about it?" he asked anxiously.

"Oh, no," she answered. She was on the point of telling him that she had confessed everything to Patsy, but she thought better of it and refrained.

His geniality returned immediately. He asked:

"Then if nobody knows anything about it what is there to be afraid of?"

"I'm afraid of everything. I'm a forger! Why did you make me a forger? I didn't know. Oh, I'm horribly afraid."

"Whew!" he whistled. "A forger! That's a hard word. I wouldn't take such a tragic view of it if I were you."

She sank into the chair and covered her face with her hands. They were pretty hands, despite her apprenticeship at housework at home, and her arms were white and well molded. He noted every detail of them with the critical appreciation of an expert and marveled at their perfection of form. He saw, further, that tears were trickling between her fingers. The sight caused him real concern, and he was moved to pity and tenderness. He took one hand gently from her face, held it between his own hands and pressed his lips to the tips of the fingers.

"Don't cry," he entreated. "Don't do that."

"To think I could do such a thing!" she sobbed. "To think—oh, I have been very wicked and very foolish!"

(To be Continued).

HOME NEWS.

Of Interest to Everyone in Plainfield.

In every newspaper in the country you will read statements made by people living in out-of-the-way places, who are supposed to have been cured or derived great benefit from some wonderful remedy or "cure-all." But here in Plainfield we only publish statements made by Plainfield people—the testimony of your friends, neighbors and fellow-townsmen.

Mrs. C. Rosseter, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe backaches and occasional attacks of rheumatism. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from disordered kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time I have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of this preparation and I am soon feeling good. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

PLAINFIELD ELKS BEAT NEW YORKERS EASILY

The crack bowling team from Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., went to New York, last night, and showed the five from New York Lodge, No. 1, how to bowl. The Plainfielders not only captured the highest team average to date, but Johnny Campbell walked off with the highest individual score for the season, putting up a 254 in the last game. He was going remarkably well, having eight straight strikes, when in the ninth frame he had a wide open split, which spoiled his chances for a phenomenal score.

All of the Plainfielders bowled well and put up good scores, many of them being over 190 mark. The New York Elks captured the first game by a margin of seven pins, but after that they were not in it for a minute. They lost heart over the steady work of the visitors and not once did they have a chance to win out. The Plainfielders were given a hearty reception and were treated royally. This match was one in the series being conducted by the Elks which is arousing much interest. The scores:

LOCAL RED MEN ROUT WESTFIELD'S WOODMEN

The Red Men pin knights rolled like champions in the Fraternal bowling tournament on Johnny Campbell's alley last evening and won three games straight from the Woodmen of the World team from Westfield. The blow was an entirely unexpected one for the visitors, but they could not hold the pace that the Indian quintet set. The result of the clean up enabled the followers of the Tomahawk to place themselves tie with the Ponies team for first place.

In the opening contest the visitors did their best work with a tally of 835, losing by but 24 pins, but after that the locals proved too strong with their scores of 950 and 895. Myers bowled in fine form with 183, 216 and 191 for an average of 196, but Captain Nash led with his 176, 192 and 236 for a grand average of 201. The scores:

THE NURSERY SCREEN.

A nursery screen, fitted with the many articles which a mother needs in caring for her baby, may, of course, be bought, the price being determined by the limits of the purse. It is possible, however, to fashion such a screen at home at no great outlay of time or money. A member of the family handy with tools can easily make a simple screen frame of pine. Such home talent being lacking, a clothes horse of the required dimensions may be utilized. This frame should have three leaves joined by hinges, so that the leaves will fold at almost any angle. The best measurements for the panels are to have the meach three feet him and eighteen inches in width. Each pair of uprights should be connected by three parallel pieces of wood, one at the top, one at the bottom and one half-way between.

The framework should be given at least one coat of white paint, and then one of white enamel. It is a simple matter to keep the enamled wodwork white.

Cover the outside of the screen, whether a regular frame or an improvised one is used, with some pretty cretonne. Select a small figure and one that harmonizes with the furnishings of the room in which the screen is to be placed. This covering may be tacked on with small brass-headed tacks.

The inside of the screen is covred with white oilcloth such as is used for the top of the kitchen table. Carefully cut a piece to fit each panel allowing ample for turning and tacking on the frame work. Before tacking on the oilcloth, it is well to assemble all the articles which are to be put in the pockets of the screen; otherwise it would be a little difficult to make the pockets of the right size.

On one side of the side panels, at the top, have two pockets about four inches deep. One of these will hold the sponge or wash cloth and the other the soap box, the powder box, a bottle of sweet oil and tubes of vaseline, etc. At the bottom of the same panel, pockets a little deeper will do for the face towels and flannel bands.

At the top of the centre panel have a pincushion, liberally supplied with safety pins of assorted sizes. A strip of the oilcloth should be stitched into placec lose by with openings for the brush and comb and a small box of toothpicks wound with absorbent cotton to clean the baby's ears and nose.

A deeper pocket across the bottom will hold the bath towel and various articles of clothing.

The third panel should have small pockets where the mother may tuck any of the many little things which are needed occasionally, and, when needed, should be right at hand. The bottle of boric acid water, the box of tiny linen squares for washing out the mouth and eyes, and little celluloid toys which are sure to amuse the baby when splashing in his tub, may be placed in pockets on this panel.

The pockets made and stitched where they belong, the lining should next be tacked in. Now the screen is ready for instant use. Any mother who has one of these screens will find it of the greatest convenience. With the cretonne covered side exposed to view, one thinks of the screen as designed only to shut off light or a possible draft from the baby slumberer.

The Lost Dream.

I searched through all the garden-close,
I questioned every budded rose,
Asked of each buzzing bumble bee,
Plead with the silver willow tree.

But where it vanished none could say—
The dream that I lost yesterday—
Till, when he heard my wistful signs,
Love showed it me within his eyes!
—Puck.

The Reason.

First Passenger (at suburban station.)—I wonder why we are making such a long stop here?

Second (a traveler of experience)—I presume it is because no one happens to be trying to catch the train.

Yes, He Is.

Little Fred—Are you a lawyer like papa?

Dr. Smith—Oh, no; I'm a physician.

Little Fred—Then you are the man who goes to see sick people before they die.

PUT OUT BLAZE AT 'FAIR

Prompt Action of Patrolman Prevents Serious Loss at West Front St. Store.

THE WATCHMAN INTOXICATED.

The prompt action of Patrolman Birmingham in smothering a fire which had started in the rear of the store known as "The Fair," on West Front street, last night at 10:45 probably prevented a serious fire.

Patrolman Birmingham, while passing the store, noticed smoke issuing from beneath the cracks of the front door and finding the door unlocked pushed his way in. At the rear of the store he found a hammock blazing merrily away and a lighted gas stove immediately underneath it. He extinguished the blaze with a pail of water and reported the blaze to headquarters.

The store has been closed by an order of the United States District Court and was in charge of Thomas Badger, a watchman. It was learned that Badger had been indulging too freely in intoxicants recently and was observed in an intoxicated condition at 9:30 on West Front street not very far away from the store. His actions are under investigation by Chief Doane, of the fire department.

"The Fair" has been closed since the concern recently went into bankruptcy.

Dental Experts to Speak Here.

The Plainfield Dental Society announces that early in the New Year, Dr. Edward Kirk, dean of the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Capon, also of Philadelphia, a specialist in porcelain work, will address the society.

EARTH CENTRE SOLID, SAYS MR. MORRISON

Representative Howell has filed with the National Geographic Society at Washington, D C., the organization which has been investigating the claims of Peary and Cook as discoverers of the North Pole, a copy of a lecture of Thomas W. Morrison, formerly of this city and now of Asbury Park, on the origin of the North Pole. Mr. Morison is a man of literary abilities who has made some decidedly interesting scientific researches and he advances some new and novel ideas, which no doubt, will have due consideration by the members of the National Geographic Society.

In the lecture, which has been copyrighted by Mr. Morrison, he advances the belief that the earth is not a shell enclosing fire, as is commonly understood, but that the center of the earth is solid. His proofs, which are said to be new, are based upon the laws of chemistry, and it is claimed, take the subject out of the realms of doubt entirely. Many other interesting points are also brought out in the lecture.

Held a Christmas Social.

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a Christmas social was held in the parish house, last night. The program comprised vocal solos by Miss Elizabeth Forster, who responded to several encores; also songs by Charles Borden; recitations by Mrs. Borden. Mrs. Harry Long, organist of the church, presided at the piano. A feature was the dialect recitations and readings by Mrs. W. B. Grannatt, which brought the entertainment to a close. The success of the affair is due to Miss Forster.

TO LOCATE BRICK YARD

Syndicate May Build a Big Manufacturing Plant in East End.

SECURING OPTIONS ON LANDS.

Henry Jenkinson Representing South River and Perth Amboy Parties Inspects Sites.

Henry Jenkinson, representing capitalists who are interested in the manufacture of bricks at South River and Perth Amboy, has been in Plainfield for several weeks securing options on land near the Netherwood Fresh Air Home and on Cushing road with a view to establishing one of the biggest brick plants in the country. Experts have been testing the clay on the property in question and it is said that it is of a high quality.

The syndicate intends, if it locates here, to erect a plant capable of making 25,000,000 brick a year. Inquiry shows that during the past five years, fully 40,000,000 have been shipped here from all parts of the country to be used for construction purposes, and it is believed that the greater part of this trade can be kept here.

There are now only two local brick plants, the one operated by Ernest T. Hand on Leland avenue and the other by Rajotte at Dunellen. Several brick yards in the Netherwood section were abandoned years ago, because of the trouble in keeping out the water in the pits, but the new syndicate proposes to use hydraulic pumps for that purpose.

If the land can be secured for a reasonable price, it is likely that the plant will be erected so that it can be put in operation next spring. Another thing that has led the captialists to this city is the excellent shipping facilities.

WOMEN INCORPORATORS OF A LOCAL COMPANY.

The Boice-Runyon Company, of this city, has filed papers of incorporation in the offiee of County Clerk James C. Calvert at Elizabeth Tuesday. The concern, which is located at 238 Park avenue, has for its agent Hugh A. Todd. Its total authorized capital stock is $300,000, divided into 3,000 shares of the par value of $100 each.

The purpose of the corporation is to engage in the sale of lumber, coal and building material, feed, flour and grain. Under its charter it can engage in manufacturing pursuits, real estate and the erection and operation of mills and foundries.

Two of the incorporators are women. They are Sara R. Runyon and Anna E Boice. Hugh A. Todd is also an incorporator.

DR. VAN DYKE SPEAKS.

Gives Talk On Tennyson Before Large Audience.

The Friday Evening Club of Morristown met in the Lyceum Theatre last night at Morristown and before a large audience Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton, spoke upon "An Evening With Tennyson." His lecture on the life of the poet and his writings was interesting. A quartet, James Doolittle, Arthur Moss, Mrs. Joseph Hinchman and Miss Augusta Van Atta, with Mrs. Doolittle at the piano, rendered songs written by Tennyson, including the "Bugle Song," "Sweet and Low," "Ring Out Wild Bells" and "Crossing the Bar." Miss Van Atta sang as solos "Break, Break, Break," and "The Brook."

President Franklin B. Dwight presided and announced that the speaker at the January meeting will be Colonel S. S. McClure.

RESIGNS JOB TO START BUREAU OF MATRIMONY

Hezekiah Hand, the veteran Justice of the Peace, caused surprise this morning when he handed in his resignation as sergeant-at-arms to the District Court presided over by Judge William Newcorn. Judge Hand has contemplated this move for some time, but it was not believed that he would renounce his connection with the court which had given him something of a fame as a process server.

In speaking of the resignation this morning, Judge Hand said that the demands on his time made it imperative to relinquish either one thing or the other and he preferred to make people happy rather than sad. The reference to making "people happy" has to do with the Judge's habit of marrying couples who believe his system of payment is the one which should be adopted by all the marrying justices in the country as well as those who use the rites of the church in their ceremonies.

Justice Hand has been sergeant-at-arms of the District Court ever since its establishment, something over two years ago, and during that time he has joined together more than a hundred young couples to say nothing of those who are old. He believes his mission to be that of making people happy and in order to make it possible has determined to open a matrimonial bureau where those who are timid may be brought together and married in due legal form. He has already a list of twenty-four waiting clients, one of whom is a Plainfielder with money to buy all he needs and have a few dollars left when the "grim destroyer" comes around.

Another man, so the Judge says, is a rich fellow from down Somerville way who is tired of paying housekeepers to waste his substance in unlimited grocery and meat bills and who thinks it will be better to marry a woman who can and will care for him.

Judge Hand has not yet decided upon a location for his new bureau, but will soon issue cards announcing it and other information. The Judge's resignation is to take effect December 31.

JOHN SCHORB UP FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

John M. Schorb, of this city, was arraigned before Judge Atwater in the Orphans Court, Elizabeth, yesterday morning on contempt proceedings, and Judge Atwater gave him a severe reprimand for not obeying the mandate of the court.

Mr. Schorb is the executor under the will of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Schorb. Sometime ago Judge Atwater directed the executor to sell real estate to pay a legacy to Clara E. Scholle, a legatee under the will. Mr. Schorb failed to do so, although he did admit yesterday morning that he had advertised the property for sale.

Francis J. Blatz represented the legatee, and it was through his efforts that Mr. Schorb was summoned to court. Judge Atwater continued the proceedings two weeks, allowing Mr. Schorb sufficient time to sell the property.

TWO BOYS ARE KILLED BY AN ELECTRIC WIRE

Two boys were shocked to death by an electric wire on the Rahway Valley Railroad at Kenilworth last night. They are George and Joseph Adams, aged, respectively, fourteen and ten years. The yonger boy had clutched the wire, which had become displaced during the storm on Monday night and which received a deadly current from an overhead trolley wire. His hands were still clutching it when the body was found. George had evidently gone to the rescue of his brother, and his body lay as if he were reaching to aid the little fellow. His feet were on the wire and he reecived the shock in this way.

As yet no responsibility has been placed for the presence of the live wire.

COMRADES SURPRISE HIM

Old Friends Join John Burns in Celebrating Wedding Anniversary.

PRESENTATIONS ARE MADE.

An Excellent Dinner Feature of Happy Affair at the Hotel Kensington Last Night.

In honor of the twenty-sixth anniversary of his marriage, a number of Civil War veterans, members of Co. A, Fifteenth N. J. Vols., of which he was one, together with his wife, gave John Burns, proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, a happy surprise, last night, at the hotel. Unbeknown to Mr. Burns, his wife and friends planned a dinner and presentation.

Mr. Burns was seated in the hotel office early in the evening, when his wife asked him to go to the second floor and ascertain what was the matter with an electric light. During his absence, the company of relatives and friends to the number of about twenty, gathered in the dining-room and took seats about the table. When Mr. Burns returned he was invited to step inside the room, where he was greeted by his guests. After an exchange of hearty greetings all partook of an excellent dinner.

During the evening both Mr. and Mrs. Burns were congratulated by the company. A pleasing feature was the presentation of a handsome cut-glass water set to Mr. Burns on behalf of the veterans by Thomas Gregory, of this city. Mrs. Burns also presented her husband with a large leather Morris chair. The presentations were a complete surprise and Mr. Burns thanked the donors for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Burns, who removed to this city a year ago, formerly lived at Flemington. They were married twenty-six years ago near Whitehouse Station, which was the home of Mrs. Burns. They spent the greater part of their life since in Hunterdon county. Since coming here they have made a host of friends. By the present marriage there are two daughters, Mrs. E. J. Phillips and Miss Cora Burns, and one son, Brevoort Burns. Another daughter by the first marriage, Mrs. A. J. Sheppard, of Newark, was also present last night to join in the festivities. It was a happy occasion for Mr. Burns and he was glad to meet his old comrades and talk over interesting incidents of the Civil War.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Gordon, Miss Jean Gordon, Leon Gordon, Miss Caroline Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Armstrong and Mrs. A. J. Sheppard, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cawley, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cawley, Jr., of Somerville; Miss Jeannette Tippel, of Rockaway; Mrs. Mary Jones, of Flemington; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. James Laterette and Mrs. E. J. Phillips, of this city.

KEAN TO BE HEARD ON CENSUS APPOINTMENTS

A despatch from Washington, D. C., states that Senator John Kean has notified the State Committee on Census, of which Senator La Follette is president, that he wants to be heard in connection with the nominations made by the president for census supervisors in the Fifth and Seventh districts of New Jersey. These appointments have not been confirmed, and the request made by Mr. Kean for a hearing before the committee amounts to notice that he is opposed to the selections for these places.

Louis V. Hoagland was named for supervisor in the Fifth district, on the recommendation of Representative Fowler, and Samuel A. Smith, the Seventh district appointee, was the choice of Representative Parker. Neither of the representatives has any information as to Mr. Kean's reasons for opposing their men.

Charles W. Runyon, of this city, a clerk in County Clerk James C Calvert's office at Elizabeth, was the choice of the Senator's friends for the nomination for the Fifth district.

CONTRACTOR MUST PAY L. R. VAN NEST $300

Judge William Newcorn handed down his decision in the suit of Louis C. Van Nest against Frank Hale, contractor, this morning and awards the entire amount claimed by Van Nest together with interest and the costs of the suit. The amount involved was a balance of $300.30.

The original contract called for $350.30 for materials furnished to Hale on the house built by him for one Mr. Clark, at 208 Netherwood avenue. According to the testimony at the trial Mr. Van Nest delivered all but a small portion of the trimmings which the contract called for and besides any defects which the contractor had found in the material were made good by Van Nest.

Mr. Hale contested the suit on the ground that the material was not up to standard and furthermore was not delivered on time. Judge Newcorn decided that Mr. Van Nest had fulfille his contract and the defendant, Hale, should pay for the full amount of the contract.

Coddington and Swackhamer appeared for Mr. Van Nest and W. V. Nash, Jr., was counsel for Mr. Hale.

RELEASED ON BAIL; IN THE TOILS AGAIN

Charles Geer, of this city, who has been a prisoner in the New Brunswick jail for the past month, on a charge of stealing a horse and wagon belonging to a mail carrier in New Brunswick, secured his freedom today on bail and returned to this city. Upon his arrival here, Patrolman Nolan saw him and at once notified Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough, where Geer is wanted on a charge of cruelty to animals.

Geer was taken into custody until this afternoon when Chief Weiss came after him. In the meantime Mrs. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood, a State officer for the S. P. C. A., as well as the agent in Newark, were notified and they will come here and appear against Geer when he is arraigned.

The alleged cruelty to animals took place when Geer brought the New Brunswick man's horse here and placed it in a barn in the borough. The horse was allowed to remain there for some time without water or food, and was discovered in a starving condition.

HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mayor-Elect N.B. Smalley, W. A. Coddington and Chauffeur Slightly Injured.

UNPROTECTED TRENCH IN ROAD

Escape From Serious Injuries Due to Fact That Their Car Was Going at Low Speed.

Mayor-elect Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, and former Judge William A. Coddington, of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, while returning home in an automobile from Somerville yesterday afternoon at 4:50 o'clock, narrowly escaped serious injury when the car in which they were riding, landed in a ditch six feet deep and four feet wide, directly opposite a new dwelling being erected on Union avenue, Bound Brook. Both Mr. Smalley and Mr. Coddington were severely shaken up, while the chauffeur, William Stenlinger, received injuries in the stomach as a result of being thrown against the wheel on the steering rod.

Judge Coddington escaped with an abraision of the head, which struck the top of the machine, while Mr. Smalley, whose injuries were the most severe, was cut over the right eye, over the nose and his back and neck was severely wrenched in being thrown about the car. Mr Coddington is able to be about today, but the mayor will be detained at home several days.

They had been to Somerville on business in the Judge's car and were returning home about dusk. On Union avenue, Bound Brook, opposite the new house, contractors dug a deep trench in the roadway, about three-quarters the width of the thoroughfare. A lantern was displayed at that point as a warning, but it was suspended in the wrong direction giving one the impression that it was over a hole. A wagon was standing near the opening, and the chauffeur turned to the right to go around what he supposed was a hole. The auto plunged full force into the ditch.

The occupants of the machine were violently thrown from their seats and tossed into the air like paperweights, the cover preventing them from being thrown out in the roadway. The chauffeur was hurled against the steering wheel, striking his stomach. He was made deathly sick and had to receive immediate treatment from a physician.

Closely following the Plainfield car, was Dr. Wright in an auto, and the Plainfielders had sufficient time to warn him so that he escaped a similar accident. Dr. Wright assisted Mr. Smalley and Mr. Coddington as well as the chauffeur to his car and took them to the office of Dr. Davis in Bound Brook, where the injured men were given temporary treatment.

In the meantime, a telephone message summoned Dr. J. H. Carman, of this city, to Bound Brook, in his auto. He brought the Plainfielders home and is now treating Mr. Smalley. It was necessary to take five or six stitches to close cuts on his face and nose. Today the mayor feels very sore about the head and body.

In conversation with Mr. Coddington today, a Daily Press reporter was informed that steps would be taken to fix the blame. After the accident, the contractor made the roadway more safe by erecting boards, etc., about the trench to warn other travelers.

TO THE "GOOD FELLOWS" OF PLAINFIELD

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS OF PLAINFIELD

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I have tried for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press was asked to aid in reaching the good fellow by publishing this suggestion and to receive your communication in order that you may be assured of good faith and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll od a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

The Daily Press has investigated the "good fellow" who wrote the above, has looked him in the eye and put its O. K. on the plan. The cold blooded blase reporter who saw him wrote: "He made me feel, personally, that it would be really worth while in satisfaction to carry a little happiness to some children who otherwise wouldn't get any on Christmas eve." "Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of from fifteen to twenty children a year in Plainfield. He said that last Christmas day he wished he had curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might have had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through school teachers, investigators of various organizations who work in poverty stricken districts and others who come in contact with those whom we always have with us. Lists of worthy cases will be welcomed from such organizations as the Charity Organization Society, Salvation Army, King's Daughters, and churches of all demoninations. These lists should be verified and certified to by the officers of the organizations submitting them and should be arranged by wards and divisions of the city.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus" care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No. ——— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.

John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come in, good fellows.

Officials claim that they will be unable to collect personal taxes if there is such a division. The question has been passed over to City Solicitor Wootton.

GOOD ROADS IS STATE AFFAIR, TAFT ASSERTS.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 16.—The national good roads convention resumed its sessions yesterday.

National aid for permanent roads, a system of national highways connecting the capitals of the various States and of highways connecting the various county seats, use of federal prisoners for building roads and the establishment of road making on a strictly business basis, are some of the suggestions made Tuesday at the sessions.

A letter from President Taft declared against national aid to any great extent. The President says:

"My own view of the good roads question is that it is chiefly a State function, and that all the States ought to unite in an effort to promote good roads. I do not think that the farmers are as much interested in the matter as they ought to be.

"Next to education, the system of good roads is the greatest civilizer."

Arthur C. Jackson, national president of the Good Roads Association, suggested the plan of national and State highways.

Mrs. Harold Serrell, of Myrtle avenue, who recently dislocated her shoulder, is improving rapidly and is now able to be about the house.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The storm of Monday night, which was accompanied by high winds, blew down a low stable on the farm of Jacob Van Schaick, in Piscataway killing two cows and injuring a third one so badly that it had to be shot. The stable was an old building that had stood for more than thirty years. Recently a new building had been erected and the old one was abandoned. It is supposed the cattle from force of habit sought shelter in the old stable.

SPECIAL

To give greater freedom in selecting we have assembled our entire stock of dolls on the main floor in the Millinery section. You'll see lots of dolls ranging in price from 25 cents to $10, that will make you wonder how they can be sold for so little. Shop early—in the morning is best—you'll be able to choose easier and more satisfactory and be through before the day is half over—shop early. LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"A Broken Idol," which will be presented here for the first time on Saturday matinee and night, December 18, is a musical farce in two acts and two scenes. The first act takes place in the Chinese section of Los Angeles with the celebration of the Oriental New Year's Day in full swing. The last act is on the grounds of a mansion on an estate near Santa Monica. A gay old boy, an entomological professor who fall off the water-wagon for the first time in his life, and a shrewd American fakir whose wits are his stock in trade, meet in the Chinese quarter where the two first mentioned have come to witness the celebration. They join in the celebration and get into a row in a chinese restaurant. One of the party breaks the neck of a Chinese idol and considerable melodramatic interest is injected into the plot through their mistaking the idol for a slanty eyed Oriental. The love interest centres about the daughter of the gay old boy, who is being ardently woed by a bogus British Lord, while she is in love with an American newspaper reporter. Subordinately there is the pathetic story of the Chinese child wife of the American fakir. The second act finds everyone at the home of the gay old boy. Hither the three are pursued by the trouble resulting from their night's escapade in Chinatown and there are several delightfully humorous situations developed therefrom that keep the audience in a constant state of uproarious merriment.

NEWSPAPER A FACTORY IN LITERARY CAREER.

Princeton, Dec. 16.—In Dodge Hall Tuesday night Jesse Lynch Williams, '92, one of the best known of Princeton's graduates in the magazine and book world, talked to a number of Princeton undergraduates about the newspaper as a force in the community. It was the first of a series of informal talks inaugurated by the University Press Club. Samuel Hopkins Adams, the writer; George B. Mallon, city editor of the New York Sun, and Hart Lyman, editor of the New York Tribune, are among the men who are scheduled to talk in the future.

Mr. Williams expresed the belief that the newspaper offered the best preparation possible for a literary career, declaring that for every writer who had not won his spurs in the newspaper world, there were eleven others who had. He cited Dr. Henry van Dyke as the exception to prove the rule.

Mr. Williams spoke of the attitude of various newspapers toward financial interests and deplored, as he expressed it, the domination of the commercial world. His talk was, in the main, introductory, embracing the entire field of newspaper and magazine work.

Although the talks which were begun last night are held under the auspices of the University Press Club, they are open to all in Princeton.

WORK OF NEW JERSEY PILOTS.

Trenton, Dec. 16.The Commissioners of Pilotage have filed with Governor Fort a report showing that during the past year New Jersey pilots steered 1,171 vessels into port and took out 1,182, a total of 2,353. Of this number 2,258 were steamers, eight were ships, forty-one were barks, two were brigs and forty-four were schooners. The receipts for the year aggregated $174,503. There are thirty-one active members, full branch, on the rolls, one deputy pilot, five retired pilots and ten apprentices.

SENTENCE DAY IN UNION.

Elizabeth, Dec. 16.—Yesterday was sentence day in the Union County Court of Quarter Sessions. Judge Atwater disposed of the following cases, all the offenders having pleaded guilty.

Humbler, larceny, turned over to probation officer for one year; Frank Meyerhoffer, assault and battery, fined $50 and given one month to pay it.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Resident professional golfers will visit Scotland for a double purpose this winter. In addition to getting together as a team and measuring strength with their brother "pros," the American representatives will also make a study of the changed conditions with regard to the latest ideas in course construction. A nearby organization that will undoubtedly profit as a result of the efforts of its professional along these lines is the Essex County Country Club. Dave Hunter, who has been at Essex for the last seven years, will shortly visit his old haunts at Prestwick, regarded by many as second to none among the classic links of Great Britain.

While Prestwick, in the opinion of foreign critics, has, so far as testing holes are concerned, approached nearer the ideal than most, it has, like all the others, been compelled to bow to the march of progress. Only recently Charles Hunter, the veteran professional, who has passed the greater part of his life at Prestwick, superintended alterations to certain holes that had remained unchanged for many years. Cleverly devised traps and pits now appear at points likely to worry the erring one, and it is the intention of Dave Hunter to take exact measurements of these latest pitfalls, with a view to having them reproduced at Essex County in the spring.

Alec Smith, the metropolitan open champion, will also keep his eye open while abroad, and it is safe to say that as a result the Wykagyl course will profit on his return. Thus far the chief trouble encountered at the course near New Roselle has been its length, but this will shortly undergo a systematic course of trapping.

EXPLAINS NEW WAY OF CURING GERM DISEASES.

Trenton, Dec. 16.—Certain non-poisonous mineral salts possess germicidal properties to a degree that promises a cure for cancer, diphtheria, anthrax, leprosy, tuberculosis and other germ diseases. Such was the claim made Tuesday night to the Mercer County Medical Society by P. A. Maignen, a chemical engineer of Philadelphia. He made the discovery, he said, in his studies on sanitation in the last thirty-one years in London, Paris and this country. The microscope gave him his first clue, which he verified, he asserted, by bacteriological and clinical tests.

Maignen announced he will give his formula to physicians, but will not make it public. The non-poisonous mineral salts are combined in a fine state of division. This preparation, diluted in the proportion of one part of the powder to 1,000 parts of water, he says, has been proved capable of destroying the anthrax bacillus, which is the most resisting of all known microbes. Experiments made on animals, with the view of sterilizing and healing injuries having seemed successful, it was then decided, he said, to sterilize injured tissues in men.

The first case reported by Maignen to the society was that of the leper boy, Charles Clark, until recently interned in Blackwood, and now at large—nobody caring to find out where he is. He had been pronounced free from ulcers of any kind and therefore safe to go and come. The treatment, Maignen says, was begun on November 16, 1908, and ended in April, 1909.

Maignen reported having cured six incipient cases of tuberculosis in a three months' treatment. A case in the second stages, he says, has been much improved. The treatment followed in all cases consisted in inhaling into the lungs five or six grains of the antiseptic powder three or four times a day until relieved.

In many instances of diphtheria the patients were made to gargle with a one or two per cent. solution of the preparation, or the throat was sprayed or swabbed with the solution. In other cases dry powder was blown direct on the part.

DIAMOND RING LOST ON NIGHT OF PARTY.

Rahway, Dec. 16.—It transpired yesterday that a diamond ring worth $450 was missing from the dressing table in Miss Catherine O'Connell's rooms at her Milton avenue home on the evening of the announcement of her engagement to J. A. McDonough, of Linden. On that occasion about a dozen of Miss O'Connell's friends were present.

The ring was highly prized on account of its having been left by her father in his will. The ring was a gift to her father from a society of men in an organization of which he was an officer.

The police of Rahway and surrounding cities have been notified and the circle, it is said, is gradually narrowing as to the guilty party. Miss O'Connell was prostrated for a week over her loss.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will elect officers at the meeting to be held Monday night.

GOVERNOR FORT FAVORS A BOARD OF CONTROL

Governor Fort, in the course of his talk to the newspaper men Tuesday at Trenton, strongly intimated that the management of the State charitable institutions would have a prominent place in his coming message to the Legislature. The Governor is anxious to obtain the passage of a law creating a State board of control, to purchase all supplies for State institutions, feeling sure that with the operation of a board of this kind in New York as an example a considerable saving would be made to the State. Efforts to get such a law through the last Legislature failed.

Each State institution is now managed by a board the members of which are appointed by the Governor. They serve without pay. As a rule the work of these boards is done by two or three members, and the Governor thought the State lucky to get the high class of men who compose these boards to serve without pay, especially as they are often criticised for things for which they are not to blame.

In discussing the tuberculosis question the Governor said that the State owned between three and five thousand acres of pine land in Burlington county, which he said he considered an ideal site for the establishment of a tuberculosis colony. It is probable that he will, in his message recommend the use of this land for that purpose not by the building of a sanatorium but by the construction of a large number of shacks. The state now owns a sanatorium at Glen Gardner, which has been subjected to criticism because of the high cost of maintaining it.

At Proctor's.

Walter Bedell, who is the Denman Thompson of vaudeville, is at Proctor's this week with his company in Ethel May Shorey's rural dramatic sketch, "Uncle David." The story is human and centers round a son's slip from the part of honor. It is a delightful farm play and will be enjoyed by all. The wise one will see Deery and Francis in a "Wise Rube" and have a laugh every second. Nichols and Croix, in their sketch, "A Interrupted Rehearsal," will give one an idea how some stage rehearsals are worked out. Daniel J. Harrington is a funny comedian, and a clever ventriloquist. The pictures are up to the standard. Get a fountain pen free.

MME. MODJESKA'S FAMOUS FRIENDS.

It would be difficult to say which member of the group of Polish artists who have become famous in the country in the course of the last generation was the greatest, says the New York Sun. The names of all of them are things to conjure with. Paderewski, Sembrich, the two De Reszkes and Modjeska all from that little woe, begirt, blood-drenched country of Poland! What other nation of many times the material consequence of Poland can show a group of all analogous?

Mme. Modjeska, the oldest of this famous group, was the first to attain international prominence, which she did as an actress in her native land before she reached the age of twenty-one. To the Poles she soon became the personification of the spirit of liberty, so that her banishment from Russion Poland was early decreed. Late in her life the ban was raised, but she never took advantage of this fact. In her native land the people speak of "Modjeska's Polish," just as in England it is "the King's English."

Without her early advice and assistance the world might never have come to know the De Reszkes. They were of a noble but impoverished family and Modjeska, coming to be interested in them, arranged a huge benefit in which she acted herself in Cracow.

The receipts were large and they went towawrd enabling the De Reszkes to prosecute their studies under the best masters. The two brothers never forget the debt of gratitude they owed, any more than did Paderewski to whom the actress was also of much help in his early and obscure days.

One time when Mme Modjeska was playing in London she suffered a severe illness. It so happened that all the other members of this famous Polish group were then in London and they used to visit her nearly every day for the purpose of entertaining her. Paderewski playing the most ravishing accompaniments, while Mme. Sembrich and the two De Reszkes sang. Mme. Modjeska, in telling of those extraordinary entertainments, used to say that the great pianist always insisted on ending every selection, no matter what, by turning in into the famous waltz from "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief."

It also amused her to recall the fact that other persons staying in the same hotel made some complaint at the office about what they called "those awful noises" proceeding from Mme Modjeska's apartments. They stopped complaining when they learned that the awful noises proceeded from a quartet of the world's most famous musicians.

Paderewski, like the rest, remained the devoted friend of the actress to the very end. In March, 1903, Mme. Modjeska and her husband, Count Bobenta, were staying with the Paderewskis at their chalet in Switzerland, and the actress wrote to a friend in this city the letter from which these excerpts are taken:

"We are at this chateau with the dearest of men and his wife, and feel very happy to be able to have them to ourselves these few days of our stay here. The house is beautiful and large, with terraces a garden and park, and is quite worthy of such people.

"The view from our bedroom is simply gorgeous. We see the lake, the range of mountains, among which reigns Mt. Blanc, but her royal highness, the most beautiful of mountains, is not every day visible to mortal eye. She covers herself willingly with a veil of mist, and only in the mighty presence of the sun lifts it in recognition of the great power.

"What do you say to this lucubration? Does it not sound like some sentences translated from a German novel? I think it is the influence of Switzerland which makes me sentimental and eloquent, and then the sound of the piano!

"Ah, would you not like to be here? The master is composing a sonata and works every morning and the greater part of the afternoon. I can hear every note from my room, but as his work is just now in the rough state, I cannot quite understand it. I only am delighted to hear broken phrases—sometimes full of divine beauty. Just now it is something caressing; in a moment there will be a storm of accords.

"Mme. Paddy is most charming and hospitable, and a most fervent housekeeper. She is everywhere and has enough time for the guests. In the evening we play whist, and Charles (Count Bozenthal) tells funny anecdotes, and we all laugh at the old ones.

"Then Paderewski says something amusing, and he is very witty—and so passes the time. There is no constraint. I find that really great people are the simple people—that the pose and exaggerated dignity are only indispensable to those who must remind the world of their existence. Our host is one of the simplest minds, and one of the kindest."

NOT FLATTERING, AFTER ALL.

A young fellow who was out West not long ago has returned, telling a yarn which he declares to be about one of the most interesting experiences of even his checkered career, says the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"I was walking along the street in a Western town," he said, "when suddenly across the way I saw a Louisville girl whom I recognized immediately. She saw me, too, and I expected her to bow rather coolly and distantly, as had been her wont back home. I was considerably astonished, therefore, when she dashed across the street, seized me with both hands and fairly bubbled over in her delight. I was so surprised, in fact, that I commented on it.

"'I'm glad to see you, too,' I said, when I had managed to extricate myself from her exuberant greeting, 'but to tell you the truth, I hadn't expected to see you so excited over my appearance. You always treated me rather a la iceberg at home, you know; what has caused your change of heart?'

"She was nonpulsed for only a moment, and then explained: 'Mr. Smith, I've been away from home so long that I'd be glad to see even a dog if he came from Kentucky!'

"I let it go at that."

LEGAL TENDER MONEY.

Officially, there are just ten kinds of money in circulation in the United States. Do you know which of those are legal tender and in what amount. It may be that "all money looks alike to you," but there's a difference and below is the list:

Gold coins, standard silver dollars, subsidiary silver, gold certificates, silver certificates, treasury notes (1890), United States notes (greenbacks), national bank notes, nickel coins and bronze coins.

Looking upon this formidable classification of United States money as made by the treasury department, it becomes more formidable when it is considered from the highly technical point of view as a legal tender. Some of the most imposing of this paper currency is not a legal tender at all, while as to the minor coins they are legal tender in such small amounts as to startle the average layman. It may be well to recall to this layman that the term "legal tender" owes its significance to the fact that in payment of debt or obligation of any kind it can be forced upon the creditor "in full of all demands."

Gold certificates, silver certificates and national bank notes, of which such enormous numbers circulate everywhere are not legal tender. If you have plenty of money, and if you have forced Jones to sue you in order to get judgment, Jones can turn down every one of these bills tendered in payment and force you to dig up something better.

Should Jones do such a thing, you might conceive the idea of fixing him by unloading a whole lot of silver coins upon him. But you want to know what you're doing there, too, for he'll only take $10 worth of halves, quarters and dimes, while as to nickels and copper cents, only 25 cents value is legal tender.

But as to the standard silver dollar, there's no limit upon your shoveling them out to Jones. This old "dollar of our dads" still is the real thing in all business transactions unless some clause in a contract has provided otherwise. Jones may refuse the silver certificate, but when you dig up the metal dollar they go unquestioned at their face value. And 1,000 of them weight 58.92 pounds.

Treasury notes of the act of 1890 are legal tender to their face value in payment of all debts, public and private, unless expressly stipulated in the contract.

Strictly speaking, the United States notes or greenbacks are legal tender, with the exception of duties on imports and interest on the public debt. Practically, however, since the resumption of specie payment in 1879, greenbacks have been received freely and without question by the government.—Chicago Tribune.

Visitor (passing through dining room with little Tommy, discovers apple pie on sideboard)—Heigho, but that's a fine pie! Who made it?

Tommy—Gran'ma; she always makes the pies.

Visitor—Does she, indeed? Well, I'd like to get my teeth into that one.

Tommy—You would, eh? Well gran'ma's got ahead of you; don't you see the prints of her'n all around the edges?

SAYS HIS DAUGHTERS DENY TO HIM A HOME

Bowed down with age and scarcely able to walk because of illness, Jacob Greenburg, 71 years old, appeared in police headquarters at Bayonne, and begged to be given lodging until daylight. The old man had been roaming the streets since last evening, when he was refused admittance, he said, to the homes of his two daughters, one of whom is wealthy and the other in comfortable circumstances.

Greenburg told a story that brought tears to the eyes of the sergeant, John H. MacDonald. Tuesday the daughter with whom he had been living, Mrs. Sarah Hochstein, of 510 Avenue C, Bayonne, told him she could no longer support him, he said, and sent him to his other daughter, Mrs. Rose Wolf, of 533 Avenue C, Bayonne. Mrs. Wolf owns real estate and is reputed to be worth from $25,000 to $30,000. She denied him a home, he said.

Stricken with grief the old man roamed the streets until he was so weak he could scarcely walk. Then he appealed to the police. Through the efforts of the latter the man was this afternon taken in charge by the Hebrew Sheltering and Aid Society.

BOWERY ACTOR SHOOTS HIS RIVAL AND WOMAN.

New York, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Lizzie Shapiro, a vaudeville actress, employed at the People's Theatre on the Bowery, and Max Goldberg, a scene painter, are in Gouverneur Hospital, probably fatally wounded, while Jacob Glatsky, who is said to be a Russian count, is under arrest, charged with having shot them. The shooting took place early yesterday in the doorway of 101 Forsythe street, following a quarrel, in which Glatsky accused Goldberg, who is a married man, of trying to "cut him out."

Glatsky came to this country ten years ago after a lively career in Russia, which resulted in his being exiled. He became an actor at the People's Theatre, and for the last seven months also has conducted a restaurant on Grand street. He is large and good-looking and has been attentive to the Shapiro woman for some time. Mrs. Shajiro's husband is said to be suing Glatsky at present for alienation of his wife's affections. Since the suit was brought, Glatsky has been much in Mrs. Shapiro's company, and, it is alleged, sent large sums of money to her. The woman tired of him, however, and Tuesday night, following the performance, went to a restaurant with Goldberg, after which he accompanied her to her home on Forsythe street.

Glatsky was in an entry across the street and when the couple reached the hall he crossed and followed them. He immediately fired a bullet through the woman's body and as she sank to her knees began pumping lead at Goldberg. Four shots hit him and he fell, while Glatsky wiped his revolver on his handkerchief and ran away.

Glatsky was later arrested, and, taken to the hospital, was identified by both of his victims.

The nominating committee will be selected at the close of the session on Tuesday afternoon, December 28. Each Congressional district is entitled to two representatives on the nominating committee.

Following is an extract from the report of the secretary of the retirement fund contained in the advance program of the convention:

"A year ago paying membership was 2,819; today it is above 7,000. Income in 1907-8 was $56,000; in 1908-9, $97,000, and is now running well above $100,000. We expect the income to reach $125,000 for the fiscal year which ends June 30 next. Annuities paid in 1907-8 amounted to $56,000; in 1908-9, to $64,000; and from $85,000 to $90,000 will be paid this year. On January 1, 1909, the cash and invested surplus was $90,000; on July 1, it had grown to $128,000.

"Starting in 1896 without a cent, without guiding precedent, and combating powerful odds every step of the way, the fund, to July 1, 1909, had raised upwards of $400,000; had paid benefits amounting to $268,000; had contributed $16,000 to administrative expenses, and had accumulated a cash and invested surplus of more than $128,000. The first benefits were paid in 1898, just eleven years ago, and totaled $879.01; last year, benefits paid amounted to $64,068.17."

JACOB KIRKNER, DEC. 14, 1909.

Oh, great heart! Rest in peace!
For thee, the race of life is run,
The task is o'er.
The battle fought and won.
For thee, no more the cross,
But, lo! the victor's crown.
Well hast thou earned
The Great Commander's, "Friend, Well Done!"
We would not rouse thee
From that peace, so calm and deep,
For only so He giveth His beloved sleep.
What though with trembling lips
And tear-dimmed eyes we stand
And give the Answer to thy last command.
What though our feet shall falter
When we bear thee hence.
Thou wilt forgive.
For thou dost know the love we bear to thee,
Oh! Master, Friend and Brother!
So may we
Fight the great fight that thou hast fought,
Run the straight race that thou hast run,
And when our task is o'er,
Our victory won;
Hear, too, the Great Commander's,
"Friend, Well Done!"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 19, 1909.

Topic.—Our Christmas gifts.—Matt. ii, 1-11. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The Christmas season always suggests giving. It was on the first Christmas day that Christ, "the unspeakable gift" of God to man, was born into the world. Christmas therefore speaks of God's gift to man, and the custom of giving gifts to loved ones and friends at this season of the year has become almost a worldwide custom. In no better way perhaps could we celebrate the birthday of Jesus Christ, the gift of God to the world, than by the giving of gifts. The example of our God is worthy of our imitation, and it is a beautiful sight at the Christmastide to see the spirit of giving that possesses all. The human heart is opened and liberality and generosity abound, and many who at other times are lacking in these things learn the joy and blessedness of giving as well as of receiving.

Taking a comprehensive view of Christmas giving, it may be summed up under three divisions—(1) our gifts to God, (2) our gifts to Christ, (3) our gifts to one another.

1. Our gifts to God. Giving to God is of supreme importance. But what shall we give? That which He desires. How often we try to discover what our friends or loved ones want before we purchase Christmas gifts for them. We should also give to God what He wants. And in the Bible He tells us His desire concerning us when He says, "Son, daughter, give me thine heart." Our hearts as a gift is His supreme want, for everything else goes with the giving of the heart. He who gives all the love of the heart surrenders all else with it. Therefore let us "love the Lord our God with all our heart." As never before let us at this Christmas season give Him the supreme place in our affections, and with this gift there will go time and money and service.

2. Our gifts to Christ. It is hard to separate God and Christ in our giving. Both are divine and both are one. "The Father and I are one." But their relationships to us differ, and thus we may speak at least of offering gifts to each. The heart can only be given to the Father through the Son. Yet the gifts of the wise men may suggest our gifts to Christ. (1) They worshiped Him. When they saw Christ "they fell down and worshiped Him." God the Son is worthy of our worship as well as God the Father. We should hold Him in the highest reverence, bow down before Him and give to Him the best devotion of our minds and hearts. (2) "And when they opened their treasures they presented unto him gifts." (a) Gold Christ needs and wants gifts of money. It is required to carry on His work in the world, and He wants it as gifts. Giving is constantly emphasized in the Scriptures, and we should give of our money to Christ. "Take my silver and my gold" should not only be sung, but acted upon, in the giving of our money to Christ. (b) Frankincense and myrrh. These were precious ointments of the orient. They were the best gifts, such as were given to kings. Such gifts should teach us to give our best gifts to Christ. "Give of your best to the Master." A small boy gave Christ five loaves and two fishes, seemingly a trifling gift. Yet Christ multiplied it and through it fed 5,000 people! Our gifts may seem small, but if they are our best and freely given to Christ He can make a great use of them.

3. Our gifts to one another Christmas day witnesses a vast exchange of gifts. The tendency today is to give more expensive gifts than are necessary. Let us avoid it. Let us also not confine our giving to loved ones and friends, but make some gifts to the poor and needy. Exchange of gifts is largely selfishness, but a gift to one from whom we can expect nothing in return is the true spirit of giving.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxxiv, 1-12; cix, 1-4; Prov. xxiii, 26; Mal. iii, 10; Prov. xix, 17; xxii, 9; Matt. x, 42; Luke vi, 38; Matt. v, 18-22; Rom. xii, 1, 2; II Cor viii, 1-12.

W. J. Bryan and Temperance.

A thrilling period in the recent St. Paul international Christian Endeavor convention is thus described by an eye-witness:

Following the Nebraska delegation, Mr. Coleman spoke of the pledge signing campaign which Mr. Bryan is anxious Christian Endeavorers should take up and read the autograph pledge which the Nebraskan leader had sent him: "I promise, God helping me, to abstain from the use of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage." A burst of enthusiasm followed the announcement of this new movement, of which Christian Endeavorers are to hear much in the months to come.

Don'ts For Endeavorites.

Don't fail to live the truth if you would be faithful to it.

Don't persuade other people beyond your own convictions.

People who set a good example never know what it will hatch out.

Don't make the mistake of burying your talent lest your future time be occupied in sowing vices.

Influence of Jesus.

In the early days the influence of Jesus was explained according to the genius of that age. Today we must try to account for it in accordance with the genius of this age. They said it was due to His person. He was God. We say it was due to His character. He was the calmest and purest and most unselfish of mortals.—Rev. A. G. Singsen, Presbyterian, Providence, R. I.

ACTION BY CONGRESS ON "WHITE SLAVE" REPORT.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Comprehensive legislation designed to eradicate the evils of the "white slave traffic" is contemplated in a measure which is being prepared at the Department of Commerce and Labor. The matter is being gone over very carefully, and when completed will be submitted to Congress, together with the annual report of Commissioner Keefe, of the immigration bureau. Senator Dillingham, chairman of the United States Immigration Commission, which in making pubuic the results of its investigation has called attention to the revolting conditions existing from the operations of the raffle in women, has been in conference with the officials of the department, and it is expected that the proposed bill will embody very largely the recommendations made by the legislative body to remedy the evil so far as this may be done by Congressional enactment.

In his annual report Secretary Nagel recommended that the law prohibiting the bringing of women into the United States for immoral purposes to be amended so as to prohibit interstate traffic of this character, and the probability is that the measure to be submitted to Congress will incorporate a provision designed to further this project.

Compromise.

The ladies of the audience rushed forward impetuously to kiss the lecturer.

He waved them off wearily.

"I do not want to seem ungracious," he said, "but if you think the price of admission entitles you to more than the address I'd rather give your money back."—Philadelphia Ledger.

They Look Good and You See Good.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"No, no," he assured her soothingly. "It is nothing. You take the matter far too seriously."

He took the fingers one by one and kissed the tip of each. She offered no resistance. He drew her other hand down and kissed her eyes, wet with tears.

"Oh, Mr. Crawford!" she panted, suddenly struggling up and recoiling from him. "Don't—please don't!"

The cloak rose and fell with the heaving of her bosom. He followed her, his eyes glistening; but a knock at the door caused him to wheel about.

"What is it?" he demanded.

"It's me, sir. May I come in?" replied Rogers' voice.

"Yes, come in. What is it?"

The valet entered and closed the door behind him.

"It's Mr. Mallory calling, sir," he informed him.

"Hang Mallory!" growled Crawford. "Don't you know enough to send him to Jericho when I have a lady here? Tell him I'm not in. Tell him to call tomorrow—next week—next year."

"Yes, sir; beg pardon, sir. I knew, of course, that his visit wouldn't be welcome just now, but he telephoned earlier in the evening that he wanted to see you on very important business, and I told him you'd be here about this time. I'm sorry, sir, but I didn't think you'd be engaged. He's in the hall, sir, and heard you answer my knock."

Crawford was visibly annoyed.

Nora stood absolutely paralyzed with fear.

"What's he doing in town?" he asked her.

"He came up with mother and father," she explained.

He thought a moment.

"I wonder what he wants," he muttered. "Perhaps I had better see him, inasmuch as he knows I am here."

"But"— began Nora, turning even paler.

"That's all right," he said, going to the door beside the bookcase and opening it. "You wait in here. I'll get rid of him as soon as I can. Rogers, show him in."

The room was his bedroom. He almost pushed Nora in, closed the door, took some writing material out of a drawer of the table, seated himself and made a pretense of being very busy.

CHAPTER IX.

"HELLO, Mallory! What brings you you to town?" inquired Crawford, extending his hand without rising.

"Surprised you, eh?" responded Dan, gripping his hand heartily. "Well, how are you?"

"Take Mr. Mallory's hat and coat," said Crawford to the valet.

The trainer waved Rogers off.

"No; can't stop but a minute," he explained. "I left O'Brien an' his wife at the theater an' told them I'd run over to see you, but promised to be back after the first act. Besides, I see you're busy."

"Awfully busy," lied Crawford. "I have a pile of mail to get off tonight."

Rogers withdrew.

"Gave you a surprise, eh?" repeated Mallory, twisting his hat in his hands.

"Rather! But won't you sit down?"

"Thought I'd run up to town an' talk over that McGovern matter with you," he explained. "The old folks had got to worryin' about the girls, so I brought 'em along. Mrs. O'B. got it into her head that somethin' was wrong."

"Had she heard anything?" asked Crawford uneasily.

"No; she had a dream or somethin'. You know what mothers are. She wanted to see the kid badly, I guess. She's felt kinder lonesome since Nora went away. Nora's the baby, you know, and the old folks ain't seen her since she left home."

"I imagine somebody else felt lonesome, too, and wasn't sorry for an excuse to run up to New York," said Crawford, while Dan grinned broadly. "I guess the girls are all right."

"Sure," assented the trainer. "Patsy's letters prove that. Seen 'em lately?"

"I've run into them a couple of times on the street, and of course I've seen them in the piece."

"Great show, ain't it? I came up for the openin'. Nora did mighty well for a beginner, an', I tell you what, that girl's got the makin' of somethin' in her. But, say, isn't Patsy great? When she comes on in that second act leadin' that bunch of girls in that white dress with all them shiny flumidoodles an' that sassy hat perched on her little blond head, she's the hit of the show to me, ain't she?"

"Looks pretty nice," admitted Crawford.

"She oughter be playin' a part. May be it's just as well, though. She mightn't be so willin' to give it up. I ain't said anythin' before, Crawford, though I seen just now, you'd guessed it, but if the stable keeps on with this run of luck you'll be gettin' a weddin' invitation one of these days."

Crawford had been listening with an impatience that was not the less burning because it was concealed. He seized upon Mallory's announcement as a pretext to rise and bring the interview to a speedy end.

"Congratulations, old man," he said, going over and wringing his hand with a show of the heartiest cordiality. "We must have a drink on that."

He took down a decanter and a couple of glasses from the top of the bookcase and poured out a stiff drink of whisky for each of them.

"Now, how about this McGovern," said Crawford. "Let's get down to business. I don't want to seem rude or to hurry you, old man, but I have an awful lot to do tonight, and I know you are anxious to get away. Perhaps you would like to put it off till tomorrow? How about seeing me at my office and having a bit of lunch with me?"

"Thanks," he replied. "I could hardly do that. I may have to start back to Maple Grove on an early train. But the business won't take long. I'll be through in a few minutes. I wanted to tell you that I guess I've landed McGovern."

"That's good!"

"Yes; it means a big thing for the stable. When the wise ones find out that old McGovern, the wisest one of them all, pays us a good stiff figure for Lady Belle, it will give the string a good boost, an' we ought to get fancy prices."

"What are you holding Lady Belle at?"

"Five thousand. I done a tall stunt of haggling with him. He was around to see me tonight before dinner. I told him to call you up. He'll run up a telephone bill of $5 tryin' to get you to take four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine. He's a gabby old guy, but don't let him wear you out. He'll pay the figure."

"I like your nerve, sicking him at me!"

"Had to get rid of him somehow. I was hungry. He'd be talkin' yet. He's one of them chaps hard to head off once you get 'em goin'. You know."

"Yes, I know," said Crawford pointedly, wishing Mallory would take the hint and go.

Just then the telephone in the hall rang and Rogers appeared.

"Telephone, sir," he announced to Crawford.

"I'll bet that's McGovern now," said Mallory, with a grin.

Crawford laughed resignedly and went out, slamming the door. Mallory helped himself to a cigar from a box on the table, cut the end off and looked in the mirror with a satisfied wink at himself as he lighted the weed. The door beside the bookcase had opened noiselessly. It was being quickly shut as he gazed into the mirror, and he saw the reflection of a woman's beautiful bare arm. Dan turned, but the door was closed. A look of comprehension spread over his face.

"Gee—willikins—I see!" he muttered. "Guess I'm buttin' in on somethin'."

He closed one eye and screwed up the corresponding corner of his mouth with a comical, knowing grimace at himself in the glass. It lasted until the match, burning low, scorched his fingers and caused him to drop the charred wood, and his features to contort themselves into an expression of lively, passing pain.

"It's for you," announced Crawford, re-entering the room.

"Now, see here. That ain't fair," protested Mallory. "I've had more'n my share of McGovern."

Dan hurried out.

"The theater—wonder what's up?" he muttered.

Crawford closed the door and ran over to the bedroom.

"Has he gone?" asked Nora, who was pale and trembling.

"Not yet, but he will leave in a minute," he whispered.

"He doesn't suspect I'm here?"

"Of course not. How could he?"

"I don't know, but I wish I were home."

"Now, now! Don't get rattled," he said, patting her cheek and closing the door.

Mallory came back laughing.

"It was O'Brien," he explained. "He says they can't find their girls on the stage, an' Mrs. O'Brien's in the lobby insistin' that some one's kidnaped her darlin's. Ain't that rich! They don't recognize 'em in their stage get-up. I bet the old man's got his hands full, an' I better get a move on. Where's my hat? I'll call you up in the mornin' before I leave. What's the quickest way downtown?"

"You had better take the subway at Eighty-sixth street and get off at Times square," advised Crawford, handing the hat to him.

The men shook hands, and Crawford went to the front door to let his visitor out.

Left in Crawford's bedroom, Nora had stood shaking with terror, afraid to move. Her first thought was that Patsy, when the latter found that she had left the theater, must have suspected that she had carried out the idea of calling on Crawford and asking him for the note and had sent Dan after her. She expected the bedroom door to open and to find herself face to face with him. Mallory's cheery greeting to Crawford and the manner in which their conversation opened—for the trainer's loud voice was easily audible—soon reassured her. Evidently he was ignorant of her presence, and if he did not have occasion to come into that room would never know she was there. She did not suppose that Crawford would allow him to enter, but she looked around for a place in which to hide in case of emergency.

She liked Crawford more than ever. How nice he had been to her—how gentle and courteous! She had felt all along that Patsy had misjudged him. Patsy, anyhow, was suspicious of every man who was nice and was always preaching instead of minding her own business. It was strange, though, that he should have made her sign her father's name to that note. She wondered whether he had not done so simply to humor her because she had insisted upon having the debt regarded as a business matter. She inclined to the belief that he had and that it was not, after all, such a serious thing as Patsy had tried to make out. Why should he, who had proved that he was her friend, seek to injure her? There was no doubt, however, that she had done wrong in signing her father's name, and it was imperative that she should procure the note and destroy it. She was sure Mr. Crawford would give it to her for the asking. He was so good. True, he had kissed her hands and her eyes, and she was far from being sure that this was the proper way for a gentleman to treat a young girl, but he had done it in such a kindly, fatherly way that she could not feel offended. Moreover, it proved one thing—that he liked her very, very much. She considered this quite natural, for was she not pretty—much better looking than most of the girls she knew? And she supposed that all real gentlemen who married girls began by making love in that manner. The kissing of hands, at all events, entered largely into courting as it was done in plays.

At last she heard the other door slam, and, looking into the glass to see that she was all right and adjusting her hair with a few deft touches of her fingers, she opened the bedroom door to emerge. There, almost within touch, but with his back turned to her, stood Mallory, lighting his cigar. Her heart stopped beating, and she nearly fainted. Her hand was still on the handle, however, and she had sufficient presence of mind to pull the door to swiftly. She thought that Dan had seen her, and she stood back, with blanched face and dilated eyes, waiting for what would follow.

Nothing happened, however, and she soon satisfied herself that he had not noticed her imprudent sortie, but her nerves were so unstrung by the narrow escape and the emotions of the evening that she had but one desire—to get out and away from the place as quickly as possible.

When Crawford returned to his den after escorting Mallory to the door he paused before rejoining Nora to consider what he should do. He had been making splendid progress when that marplot of a Mallory had interrupted him by his unwelcome visit.

He pressed a button beside the fireplace, and Rogers appeared.

"I want a nice little supper for two at once," said Crawford. "Fix it on this little table. It will be cozier than on the larger one."

"Very good, sir. What would you like, sir?" asked the valet.

"I don't know," mused Crawford. "What would you suggest—birds?"

"Hardly, sir. You've got to be educated up to birds. I should say a chicken salad, ice cream and a sweet champagne would be about the mark of this young lady, sir."

"Rogers, you know I couldn't stomach that truck in a thousand years."

"No, sir; certainly not, sir," acquiesced the man obediently.

"Bouches a la reine—I know they have some ready—accessories, a bottle of that Chauteau Margaux and some champagne, usual kind," ordered Crawford.

Then he went to the bedroom door and opened it.

"Come on," he said. "It's all right."

He offered her his arm with a playful air, but she walked past him. He saw that she was shivering and almost crying.

"I can't stay any longer, Mr. Crawford," she told him. "Please give me the note and let me go."

"Why," he said, "you are cold. Poor little girl! That fellow scared the life out of you. Sit here by the fire a minute. I'll give you something to warm you up."

"No; please let me go. I can't stay, really. I'm sick, and I want to go home. I'll come back some other night—on purpose to see you."

She looked at him appealingly.

"I wouldn't for a minute think of letting you go in such a condition," he insisted, arranging the cushion in the chair and drawing the latter close to the fire. "You can wait a few minutes, surely, until you have had time to pull yourself together."

"And will you give the note?" she asked anxiously.

"Why, that'll be all right," he assured her. "It isn't the note I care about, it's you."

She seated herself reluctantly, and he went to the sofa, gathered up an armful of cushions and piled them under her feet, so that they were on a level with the logs.

"There!" he exclaimed, with a boyish smile in spite of herself.

Then he poured out some Scotch whisky, squirted a little seltzer in it and held the beverage to her lips.

She demurred.

"No; I never touch liquor," she said.

"But you must," he coaxed gayly. "It's medicine. I'm the doctor and you have to obey orders."

She drank a little, and he gave her the glass, which she held in her lap. The stuff did not taste unpleasant or too strong.

"There's no occasion for you to hurry," Crawford urged. "It isn't 9 o'clock yet. You don't have to go back to the theater—I told you I'd fix that. All your folks are there, and if you reach home by 11 or even half-past it will be early enough."

CAPT. WM. HUNTER'S VOYAGE HAS ENDED

Captain William Hunter, a former resident of Perth Amboy and Tottenville, died Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. Seguine Sprague, 846 Decatur street, Brooklyn, after a lingering illness, and the funeral was held yesterday. He was an uncle of Charles H. Hand, of this city.

Captain Hunter was eighty-seven years old and was the first man to establish a steam ferryboat service between Perth Amboy and Tottenville. He was captain of the ferryboat Stillvanwitt between Perth Amboy, Tottenville and South Amboy many years ago. He was an oiler on the gunboat Miantonock during the Civil War. Captain Hunter, after the Staten Island Railway established a ferry to Tottenville, was the collector on the ferryboat Maid of Perth before a ticket office was established at either side and went around the boat collecting the fares, which position he held for many years, retiring about eighteen years ago. He was a Mason and was the second oldest member of Raritan Lodge, No. 61, F. and A. M., of Perth Amboy, having joined the lodge in 1865, with three others who are still living. They are William Marshall, of South Amboy; Isaac Coleman, of Philadelphia; and John W. Meshrow, of Perth Amboy. Captain Hunter was a volunteer fireman and the first chief of the volunteer fire department of Tottenville when it was established in that place many years ago.

He was a member of Lenhart Post No. 163, G. A. R., and the Tottenville Veteran Firemen's Association, both of whom attended the funeral. At one time he owned considerable property in Smith street, where James M. Glenn's cafe now stands, and the Cook block of stores. He also owned property in Tottenville, from where he moved to Brooklyn several years ago.

The funeral was held from his late residence last night and interment followed in St. Peter's cemetery in Perth Amboy. Raritan Lodge conducted the Masonic services at the grave.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Sprague, with whom he resided.

AUTO AND MOTORCYCLE RACES NEW YEAR'S DAY

Joseph Gunn and Claude Holgate, of Newark, who were the successful promoters of the big auto and motorcycle races at Olympic Park, Newark, are planning to give a big auto and motorcycle race at the driving park of the Plainfield Driving club, on New Year's Day. They have communicated with the officers of the club and arrangements have been made to hold a meeting with the members of the club Monday night, when the details of the proposed affair will be discussed in detail.

Both Mr. Gunn and Mr. Holgate feel sure that in view of the fact that there are so many owners of autos and motorcycles in this city, it will be an easy matter to make the meet a success. It is also proposed to have several races for local entries and this will doubtless arouse great interest among the owners of machines in this city.

The promoters are assured of a large outside entry list should the meet be held and this will attract people from all parts of the State as well as New York. Suitable prizes would be offered the winners in the various events. The track at the park is a half-mile one, and is said to be fully as wide as the mile track at Olympic Park, Newark It is said to be ideal for auto and motorcycle races.

The second team was entirely too fast for the visitors. All through the game the high school boys had things their own way and spent a great deal of time passing. Bristol made some remarkable goals from the field.

That the letter of a "Good Fellow," published in yesterday afternoon's issue showed the true spirit of Christmas to those who want to do something to make the poor little children happy, is very evident from the approval expressed in all quarters.

As an illustration of the immediate effect of "Good Fellow's suggestion, by permission the following communication is published:

"Holy Cross Rectory,
"Plainfield, N. J.

"Editor, The Daily Press:

"On the front page of your paper last night I read the appeal made by one who signs himself 'A Good Fellow.' He is certainly all that for he has caught the very spirit of Christmas.

"I was touched by the simplicity of his plan and the directness of the appeal. Please count me a Good Fellow, too. I have written another letter to tell you how many of the kids he can count on my looking after according to his plan. More power to his arm I say, that the youngsters who are usually neglected and overlooked or forgotten may have the brightest, merriest kind of a Christmas this year.

"If my endorsement goes for anything you are at liberty to print this by way of stirring up the Good Fellows of Plainfield to do their part. I was talking with a friend about the Good Fellow scheme, and being

UNITY LODGE, K. OF P. HAS ANNUAL ELECTION

There was a big turnout of members at the meeting of Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., last night, including a large delegation from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., when the annual election was held. Among those present was Past Grand Chancellor John Ulrich and he gave an interesting talk to the Pythians.

During the course of his remarks, Judge Ulrich recalled that twenty years ago, Unity Lodge lost a valued member in Eugene V. Lorton, who was unfailing in his zeal and interest in not only the subordinate lodge, but the grand lodge as well, and it should always prove an incentive to greater effort on the part of the members. Judge Ulrich had many nice things to say about Unity Lodge and its work of the past and was loudly applauded for his kind words.

These officers were elected for the coming year:

Chancellor Commander, Samuel Rothberg; vice-chancellor, James D. Anderson; prelate, E. P. T. Smith; keeper of records and seals, Frank Putnam; master of finance, Horace J. Martin, Sr.; master of exchequer, S. E. Humpston; master of work, Jeremiah VanWinkle; master at arms, A. E. Causebrook; inner guard, A. B. Drake; outside guard, A. B. Dunavan; representative to grand lodge, James D. Anderson; alternate, Jeremiah VanWinkle; trustee, three years, Harry Werner.

Frank Putnam was elected keeper of records and seals for the thirteenth consecutive year, and was congratulated by the members for his efficient service. After the business the Pythians enjoyed a euchre party and smoker.

COLBY SUFFRAGE TALK

Tells Women Why He Thinks They Should Be Allowed to Vote.

HIS WIFE HEARS HIM SPEAK.

Man's Ballot For Business, Woman's For Home, Says Leader of Ex-New Ideas.

Former State Senator Everett Colby address the Equal Franchise Society yesterday in the Garden theatre, New York. The president, Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, sat in a box with Mrs. Everett Colby, who was formerly Miss Edith Hyde, of this city.

"The argument that women don't want the ballot suggested my trying to prove that they do," Mr. Colby said, "and in the poorest districts of Newark I made a house to house canvas. I found more than fifty per cent. said they wanted to vote and they wanted to vote now. And this same method of getting at real facts and conditions I employed in answering another argument against giving the ballot to women.

"Those who are opposed to the movement will tell you that women have not the same understanding of laws and have not the facilities of men for becoming posted on government questions. You can prove by statistics that there is no difference between men and women in their ability to acquire information. The average girl goes to school two or three years longer than the average boy, and there are more boy laggards than girl.

"The average man devotes about ten hours a year to the actual study of politics, and yet the average man knows less about the details of government than women do now. In my visit to the tenement districts I found that all the intelligent questions were asked by women. Men were interested in nothing until the excise question was brought up, but the women knew practically all the laws affecting their children.

"In a majority of cases the woman would vote for the home and all that affects it, whereas the man votes for what affects his business interests."

LOCAL ENTRIES FOR THE POULTRY SHOW

The twenty-fifth annual show of the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association to be held in Madison Square Garden from December 28 to January 1. The entry list, according to Mayor Crawford, of Montclair, who is secretary of the association, is the largest in the history of the show.

Among the entries are those of William Howe Cook, of Scotch Plains; Mountain Flying Loft, and the Sunswick Poultry Farm, of this city. They will have one or more entries in the show. In addition thousands of entries have been made from all parts of the country. One of the largest will be from the Kellersrtaff farm in Kansas At the exhibit in New York, two years ago, Kellerstraff sold five white Orpington fowls to an opera singer for $7,500. They were sent to the singer's home in Hungary.

There will be a Christmas tree, and a program of songs and recitations, together with the appearance of "The Old Woman in the Shoe." CHAS. F. ABBOTT RESIGNS

Dr. B. van D. Hedges, Health Board Prest., New Education Board Member.

HAD SERVED FOURTEEN YEARS.

Mr. Abbott Has Lived in New York City for Two Years—Other Doings of the Board.

Charles F. Abbott, who has been a member of the Plainfield Board of Education for fourteen years, presented his resignation at a special meeting of the board, last night, and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges was elected to fill the unexpired term which will run until the next election. Dr. Hedges is president of the Board of Health.

Mr. Abbott resigned as a member of the board because of the fact that he is now living in New York city, and for the past two years has been away from the city most of the time, in fact ever since he sold his property on Central avenue. In view of this he thought it only fair that he retire.

The board also discussed the contracts for the new Dunellen avenue school, and now that the bonds have been sold and the money is available, the architects, Hale & Rogers were instructed to prepare contracts and submit them to Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh for approval. The new school is to be built on the north side of Dunellen avenue, between Mariners place and Clinton avenue, the size of the lot being 310x900. It will be an eight-room primary building and will be constructed of reinforced concrete, making it fireproof. As soon as the contracts are approved the work will be commenced.

T., was assisted by Eminent Sirs Grier and McGill, of the Grand Commandery of New Jersey, and Right Eminent Sirs Hubbell and Loudon, of the Grand Commandery of New York, and Eminent Commander Burr, of Clinton Commandery, of Brooklyn, with the Aurora Grata Cathedral Templar quartet.

The Masons present included the Grand Lodge of Masons, Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, together with representatives from other subordinate bodies of this city and Westfield. Delegates from Damascus Commandery of Newark and Jersey Commandery, of East Orange, were also present.

Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, acted as prelate for Trinity Commandery. The funeral was attended by a large number of friends of Mr. Kirkner including representatives from all the schools and from the Board of Education and the New Jersey State Legislature.

The annual meeting of the relief association will be held on Wednesday, December 29, when officers will be elected and full reports will be made.

Henry Windham, proprietor of the Waldorf Hotel on East Front street, celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday last night by giving a banquet to the "Get-Together" club at which for of the city's best known Republicans were guests. The menu provided by the jovial host was one to be remembered and was thoroughly enjoyed.

City Judge William N. Runyon was toastmaster and speeches were made by Andrew McCardell, Judge William Newcorn, Registrar Frank H. Smith, Deputy Sheriff William Wright, of Rahway; James J. Farrell, of Hoboken, and others.

The banquet closed at about 11 o'clock with a song tendered to Mr. Windham in which all joined with vigor. Mr. Windham was the recipient of many congratulatory words and appeared happy in the thought of having entertained the friends with whom he has so long associated. In a response to the congratulations of President McCardell Mr. Windham said that he appreciated the good will which had always been mahifested toward him by the business men of this city and hoped he would continue in the good graces of them all. Juding by the applause which greeted Mr. Windham's little speech he need never fear losing the friendship of the get together members.

CIRCUIT RIDER TALE TOLD BY A PASTOR

"Riding a Virginia Circuit," was the topic of an interesting lecture given by Rev. Dr. George C. Wilding, of Perth Amboy, at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night. There was a large attendance and all thoroughly enjoyed the informal talk of Dr. Wilding, who related many unusual incidents which marked the early years of his ministry.

The story was that of a callow young Methodist preacher with little or no experience, riding on a horse over a circuit comprising thirteen appointments in the mountains of Virginia. Dr. Wilding said that when he told his father of his intention of becoming a preacher, the latter told him he was a fool and his employer called him a blockhead. He explained, however, that his employer afterward apologized and commended him for his determination. At that time Dr. Wilding said that he had a wife and child to support on the smallest kind of a salary.

At the time he was working in a Virginia town and was filling what was considered the best position in the place. This he gave up, because he believed that he was called to preach the Gospel. Since that time, Dr. Wilding has had some of the best appointments in the Methodist church and is now considered one of the denomination's strongest preachers.

During the evening Mrs. Charles K. Shreve favored the audience with two soprano solos, which were greatly enjoyed.

Geer Hearing Tomorrow.

The case of Charles Geer, the alleged horse thief, who when released yesterday from the New Brunswick jail was re-arrested by Chief Marshal Weiss, of North Plainfield, was remanded this morning until tomorrow so that Lewis G. Teed, the prosecutor for the Humane Society, may press the charge of cruelty to animals for which Geer is under arrest in the borough.

NEW MARKET VILLAGE IS NOW IN DARKNESS

The Public Service Corporation has cut off the lights at New Market because the township commission having no funds is not able to pay for the service and in consequence the village is now in darkness at night. The contract terminated December 1, but the company continued lighting the village longer in the hope that the commission would find some way to meet the expense and continue the service.

According to the law, it is illegal for the township to make another appropriation until next year. The fiscal year will end June 1, and unless the amount necessary to continue the lighting is raised by popular subscription, the village will remain in darkness at night until the next appropriation is made.

Several public-spirited citizens are now interesting themselves in the proposition and hope that a sufficient sum will be raised soon to continue the lighting until time to make the next appropriation in June. This condition has never arisen before and it has set some of the prominent citizens to thinking that some provision must be made whereby it will not happen again.

LOTUS GLEE CLUB GIVES FINE CONCERT

The Lotus Glee club, of New York, assisted by Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith, reader, gave one of its best concerts at the Y. M. C. A last night, before a large and appreciative audience. This was one of the entertainments in the Star Course, and it proved to be as popular as ever. The Lotus Glee club is a feature of the Star Course series every year and is always greeted by a large audience.

The quartet appeared better and stronger than ever, while Mrs. Smith was recalled time and again. Her selections were all excellent and she gave further evidence of her fine dramatic ability. In the quartet, Mr. Boals has taken the place of Mr. Beemis. He has a fine bass voice and the quartet is well balanced. The club made an excellent choice of numbers and the singers were obliged to repeat dly respond to encores.

The program was concluded with an act of "Grand Opera Up-to-Date," given by request. This was one of the big hits of the evening. The numbers follow:

"When the Bugles are Calling," Herbert, Lotus Glee Club; "A Legend of Service," VanDyke, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; "The Garden of My Heart," Ball, Mr. Hindermyer; "Christmas Carol Sixteenth Century" Lotus Glee club; "The Old Black Mare," Squire, C. L. Lewis; "Polly Ann's Memorial Party," Arnold, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; "Bendermere's Stream," Gatty, G. Morgan Stricklett; "My Old Cabin Home," Smith, Lotus Glee Club; "King Charles," White, Mr. Boals; two short selections, Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith; an act of "Grand Opera Up-to-Date," Lotus Glee Club. Frank Smith was at the piano and largely assisted in making the concert a success.

Judge Toucey at Muhlenberg.

Justice of the Peace Walter Toucey, of Westfield, is a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital, under treatment due to an accident at Elizabeth a few days ago. He was getting off a trolley car on Broad street, when he collided with a colored man, who was attempting to board the car. The two men fell to the pavement, the justice striking on his arms and badly spraining the ligaments, causing partial paralysis. He is now improving and hopes to go home soon.

Local Dogs Win at Bench Show.

PITIFUL CASE IN COURT

Drunken Mother of Abused Child Given Time to Repent.

LITTLE ONE TELLS A SAD STORY

Hannah Meadow Goes to Jail for Two Months by Order of Judge Runyon in the Police Court.

Hannah Meadow, formerly of Madison avenue, but more recently of Dunellen, will spend the next sixty days in the county jail for having been drunk and creating a disturbance at Madison avenue and West Second street last night at about 10 o'clock. Judge Runyon, after listening to Patrolman Payne's story of the causes leading up to the arrest, and the testimony offered by Miss Mary Brown, decided that no less a sentence would fit the case.

Mrs. Meadow was drunk and in company with another sister was chasing her seven-year-old daughter down Second street. Evidently the woman was too drunk to know where her daughter was, but she was sure she wanted to catch her and give her a beating. The child took refuge beneath a tree in front of Miss Mary Brown's store on West Second street and was sobbing out her grief there for more than an hour. Miss Brown went to the child and asked her why she was crying. She said she was afraid to go home because her mother was drunk and was going to beat her with a strap.

Miss Brown had befriended the child on other occasions and was somewhat familiar with her home surroundings. She took her on her wheel and rode around looking for the unnatural mother, while the latter had fallen into the toils of Patrolman Payne. The little girl pleaded with Miss Brown to put her in a children's home or to take care of her herself. She said she had been to school but one day in her life and wanted to go again. The pitifulness of the child's story found a sympathetic chord in Miss Brown's breast and she took her home to spend the night.

In court this morning Mrs. Meadow denied all the charges brought by Payne, but the judge was not impressed by her story. She claimed that the child had become unmanageable because her mother had refused to give her a nickle and that she really deserved a whipping. As a matter of fact the little girl has never had a mother's love and it is feared that now her mother has been sent to jail on her account, her future treatment from her sister of the woman will be anything but tender.

However, the police will keep tabs on the family and will see that the child is not subjected to cruelty. After the sentence was imposed efforts were made by friends of the woman to have the sentence of the court changed to a fine, but Judge Runyon was firm in the belief that the woman deserved the punishment and refused to alter it. Patrolman Payne said that Mrs. Meadow tried to "do him" after he had threatened her with arrest, and that she was aided by the sister who was with her.

Unionist-Gazette History.

The Christmas number of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette contains much interesting data concerning early history in that prosperous community, particularly that of the newspaper itself. "Looking Backward" is the title of a highly entertaining and exhaustive account of the paper's history written by A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city. A quarter of a century ago, Mr. Honeyman was the editor and proprietor of the paper.

Singer's Mother Ill.

Miss Josephine Schaeffer, formerly of this city, who is now singing in grand opera in Berlin, Germany, has been summoned by cable to return to her mother's home in Brooklyn. Mrs. Schaffer is critically ill. Miss Schaffer will have to cancel a lucrative engagement with the Royal Opera Company, but it is expected that she will sail tomorrow on one of the North German Lloyd boats.

Fred Wilcox, Jr., a Benedict.

Announcement was made this week of the marriage of Miss Theresa C. Wormser and Fred Wilcox, Jr., both of Dunellen. The couple were married in New York city last week and kept the fact a secret until a few days ago. They are now enjoying a honeymoon in Washington and upon their return will reside at Dunellen. Both are well-known in Dunellen and this city.

H. B. Sutphen, of 119 East Fifth street, has returned home after a six weeks' trip to the Pacific coast in the interest of the Prudential Insurance Company.

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS OF PLAINFIELD:

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I have tried for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press was asked to aid in reaching the good fellow by publishing this suggestion and to receive your communication in order that you may be assured of good faith and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll or a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

The Daily Press has investigated the "good fellow" who wrote the above, has looked him in the eye and put its O. K. on the plan. The cold blooded blase reporter who saw him wrote: "He made me feel, personally, that it would be really worth while in satisfaction to carry a little happiness to some children who otherwise wouldn't get any on Christmas eve." "Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of from fifteen to twenty children a year in Plainfield. He said that last Christmas day he wished he had curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might have had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through school teachers, investigators of various organizations who work in poverty stricken districts and others who come in contact with those whom we always have with us. Lists of worthy cases will be welcomed from such organizations as the Charity Organization Society, Salvation Army, King's Daughters, and churches of all demoninations. These lists should be verified and certified to by the officers of the organizations submitting them and should be arranged by wards and divisions of the city.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus" care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.———— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.
John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come in, good fellows.

Good Service Leads to More Business

We are asking our patrons to cooperate with us in bettering their gas and electric lighting service because we believe it is good business policy to do so.

Selling gas and electric service is our business and we believe, like progressive merchants in other lines, that a satisfied customer is the best kind of an advertisement as well as a valued asset.

If we can satisfy you in every particular, so far as your lighting service is concerned, we feel that it will redound to our benefit in the long run.

On the other hand if you are not satisfied we lose your good will and we lose business we otherwise might have.

We want your business and with it your good will. If you are not receiving satisfactory service let us know; we will see where the fault lies—and correct it.

'BERNARDS' MAY BE NEW COUNTY, THEY SAY

Bernardsville, Dec. 17.—Residents hereabouts are much interested in a movement encouraged by William J. Kearns, of Newark, to slice up Somerset and Morris counties, with a view to adding another county, to be called "Bernards," to the State. Mr. Kearns has filed notices here of such an intention, and these notices recite that he is planning to appeal to the next Legislature for sanction.

If Mr. Kearns has his way, according to the notices, he would take Bernardsville and Bedminster Townships from Somerset county and Passaic Township from Morris county, throwing the three into one county, with Bernardsville as the county seat. Mr. Kearns has a home here.

William J. Kearns is private counsel for Sheriff Harrigan, and yesterday morning he willingly admitted he was behind such a movement as related above. It is his desire, as well as the desire of many other residents in the neighborhood of Bernardsville and other sections, in what he called the "Passaic Valley," to cut loose from Somerset and Morris counties. The inaccessibility of the county seats of these two counties, he said, was one of the principal reasons for this desire.

Mr. Kearns states that included in the section he hopes to embody in "Bernards" are more than $5,500,000 in tax ratables, and that the owners of this property feel they should secure a more representative and equal county representation than they are getting at present. Many of the residents are wealthy property holders, he explained, who dislike immensely going "over the hills" to Somerville in Somerset, or Morristown, in Morris. In other words, they feel, he said, that if they have a deed to file with the county clerk or other business to transact, they should not be obliged or compelled to go to either of these places, both of which, he declared, are inaccessible by rail. Mr. Kearns said he had no idea as to the acreage that would be changed by his proposition.

Asked whom he intended to stand sponsor for the introduction of such a bill in the Legislature, Mr. Kearns said he had not decided. He thought that would be a simple matter, however, as there would be many legislators, as he put it, who would be willing to give the State another Senator. Mr. Kearns, who is a Democrat, admitted there are many Democrats living in "Bernards."

GOV. HUGHES FATHER DEAD.

The Rev. David C. Hughes Dies at Executive Mansion.

There was a recurrence of the attack a week ago, and since that time he had been gradually failing.

$12,000 Fire in Paterson.

Paterson, Dec. 17.—Fire Wednesday afternoon did damage amounting to $12,000 to the stock of Morris A. Schwartz at 111 and 113 Market street. Mr. Schwartz, the owner, is in New Orleans. The only cause which can be assigned for the fire is that two plumbers who were at work on the roof of the building all day Wednesday probably dropped a spark about the top floor and went away without noticing the dangerous light.

FIRE CHIEF'S AUTO CAUSE OF TROUBLE.

The Elizabeth Council Wednesday night failed to pass a resolution authorizing the comptroller to issue a warrant for the payment of Fire Chief August Gerstung's new $1,600 automobile. The Republicans and Councilman Conrad Hall, Democrat, voted adversely. As the machine has already been contracted for by the Board of Fire Commissioners, the action of Council is unusual, and caused somewhat of a surprise. The machine is a mile-a-minute flyer.

At a previous meeting of the Council Mayor Mravlag recommended that the machine be paid for out of the unexpended balance fund. The matter was referred to the finance committee, of which John S. Sauer is chairman, and this committee turned over the matter to the Council. The resolution later introduced provided for the tabling of the resolution. It was carried, and this will result in the matter being brought up at the next meeting.

Councilman Edward Nugent declared that it would be a better move to raise the pay of the firemen than to purchase the auto.

WILL LEXOW CITY.

Board of Trade to Probe Municipal Offices.

Members of the Hoboken Board of Trade have declared Hoboken needs a Lexowing, and they have finally decided to go at this task in a small way; that is, the board will investigate the actions of the City Council, where specific cases of alleged malfeasance of office is brought to its attention.

Before it had been determined just what course to take in the matter there were criticisms made about the manner in which the business of the city was transacted.

Stephen Blazier, of Elmwood place, has returned from a visit at Summit.

Joseph McIntyre, of Watchung avenue, whose chamber music concerts here have been enjoyed so much, is also busy giving similar concerts in New York city and other suburban towns.

WIFE-MURDERER STILL ELUDES AUTHORITIES.

New Brunswick, Dec. 17.—Though George R. Holman murdered his wife almost a year ago, the authorities have failed to find him. It was last Christmas Day that the Holman tragedy was enacted here at a family reunion. Mrs. Holman, who had been estranged from her jealous husband for almost a year, had yielded to entreaty to become reconciled to him, and came here from the German Valley home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Voorhees, to attend the reunion. It was at the dinner hour that Holman shot his wife, and then, as his father entered the room, tried to shoot himself, the weapon missing fire twice. Holman, after crying out, "I shot her! What shall I do?" ran from the house and disappeared.

Prosecutor Booraem says his officers are still at work on the case, but admits that they have no new clues. The police here have heard nothing of Holman since the story of his having been seen at Hackettstown some time ago was printed.

MRS. SCHULTZ SUES FOR ABSOLUTE DIVORCE.

Charging that her husband has been unfaithful, Clara S. Schultz, of Murray Hill, has brought suit for absolute divorce. The petition, which was filed some time ago, shows that the couple were married April 26, 1899, and lived together at Murray Hill until December 1, 1907, at which time, the wife charges, her husband abandoned her.

In conclusion Mrs. Schultz asks the court, in addition to an absolute divorce, to compel her husband to contribute toward her maintenance.

Mr. Schultz is a member of the Baltusrol Golf Club near Summit.

No answer having been filed by the husband, the case was referred to Special Master George S. Hilton, of Paterson, to take testimony ex-parte.

According to the revised figures as contained in Princeton university catalogue, Princeton University's registration for the present academic year is 1,400, the highest ever attained, with the exception of the years 1903 and 1904.

New York State leads in the number of students at the university. The senior class of 237 is smaller than last year, the decrease being due to the raising of the standards within the last four years.

"RAINES LAW" AUTHOR DIES AT CANANDAIGUA.

Canandaigua, N. Y., Dec. 17.—State Senator John Raines died yesterday morning at 1:45 o'clock. Mr. Raines, who had been chief of the Republican forces on the floor of the New York State Senate since his election as its President pro tempore in 1902(in his walk, his facial appearance, his manner of speech and his political methods typified the lion. This was further heightened by his long hair and his wavy mustache.

He began his legislative career in 1881. Some of the most important corporation bills in this State were introduced by Senator Raines, although in later years he turned such work over to other Senators in his confidence. He held out for cheap gas in this city, however, and for the bills drawn by Governor Hughes as counsel for the insurance investigating committee. His most conspicuous legislative work was as author of the election law of New York State and of the famous liquor tax law known as the "Raines law," passed in 1896.

BRAZILIAN IRON MILLS.

Government Aid for Establishing Large Works in So. America.

Consul-General Anderson writes from Rio de Janeiro that there is an apparent opportunity for the profitable investment of American capital through the Brazilian government's efforts to establish an iron-working industry. Soon after taking charge of the government of Brazil as a result of the death of former President Penna, President Pecanha announced that it would be one of the policies of his government to secure the establishment of iron industries in Brazil, both for the purpose of taking advantage of the immense deposits of iron ore known to exist in various part of the country and also to stimulate the industrial developement of the country in those lines, which depend upon iron working as a base.

In line with this announced policy, on July 8 he sent to the Brazilian Congress a mesage in which he outlined his plans and desires and asked of the Congress the authority to give to a company or companies formed for the purpose of working in iron upon a proper scale such government aid as might be necessary to secure such investment of capital. A translation of this message is forwarded (and may be consulted at the Bureau of Manufactures). The matter has been considered in Congress, and a bill known to embody the views of the administration is being passed as rapidly as the desire to express views on the subject permits, a copy of the law in its present and probably final form being forwarded.

In line with the legislation, indeed in anticipation of it, the President has appointed General F. de Cousa Agular, just retiring from the office of perfect of the federal district, as a commissioner to go abroad for the purpose of securing the investment of capital desired in a great iron-working plant. General Agular was the chief personality in the Brazilian commission to the World's Columbia Exposition in Chicago and the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis.

NEW JERSEY PIANO COMPANY

315 WEST FRONT STREET

OPEN EVENINGS H. C. HADLEY, M'r.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

After a short opening engagement in Philadelphia, Charles Frohman will bring "The Arcadians" to New York, where the piece will remain for the balance of the winter.

The fact that three "Thief" companies are still on the road after a year's run in New York, makes Charles Frohman believe in Henri Bernstein as a playwright.

This is one of the wise sayings from "Penelope": "If a man falls in love with a pretty woman he falls out of it. But if he falls in love with a plain one he'll be in love with her all his life."

Lionel Barrymore makes his return to the stage in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's new play, "The Fires of Fate," which Charles Frohman has just brought out in Chicago. Mr. Barrymore plays the part of "Abdulla," an Egyptian dragoman, with great success.

Mrs. William VanDuyn, of the borough, has returned from a visit at East Millstone.

Miss Anna L. Case, who has joined the Metropolitan Opera Company forces, has been singing in Philadelphia, this week. She has one of the minor parts.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Neither Isaac Mackie, the Fox Hills professional, nor George Low, of Balutsrol, will compete in the open tournament to be held on Thursday and Friday over the links of the Atlanta Athletic Club. Mackie intends to sail in about a week for Scotland, while Low will remain in the vicinity of the club, near Short Hills. The new home at Baltusrol is rapidly nearing completion, and the chances are that the members will find it ready for occupancy early in February.

Jack Pearson, the professional, who left the Richmond County Country Club a few weeks ago for a new green near Chicago, has secured a leave of absence for the winter. He reached New York yesterday, and intends to sail in a few days for the other side. It is understood that a number of well known "pros" have applied for the Richmond Country Club job.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Hal Stephens, author of the book of "A Broken Idol," is accredited with giving the theatregoer who delights in musical comedy one of the best books ever presented with a musical setting. In fact the piece, it is asserted, could have every musical number eliminated and still succeed in a straight farce. It is replete with situations which generate laughter waves ranging from ripples to roars for the two acts that it requires to unravel the story, the thread of which is never lost sight of for an instance during the entire presentation. The music, which is by Egbert Van Alstyne and the lyrics by Harry Williams, are on par with the book and the combined results of clever work on the part of the author, composer and lyric writer has been intelligently produced by Gus Sohlke, the celebrated stage director. The play is presented by a cast of unusual excellence. The chorus has been pronounced the best singing and dancing ensemble ever gathered in one company while the special scenery and costume equipment is elaborate and highly artistic. "A Broken Idol" has enjoyed a run of over 300 performances at the Whitney Opera House in Chicago and comes here with all the glamor of its metropolitan success. The entire cast and chorus, which appeared in Chicago, will be brought here tomorrow, matinee and night.

BOY'S NEGLECT COST DEATH OF $250 HORSE.

Freehold, Dec. 17.—A horse valued at $250 belonging to William F. Barkalow, of South street, was struck and killed and the buggy wagon demolished Wednesday night on the South street crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad. David Wilson, fifteen years old, who lives at Mr. Barkalow's, left the horse untied in front of a bakery near the railroad track. The animal started toward home as the 6 o'clock passenger train left the local depot bound for Long Branch and ran into the side of the engine.

The lad was so affected by the accident and the resultant loss to his employer that a physician had to be called to attend him during the night. The gate on the side of the track where the accident occurred has been out of use since November 15, when Abram Bennett, of Fair Haven, with a gunning party in an automobile ran into and demolished it.

Christmas Number.

The New York Sunday World, recognized at home and abroad as America's greatest newspaper, has selected December 19 as the most appropriate date for its special Christmas Number, full of Christmas features. Many publications issue their Xmas number at a date so far in advance of Christmas Day as to lose almost all of the Yule time spirit. The Sunday World's Magazine section will be replete with Christmas Stories and features. There will also be the words and music of a Christmas carol of great merit.

Sussex Grange Program.

Newton, Dec. 17.—The Sussex County Pomona Grange, which convenes here Saturday, January 8, will be addressed by the retiring master, William B. Hough, of Branchville. Charles E. Stickney, editor of the Wantage Recorder, will read an essay on "Borrowing;" Freeholder-elect Charles E. Drake, of Tranquility, will discuss "The Milk Question." A general discussion on "Is There a Feed Trust?" will be led by Robert L. Everett, of Lafayette. A musical program is being arranged by Miss E. Roe, of Augusta.

Lost Leg Boarding Moving Train.

Paterson, Dec. 17.—Charles Gafarana, twenty-six years old, a barber, of 20 Ellison street, while jumping on an Erie train at Ridgewood Wednesday night, lost his hold and fell beneath the wheels, which passed over his left leg. He was brought to this city and taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. At the hospital Gafarana's injury was found to be such that the leg had to be amputated at the knee. The injured man stood the shock of the operation well and there is hope for his recovery.

RECTOR FIRST RECRUIT

a red blooded individual he straightway promised to take care of twenty kids and see to it that they are not disappointed Christmas morning. You will hear from him.

"With sincere admiration for a Good Fellow and deep respect for the type of godness which manifests itself so beautifully in planning for the kids Christmas,

"I am

"Sincerely yours,

"REV. GEO. A. WARNER,

"Friday, December 17, 1909."

Rev. Mr. Warner, who is a great admirer of Judge Ben Lindsay, of Denver, has probably shown more marked interest in the little people than any other Plainfielder of the day. His boys club, at Holy Cross, is the largest and finest organization of its kind in this vicinity. We are glad to welcome him as the first volunteer in the Army of Good Fellows.

Another response received today reads: "I am struck by the worthiness of the appeal made by "Good Fellow." Please send to me the names of ten children."

Captain Hewitt, of the Salvation Army Corps, is the first among those in charge of real charity bureaus to take advantage of "Good Fellow's" suggestion that Santa Claus be notified of little children of the worthy poor. The captain said he was deeply touched by the letter and that he would be only too glad to furnish the names and addresses of deserving cases.

Don't Be A Furnace Slave

The BOYNTON

Square Fire-Pot

PATENTED

reverses the usual order of furnace facts. It requires the least amount of fuel and the least amount of care. In return it gives the biggest, hottest fire you ever knew; a clean, clinkerless fire. It burns all the coal and when you shake it all the dust goes up the chimney. BOYNTON furnaces are clean. They give the maximum of heat for a minimum of expense. We will gladly give you the name of the nearest BOYNTON dealer, so that you may investigate.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

LECTURES TO PUPILS ON HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

H. Crowfut White, who was to have lectured yesterday to the pupils of the North Plainfield High School, but was detained in New York, delivered a lecture this morning on the "Hawaiian Islands," which was decidedly interesting. Mr. White described graphically Mauna Loa, the great volcano which at times is approachable by tourists near enough to inspect the crater.

Climatic conditions, he said, were peculiar. There if anyone wants to inspect the country he must do it at an early hour in the morning or not at all. At all, or thereabouts every day in the year, rain begins and lasts all the rest of the day and far into the night. The average yearly rainfall is 400 inches.

The products of the island are mostly fruits, but they apparently cost as much there as here, with the exception, perhaps, of bananas. The latter, he said, could be purchased for about twenty-five cents for a full bunch. Pineapples sell for five and ten cents each. This price is about what the fruit may be purchased in New York during the pineapple season.

Surf boating is the national pastime and Mr. White's description of this sport was received with applause. More than anything else the Hawaiian is a surf boatman, and he derives his chief pleasure from the sometimes dangerous sport. The lecture lasted for about a half hour and at its conclusion Mr. White was roundly applauded.

INDUSTRIAL HOME'S SUPERINTENDENT TO LEAVE

During the year ending September 4, an average of twelve men have been given employment at the Salvation Army Home. Nine men have found permanent positions in this city, in adition to others who have found employment elsewhere; 13,250 meals have been given; clothing to the value of $260 has been distributed among the men employed, and scores of men have been given work that has helped them over hard times.

Adj. Straubel and wife, who have been in charge of the industrial work for the past sixteen months, have received farewell orders, with instructions to proceed to Lowell, Mass. Their new work is really a promotion, as that city owns its own property, has three times the number of agons, and as the population, which is 1000,000, is in excess of Plainfield, the greater responsibilities and the new field will mean much extra work to the Adj. and his wife, and greater opportunities for service.

Last winter men were given employment who have not been out of work for twenty-five years. Suddenly losing their jobs, they went to the "Work Shop," and were given the so much needed help. Many families, who would have suffered severely during the hard months of the winter, found relief and help at this institution. Not only have the men of the famillies been given work, but the members of many needy families received clothing and shoes to an amount of $53.95.

The most helpful feature of the Home is the store, where clothing is sold at a nominal price; in fact a large number of families find it a necessity to resort to the store to enable them to send their children to school, with necessary shoes and clothing, who could not manage otherwise. It will be of interest to note that during the year, the men ho have been employed at the Home have gathered over 319 tons of newspapers and magazines, the sale of which has largely helped to support the institution.

At Proctor's.

At Proctor's this week Walter Bedell & Co., give a sketch of rural life. Uncle David is a true lovable character and one feels benefitted in seeing the act. Nichols and Croix in their side splitting skit, "The Last Rehearsal," present a humorous side of the theatrical life. Dan Harrington with "Pete," his side partner, is a clever ventriloquist. Deery and Francis as the wise "Rubes" are there with the goods. Did you get a fountain pen? Try your luck tomorrow. The films d'art are the best ever seen in the theatre.

Will Give Christmas Dinners.

The Salvation Army will be prepared to receive applications for Christmas basket dinners at headquarters, 157 East Second street, commencing tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The army officers ask no questions as to one's religious faith.

The large dredge now at work on the filling of the county road from Holly Beach to the mainland is to begin operations in the dredging of the harbor entrance at Cape May, March 25.

The check forger who operated successfully in Woodbury two months ago has been doing business in Mt. Holly. Victimized Woodbury merchants say the signature is the same in both places.

The Huff House, one of Vineland's pioneer show places, in which lived William Huff, the first justice of the peace the town ever had, was burned early yesterday morning. Mrs. Barosky, the present owner, tripped and fell with an oil lamp in her hand and the flames spread. She was alone and escaped with difficulty.

Neighbors were not surprised yesterday when they learned a marriage license had been taken out in New York city by Viola Beatrice Craig, nineteen years old, a daughter of William D. Craig, a business man of Haddonfield, and Edward Hayne Marshall, a student, son of William D. Marshall, also of Haddonfield.

As a result of a straining to lift a stone from a trench, John Figger, a laborer, living on Virginia avenue, Westmont, Camden county, has lost the sight of an eye, and can hardly see out of the other. Specialists give him no hope of retaining the sight in the remaining eye. He has a wife and several small children.

The Cumberland County Board of Taxation is now to direct its attention to the assessors of Millville, who have been much criticized for the loose manner in which, it is charged, they have carried on business. The city officials who have made the charges asked for a hearing, and some sensational developments are anticipated.

Policemen in Atlantic City will not be allowed to solicit presents for their annual Christmas tree, following orders from Chief Woodruff yesterday. "It is all right for people to give presents or money for the tree, but they must not be asked to give up," declared the chief. The presents and money go for the police pension fund.

Vineland's Borough Council Tuesday night vigorously discussed the signs that shut off the view and encroach on the sidewalks. Yesterday morning one of the most prominent signs was found split into kindling wood and scattered over the town. The owner has put detectives on the case and declares he will spend $500 to find the wreckers.

Camp Gerardin, United Spanish War Veterans, announced yesterday it would protest to Mayor-elect Cain, of Bayonne, and the members of the next Council against the removal of war veterans from the service of the city when the Democrats take control on January 1. Should an attempt be made to remove them the camp will appeal to the courts.

Placed under arrest while asleep at their homes yesterday on a charge of stealing a silver chatelaine bag out of the hands of Miss Margaret Fox, of 428 Royden street, while she was on her way home, Elmer Calloway, fourteen years old; Steve Polinack, thirteen years old, and Albert Jones, twelve years old, made a confession in the Camden Police Court yesterday and were held to await the action of Judge Joline.

Shocked by the receipt of a letter in a scrawling hand, bearing a black hand at the bottom, and threatening to kill her, Mrs. A. Friedly, proprietor of an Atlantic City hotel, yesterday turned the letter over to Postmaster Bacharach and asked that he make such use of it as he thought would be advisable. The threat was made because she had reduced the price of board for the winter. Postmaster Bacharach thinks the letter is a hoax, but, nevertheless, is having a search made to find out the sender, who, under the postal laws, can be punished if convicted.

Supposed to be a counter move in the pure water fight which has engaged the attention of Burlington citizens for years and which was supposed to have terminated when the Board of Water Commissioners, some weeks ago, awarded a contract for a chemical filtration plant, instead of an artesian system favored by a citizens' committee, an ordinance was introduced in the Council Tuesday night, the purpose of which is to oust the present Water Board and permit the Council to appoint a new board next month. Under a suspension of the rules the ordinance passed second and third readings.

SAILING OVER MOUNTAIN PEAKS

San Jacinto and San Bernardino were blue behind when luck forgot us and our globule of floating gas, writes J. H. Hutchson in Harper's Weekly. The barometer was firm at 16,500 feet when the wind turned fickle. With the sweep of a northern chinook, from the south, where the waters of the Gulf of California breed coolness, a whipping breeze clutched the balloon. Our flight was checked, and from the warmth of a moment before, we shivered.

Instantly the gas contracted. The needle that showed our height trembled and whirled away from the three-mile mark. I gasped as we fell and looked at Mueller for the signal "Sand overboard." He had seized the barometer in his hand. Its point flew toward zero.

The desert rushed up to meet us. Sagebrush and cactus that had been mere dots sprang into vivid relief. Hills became mountains while the watch ticked once. Bottomless canyons yawned under us with jaws wide for prey from the skies. In all the wilderness of rock and ruin there was but one tiny spot of yellow sand where death, perhaps, would look the other way.

My ears seemed to burst. Blood rushed to my head and drummed in my temples. My head reeled in the heavier atmosphere. I saw the horizon that had been a thousand leagues away swept out of sight by the teeth of the peaks that hemmed us in. And still we dropped as though a catapult had hurled us.

Mueller said never a word. Motionless, he watched the patch of level sand. A reef of lava, sharp as a knife, bordered it. Yet he made no sign.

He dropped the barometer and clutched at a sandbag. The ground seemed crouching for the blow, and I heard through the throbbing of my ears a voice that shouted: "Hang to the ring! Don't jump!"

I grabbed at the stout wooden ring that held the ropes above my head. We struck. Sand flew into my face and my head roared with the terrific impact. My body swung across the basket and flattened Mueller against the riggin. Then, before I had time to think, we were racing skyward again, and I was lying limp against the wickerwork.

As rapidly as a moment before it had whirled to zero, the barometer was now dancing over the thousands toward the black mark that registered 16,500 feet, as far as the barometer would go. Again we were back in the skies, and the next as suddenly snatched us from the claws of rock.

So fast did we rise that we shot through the colder wind in the rush of a second. The barometer needle cast a shadow on the last mark on the dial, and still the big bag of gas careened upward. Mueller had brushed the dust from his face, and now stood silent, watching the world drop away.

"Eighteen thousand," he figured, "nineteen, twenty—we're far over twenty thousand and still rising."

Here our lost wind gripped us again, and we went kiting eastward. The San Jacintos were but a mere blur of fading blue, and the hollow into which we had been thrown was far lost among the desert ranges that our speed piled behind us.

MAY SELL UNCLE SAM'S UNUSED BUILDINGS, ETC.

Washington, Dec. 17. — Such "sleepers" on Uncle Sam's inventory of real and personal property as federal buildings no longer used and property acquired for federal building sites, but no longer needed by the government, are to be disposed of. The acting Secretary of the Treasury has asked Congress for authority to sell all such property to the highest bidder after twenty days' advertisement.

No Relief to Him.

"When you are angry," said the man of gentle instincts, "stop and count a hundred."

"A hundred!" echoed Mr. Sirus Barker, "if I could stop at a hundred in counting up my wife's milliners' bills I wouldn't be angry."—Washington Star.

The Reason Of It.

Wifey—What do you think, Henry, I dreamed last night that I was in a box party at the opera and——"

Hubby—Ah! That explains why you were talking so loud in your sleep.

Shamrock II.'s Mast for Flagstaff.

Cape May, Dec. 17.—The mast of the Shamrock II., purchased of Captain Barr when that vessel was dismantled about a year after her series of races, has been kept here since its arrival, carefully attended, in readiness for use when its owners decide where to place it. Its elevation is to occur with the completion of the harbor, and a great flag is to float from it on that occasion, while its raising will be made a ceremonial. Sir Thomas Lipton, Captain Barr and other yachting notables will be present, if possible.

THE BEST DOWER FOR THE BRIDE.

"The character that a young woman takes with her in her marriage is her eral dower. If her dower can be reckoned in money or property only, no matter how much it may be, poor indeed will be the husband and impoverished the children. But if she possesses gentleness, love, purity and self-denial, together with intelligence and capability, she is in herself a treasure of treasures to all the members of the home circle."

This is true enough. The young woman who has the homemaking spirit brings to her husband a dower of inestimable value, and she who lacks it will never be likely to make her home the place it should be for herself or for others. There is a crying need of more real homemakers. Domestic discord will decrease as the homemakers increase. One is sometimes led to conjecture as to whether all of this vaunted higher education of girls and women has enough of the homemaking element in it, and is the woman's club doing all that it might do to put more real homemakers into the world. Home is what the mother and wife make it. Of course, all of the responsibility is not theirs, but they lead and direct more than it is possible for anyone else to lead or direct, and they cannot relegate their duties to others. It was but the other day that the writer heard a young woman who is soon to be married say that she "just hated all kinds of housework" and that she "couldn't bear the sight of a kitchen." No doubt she was quite right when she said with a laugh that she guessed there would be some "great housekeeping" in her home.

As this young woman is to marry a young fellow with a salary of $25 a week, and they are to live in a city in which they will have to pay a fourth of the husband's income for rent, he cannot afford to hire that uncertain thing we call "help," and if he had the wealth of a Vanderbilt he could not hire the home feeling that only the wife can give to the home. The best dower a young wife can bring to her husband is the willingness and the ability to make their home the place he has a right to expect that it will be.

Correcting Her.

"I thought I should laugh right out," said Mrs. Cashton, "when at the circus recently Mrs. Smith called an animal a seraph. Of course, she meant a giraffe; but the fun of it was it wawsn't a giraffe. It was a camomile."—The Christian Register.

DOUBLE RULE IN MUKDEN.

Chinese and Japanese Share Jurisdiction There.

There are two distinct jurisdictions in Mukden—Chinese and Japanese. The Japanese jurisdiction comes through the South Manchurian Railway, a concession originally given to the Russians, and after the war formally transferred to the Japanese. By virtue of the right to protect the railroad, the Japanese have a distinct police system of their own, with the Consul-General as their commander; a military garrison, with the Consul-General at its head; an extra-territorial court, with the Consul-General as high judge. There is also a separate Japanese telephone and telegraph system.

But what impressed me most appeared when going with the Consul-General Koike in his carriage, with its picturesquely uniformed Chinese driver and no less picturesque outrider, to call upon the American Consul, Mr. Cloud. We stopped to get some money changed at the Mukden branch of that world-wide and truly great financial institution, the Yokohama Specie Bank. To get quick service, the Consul-General took me in by a side door. In going through a short hall to the banking chamber proper, I passed an open doorway, through which I saw, in a small room, with cartridge belts slung and rifles in hand, as if ready for instant call, six or eight Japanese regulars. A file of such soldiers does garrison duty on the premises day and night. What is the reason?

Mr. Koike said, as is in explanation, that the bank building was being reconstructed and new vaults being put in, and that the place therefore needed protection against robbers.

But why not watchmen and, if necessary, some policemen? Why soldiers? And will the soldiers cease garrison duty after the new building is finished? Probably not.

The Japanese in Mukden are few. The total population of the ancient city is perhaps 200,000—the Chinese themselves do not seem to know exactly. The Japanese keep a strict count of their own numbers—3,500. Of these 300 are soldiers and 300 police. As to the idea of the whole Manchurian situation posed. Manchuria consists of three provinces, together embracing an area approximating that of France, but the population is only 2,500,000, as against France's 50,000,000. The lowest or most southerly of the these provinces—Shengking—contains 1,500,000 inhabitants.—Henry George, Jr., in Collier's.

TOLD OF GENERAL WHEELER.

"It was at Montauk, during the war with Spain. With several other officers, I was in General Wheeler's tent, and we were busy with details of supplying the hospitals," says a writer in the New York Times.

"Outside there was a group of civilians. They were waiting to get passes to see friends in the hospital. Most of them carried baskets filled with dainties, which had to be inspected, so that the soldiers would not be killed with kindness.

"Among the civilians, there was one who was burdened by nothing heavier than his solid sadness. They had all crowded close, in their eagerness to get the passes, when one of the officers of the medical corps, ordered the sergeant to shove them back, and, with unnecessary gruffness, told them to go about their business, as Genrel Wheeler was too busy to see them for some hours.

The big man—he looked to be a German, and he was one—was instant in obedience; but the others were moving back slowly, whwen Wheeler threw open the flap of his tent and asked whwat the trouble was.

"'Here are a lot of people,' the officer replied, 'who want hospital passes. None of us has had anything to eat since breakfast and so I told them to go away.'

"'As I have had no luncheon in three days,' Wheeler replied, 'I think you might miss lunch just once,' and then he turned to the group.

"The big German drew himself into as soldierly a position as his age and robustness would permit. He saluted as they do in Europe, palm forward. General Wheeler advanced, answered the salute, and asked what he could do for him.

"'I know by telegraph mine boy is dead,' said the German. 'My frau is too much mid sorrow to come, and, respectfully, general, I want his body to bury in the Lutheran cemetery. You will that permit?'

"General Wheeler extended both hands to his visitor, and said: 'My heart is with you, sir, and I am at your service. There are horrors and glories in war. You have been a soldier?'

"'Yes. I was hit three times at Sedan.'

"'Then you are proud that your boy died for his flag?'

"'Yes, and God bless you, general.'

"Then General Wheeler said: 'I want you to see that this gentleman is given the body of his son, and that it is escorted to the train with a guard of honor.'"

Thomas A. C. to Play Here.

The Thomas A. C., of Newark, will meet the Plainfield Association football club on the Clinton avenue grounds, tomorrow morning at 3 o'clock. The players want to complete the game within ninety minutes, owing to the fact that the days are now much shorter. The Plainfielders are looking for another victory, but they will have to show improved form over last week, as the Thomas A. C. is considered one of the strongest teams playing soccer.

Good Basketball Games.

The first basketball team of the Y. M. C. A. and the second team will play the Elizabeth association first and second teams at Elizabeth, tonight, and tomorrow night the first team will play the Marathons, of Westfield, here and the second team will play N. P. H. S. team between the halves.

P. H. S. vs. N. P. H. S.

The P. H. S. and N. P. H. S. basketball teams will play their first games at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this afternoon in the interscholastic series for the local championship. A lively game is anticipated as the teams are evenly matched and there is great rivalry.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE'S PRESENTS FOR OFFICIALS.

The Piscataway Township Committee met at Harkins' Hotel, at New Market, yesterday afternoon and made a generous distribution of Christmas presents to the township officials by raising their salaries. This was done through the adoption on third reading of an ordinance calling for the increase. In each case the raise amounted to $250.

The salary of Tax Assessor George Coriell was made $800 and that of Tax Collecor William P. LaRue was made $800. A public hearing was granted before a vote on the ordinance was taken, and it was found that there were very few objectors to the raise in salaries.

Laughing, Lazy Fat Folks Made Slim Without Drugs

During the cold weather fat people stay at home and do not care much about removing fat. They eat heartily and dress warmly. This time of year is the one above all others in which flesh should be removed. The winter has a peculiar action on the blood. We all know how our skin contains pimples and boils break out in the spring owing to the stagnation and sluggishness of the winter blood supply. In the fat this condition is appalling. If you will go to your nearest druggist and buy a case of Marmola tablets you will stop making fat at once and you may eat when and what you will and the fat will leave you at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day and more than that you will not be left with large, flabby rolls of skin and deep wrinkles.

These tablets are made after the famous Marmola Prescription and were so made to supply a great demand for a handy fat reducer that every one could carry in a purse or vest pocket so that after any meal they could be taken and evil consequence from such a meal thus avoided. If you can not secure Marmola tablets from your druggist or should you so prefer send 75 cents, the price of a large case, to The Marmola Company, Dept. 988, Detroit, Mich., and they will send Marmola tablets to you in a plain sealed package postage prepaid.

YOUNG WOMEN CLERKS' SUPPERS AT Y. W. C. A.

The Young Women's Christian Association has announced that beginning next Monday night the house committee will serve a light lunch or supper each evening during next week for fifteen cents, for the benefit of the young women clerks who have to work late in the stores. Those who do not want to eat a meal and who bring a lunch of their own may enjoy their lunches in the rooms and get hot tea and coffee for a moderate price.

The association also wishes to announce that women shoppers during the week will be welcomed to the rooms for periods of resting.

Fell From Ladder.

John Lannon, a stone mason of West Front stret, fell from a ladder while at work in the Seventh-Day Baptist church yesterday, and was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital unconscious. He revived later and this morning was reported to be so much better that he will leave the hospital tomorrow. Lannon was considerably bruised, but no bones were broken.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

The whisky was warming her veins and steadying her nerves. She felt that it was doing her good.

"But what'll I tell Patsy?" she said. "She must have found out long ago that I had left the Long Acre, and she'll be wondering what's become of me. I'd rather go—much rather."

She took another sip at the glass.

"Never mind about Patsy," laughed Crawford. "She has to stay at the theater; she's chorus leader and can't leave till it's all over, because the chorus is on till final curtain fall. Then it will take her some time to dress and join the old people, and it will be nearer midnight than 11 by the time they reach your flat, even if Mallory takes them straight there. All you will have to do will be to put a handkerchief around your head, as if it were aching, and say you left because you felt ill. No one will ever be the wiser. And you won't be telling a fib either when you say you were feeling badly. Just now you were really ill. But you are better now, aren't you?"

He took her hand and stroked and pressed it.

"Warm as toast," he declared.

"Oh, yes; I feel much better," she admitted.

"That's right. I'm so glad, because we are going to have a little supper together," he said.

"Supper? Oh, no," she declined, visions of the Fifth avenue caravansary rising before her.

"Oh, yes," he affirmed, in the same tone.

"I couldn't. What would people think of me if I went like this?"

"But we're not going anywhere. We will stay right here, us two, by the fire."

"Not tonight. Some other time."

"Tonight—this very night. It's ordered and will be here in a few minutes, so, you see, you simply have to stay."

"Well, if it's ordered But do you think it's right?"

"Right? What is there wrong about it? What's the difference whether you lunch with me in a restaurant or have supper with me here?"

Nora felt there was a good deal of difference, but she said:

"I don't know."

"There isn't any," he declared, with an accent of conviction and finality.

Rogers entered and spread a snowy cloth on the little table, which he placed in front of the fire. Then he brought in a tray laden with the repast and the bottles of wine.

"Put the tray on yonder chair. I will do the serving," said his master, going to the windows and letting the double curtains fall.

The valet deposited his burden as directed and vanished.

Crawford was brimming over with gayety, and Nora began to enter into the spirit of it. The few sips of whisky were warming her blood and making her bold and at her ease. She wanted to help him set the table. He gently forced her back into the chair against the cushion, and the cloak slipped from her shoulders.

"You sit there, and don't you dare to move," he ordered, holding up a warning finger.

"But I'm not an invalid," she protested laughingly.

"Yes, you are—the dearest, sweetest little invalid in the world," he said, bending and looking into her eyes, "and, as I have already told you, I'm your doctor, and I'm going to give you your medicine—there!"

He kissed her full on the mouth.

"Why, what's the matter?" he laughed, before she could formulate the shocked protest rising to her lips, as she gathered her cloak about her again. "It isn't the first time I've kissed you. Do you remember?"

She joined in the hilarity the memory of it evoked.

"Wasn't Patsy mad!" he said.

"She just was," agreed Nora.

"I wonder what she'd say if she could see us now?"

Nora became serious and did not answer. He switched off from the subject quickly.

"Listen to 'the rat-ta-too o' knives an' forks and the clinkety clink o' glasses,'" he rattled on, adding, as he turned to her with a low bow: "Mademoiselle est servie—which is parlez voo for saying that this feast of eminent reason has been spread and waits but the honor of being partaken of by she who is to preside over it."

"Oh, you mean supper's ready," said Nora.

"That's what," he answered. "But your majesty had better sit on this higher chair. You'll be more comfortable. And, here, give me your cloak."

"No. I'll keep it on, thank you," she said.

"And catch your death of cold when you go out—no sirree," he retorted playfully, taking hold of it and trying to unhook it.

She resisted and retreated from him.

"Mr. Crawford," she declared, "I'm not going to take it off."

"But you must," he urged. "It isn't polite to dine with it on. Ladies never do such a thing."

"I don't care," she said decisively. "I'm not a lady, only a chorus girl, and I'm going to keep it on, and if you don't behave I'll go away this minute and never come here any more."

He saw it would not do to insist.

"The slave of the ring obeys," he drawled, crossing his hands on his breast with a comical look of resignation. "I'm a good boy, 'as meek as digestin' deacons be at ordination dinners.'"

This made her laugh, and they sat down to the table.

"Isn't it jolly to be together like this? I wish you could come often," he said.

"It would be nice," she admitted.

He poured out the Margaux.

"I dote on these good red wines," he observed. "They are like rubies. They glow with concentrated heat and sunshine. They are a poem of warmth and love and beauty—the warmth and beauty of southern climes, where they know how to love. See how entrancing its color is."

He held the glass up to the light.

"I can't say I'm stuck on red wine; it's too sour," avowed Nora, with her mouth full of the dainty pastry of a bouche a la reine. "I never tasted any till you took me to lunch, and I drank it then because I thought it was the thing to do at that swell place. I must say I prefer beer. We always have beer at home."

"Nora," he sighed, "you have a whole lot to learn, and I am going to teach you. Try some of this champagne. It's nearly the color of beer anyhow."

"I certainly like it better," she said after tasting it.

"Do you know I took a fancy to you the very first moment I saw you?" he went on.

"Yes?" she answered questioningly.

"It's true. You are a dear little girl, the sweetest I have ever known, and as pretty as a picture."

"Oh, Mr. Crawford, go on!" she remonstrated, but looking pleased.

"I mean it, by jiminy. You are too good for that crowd at the Long Acre."

"You have been very good to me," she said.

"Not as good as I should like to be and will be if you will let me."

He gazed at her meaningly and very tenderly.

CHAPTER X.

"Do you know, you remind me of a rose?" continued Crawford. "I would like to cover you with roses."

"How can you say such things?"

"Did you ever hear of Heliogabalus?"

"I never did."

"No, I suppose not. He was a Roman emperor. He used to give grand banquets and then smother the guests to death as they sat at the feast by causing a rain of rose leaves to fall on them until they were covered. Your white arms, decked with bracelets of large diamonds held by a thin thread and projecting from a heap of rose leaves, would look magnificent."

"Excuse me," commented Nora, holding out her glass for more champagne. "Especially if they were faded roses, like those over there. Who gave them to you—Tat?"

He gazed at her open mouthed, stupefied.

"Tat!" he repeated. "Where did you hear of Tat?"

"That's easy. She's up there on the chimneypiece, all surrounded by a brand new wreath of silver."

A gleam of understanding and of victory came into his eyes. Nora was jealous.

"Don't you think she's very pretty?" he asked.

"H'm. Not so much," she replied, pursing her lips.

"You don't seem to like her?"

"I don't like her or dislike her. I don't know anything about her," she declared, with an exaggerated assumption of indifference.

"She's my sister. I got that frame for her portrait yesterday, and really I thought I had put it in the other room. She is married unhappily. Her husband's a brute and treats her badly, and when she came here alone from St. Louis to visit our family a few years ago I gave her a good time, as she says. Perhaps you prefer gardenias to roses?" he inquired, changing the subject. "I think there is something exquisite, something inebriating, something passion inspiring in their perfume, don't you?"

He took the flower from his coat and handed it to her.

"I think it's beastly," she said, with a grimace, giving it back to him. "It smells like a dead rat in a stable. Did Tat give that to you too?"

He laughed and, moving over to her, placed his arm around her shoulders.

"Little girl," he said, "I believe you're jealous."

"The idea!" she answered, looking down. "Why should I be jealous?"

"You needn't be. And you do care for me a little bit, don't you?"

He took her hand and placed it against his cheek.

"Y-Yes," she faltered.

With a cry of joy he lifted her and, folding her in his arms, covered her face and mouth with greedy kisses.

"My Nora, my beautiful treasure. I love you—love you—love you! You are mine!" he murmured passionately.

Her head was swimming with the wine and the violence of his embrace, but she struggled to free herself.

"Don't, Mr. Crawford, don't!" she panted, pushing his face from her. "Let me go or I will scream for help."

A succession of quick, persistent "drings" of the doorbell caused him to pause. They were followed by the sounds of an altercation.

"What the devil's that?" ejaculated Crawford.

"You can't see him, miss," they heard Rogers expostulate. "He isn't here."

"But I can and will see him, and if he isn't here I'll wait till he comes, and you won't prevent me."

"Patsy! I am lost!" gasped Nora in horror.

THE retail merchant's telephone serves not only as a salesman, but also as a purchasing agent.

When a merchant finds that he is going to run out of a line of goods, he calls up the wholesaler or factory and not only orders a new stock, but comes to an agreement on the price and the time of delivery.

The unexpected needs of his customers can be met with the least possible delay.

If the merchant cannot find what he wants in town, the Long Distance Service of the Bell System brings him into immediate communication with other cities and other markets.

COUNTY GUARD PLANS FAVORED BY FARMERS

President E. R. Collins, of the Union County Board of Agriculture, was one of the principal speakers Tuesday at a farmers institute and a meeting of the Bergen County Board of Agriculture held in Kingsland. The Bergen county board decided to co-operate with the Union county board in advancing the project of securing a county police patrol for the protection of farmers from the raids of orchard and crop thieves.

It developed that the farmers of Bergen county are having the same trouble with petty thieves as the farmers are having in this county. President Collins' idea of having the fish and game laws radically changed as one of the remedies for improving conditions was endorsed yesterday. Mr. Collins' plan of making hunting in a county a question for local option with the farmers to be decided by a vote of the agriculture boards, met with great favor. If this end cannot be gained the Bergen county farmers are in favor of co-operating with the Union county farmers in getting legislation which will change the hunting laws so that property will be closed to hunters unless farmers put up notices saying that it is permitted.

The Union county board will meet Thursday afternoon in the Courthouse at Elizabeth. Early in the fall the executive committee outlined a course of lectures to be given by professors of the State Agricultural College on varnous subjects of interest to the farmers. The series will begin today when Jacob G. Lipman, professor of soil bacteriology, will give an address on soil preparation and soil fertility.

It is planned to make each meeting somewhat similar to an agricultural college. The farmers will be asked questions and will study the subject discussed, aided by text books. County Superintendent of Schools Savitz has announced the meeting today to the principals of the various schools and advised them to attend. The older pupils in the high schools will be given permission to be at the meeting.

FOWLER IS BUYING THE MARBLE LANDS.

Representative Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, has just completed negotiations for the purchase of ten acres of the most valuable marble property in northern Vermont. The sale was made by P. M. Meldon, W. H. Peck, of Meredith, N. H.; H. S. Bingham, of Bennington, and Harrison Hanley, of North Adams, Mass.

Mr. Fowler, who is president of the Rutland Florence Marble Company, of Fowler, Vt., has had an option on this property for the past three months, and has taken cores, which indicate the marble running through the tract is unexcelled by any other in this country, and compares very favorably with some of the finest Italian variety.

It is understood Mr. Fowler intends to develop the property at once, giving employment to about 100 men.

FOOTBALL GOES ON IN ORANGE.

Board of Education Unmoved by Appeals to Prohibit Game.

The Orange Board of Education, unmoved by the appeals of the Superintendent of Schools, James G. Riggs, and other Boards of Education in the vicinity, since Albert P. Wibiralske was killed in a football game, has refused to prohibit the game of Rugby football among the pupils of the High School.

The Superintendent thought the board could accomplish much by forbidding the game, but admitted that, no matter what the board might do, the boys would probably play if they wanted to. Agreeing with the Superintendent in that respect, the board has decided not to act.

BACK BROKEN, ASKS $75,000.

Man Injured By Falling Wall Starts Suit Against Company.

The suit of Axel Holm to recover $75,000 from the General Chemical Company, of New York, with an extensive plant at Edgewater, was begun before Circuit Court Judge Black at Hackensack Wednesday.

Mr. Holm's back was broken last June when a falling wall struck him. He was carried into court on a stretcher and lay on the floor as he gave his evidence. His right leg was broken in two places and, it is said, one foot will have to be amputated, gangrene having set in. Both legs are said to be paralyzed. The defence will be contributory negligence.

Scissors That Cut Glass.

Mervin Bard, of Millville, twenty years old, is the inventor of a mechanical sheras to be attached to glass blowing machines, for the purpose of clipping off the molten glass from bottles. The new device will do away with the necessity of employing a man for that purpose at each machine.

Never So Bad As That.

THEIR HEARTS TOUCHED

Santa Claus Receives Many Fine Letters from the "Good Fellows."

MANY WOMEN ARE ENLISTING.

Army Growing Rapidly and a Merry Christmas for Poor Little Ones Seems Assured.

Santa Claus has in his possession a list of over 500 little ones, whose Christmas will be made a merry one if enough recruits join the Army of Good Fellows; and whose Christmas otherwise will be a sad disappointment. The letter of "Good Fellow," yesterday has struck a popular chord as is shown by the number of letters Santa Claus has received.

Santa Claus wishes it understood that he receives no money. Already mistakes have been made in this respect. The whole thing is purely anonymous. There is no notoriety nor no advertising of any sort for any contributor. To thoroughly comprehend the plan, we advise everyone to read the letter of "Good Fellow."

A $5 bill was received this morning from a man who has always been known as a good fellow. He says he won't be here on Christmas, but wants to help the poor little children. He nominated, however, a local clergyman to act as his proxy in impersonating Santa Claus. The same mistake was made by a local men's association in one of the churches. They were anxious to help the cause and last night quickly raised $5. This sum, also, has been transmitted to the same clergyman, who promises to act as Santa for a number of tots. Please don't send any money to this paper; we don't want it. Address a letter to Santa Claus, care of The Daily Press, and he will give you the names of children who can be made happy by you direct.

Miss Holly, of the Charities Organization Association, today endorsed the undertaking. She is heart and soul for the cause and has compiled a list of worthy children which is now in Santa Claus' possession.

Among the batch of letters received by him, Santa Claus thinks that this one should be published and "Good Fellow" thoroughly agrees with him:

"Dear Santa Claus:—

"I saw Good Fellow's letter in The Daily Press and I hope he has no objection to a school girl's desire to join his club.

"I am now fourteen years old, but I have not gotten over anticipating your annual visit, and recall the ones you made in my earlier days with unmeasurable pleasure.

"Now, dear Santa Claus, if you know of some family in Plainfield, who do not have a Christmas tree, and with two or three small children, who have no bad marks on your books, please send me their address. I will see that they get a Christmas tree on Christmas eve, with the tinsel and popcorn, ornaments and candles, etc., and will also be Santa Claus to them.

"I wonder if there are not lots of others who would like to do the same?"

This was received from a "Good Fellow" yesterday afternoon:

"I read your article in last night's paper and I think it is an excellent suggestion. Will you please send me the names and addresses of ten children."

The first woman to join the Army of Good Fellows says: "Please send the names of four children."

Another good woman who has joined the ranks writes: "I want to join your lodge of Good Fellows. I will be Santa Claus to one little boy, say eight or ten years old, not for myself, but for one who has gone to Heaven."

Here's an extract from another letter received by Santa Claus today: "If you will send me the names of five children it will please me to try and make them happy."

Mrs. Emma K. Frazee President.

The Women's Relief Corps, at an adjourned meeting last night, elected Mrs. Emma K. Frazee president to succeed Mrs. S. R. Struthers, whose term expired. It was decided to hold a joint installation with the G. A. R. Post on Tuesday night, January 11, and arrangements are being made to hold an entertainment on Friday night, January 7.

Charles Elliott Injured.

Charles Elliott, of Scotch Plains, who is employed by F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, received a severe injury to his hand yesterday. He was working at Oak Tree and in cutting down a tree to take measurements, he chopped his hand, lacerating several fingers. He returned to Plainfield and sought the services of a physician.

"BABY PARTY" GIVEN BY MISS LEVERIDGE

Miss Mary Leveridge, of 820 Sherman avenue, gave a "baby party" at her home last night, which was enjoyed by a large number of friends. As was to be expected from the cleverly-worded invitations all expected something original at the party and they were not disappointed. Everyone was expected to attend dressed as children, and there were guests from New York city, Philmont and Yonkers, N. Y., and this city.

All were "attired as kids, not all but partly," according to the invitations. Some of the costumes were ludicrous in the extreme and were the cause of much merriment. There were nurse girls, Buster Browns, The Three Twins, coy little maidens and awkard school boys. The parlors were decorated with red and green bunting, which was used effectively.

During the early part of the evening kids' games of all kinds were played. The guests adjourned to the dining room about midnight, where supper was served. The room was beautifully decorated, too, with red and green butning. The table with covers laid for twenty-four was artistically arranged. Three small Chrismas trees were used in the decorative scheme. The favors were miniature owls. While seated at the table it was learned that Miss Leveridge's birthday anniversary occurred on Wednesday last and three rousing cheers and a "tiger" were given with a will. Congratulations were showered on Miss Leveridge. After supper games and dancing were enjoyed until an early hour this morning. Miss Mary Leveridge was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Charles W. Leveridge, in receiving.

CIRCLES ON SQUARE BY ONE NOT A MEMBER

Charles Murphy, of Berkeley Heights, who says he is not a member of the "Circles on The Square" came to town yesterday to buy an axe, but for some reason or other he thought it would require some courage not usually supplied by an altruistic motive, so he got some applejack to help out.

When he facel Judge Runyon in the city court this morning he had repented of the dereliction from strict duty and was allowed to return to Berkeley Heights without the formality of paying a fine but the next time he forgets to attend to business he will become a guest of the county for a period of sixty days.

TO HOLD CHRISTMAS EXERCISES TOMORROW.

Christmas Sunday will be observed at the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school tomorrow by a service of musical interest. The program includes exercises by the main school and primary department; carols by the school; selection by an orchestra of fifteen pieces, and "The Christmas Story," told in her pleasing way by Miss Ruth Angel, of New York. Miss Angel has spoken in several of the churches of Plainfield, and always enjoys the closest attention of her audience because of her interesting talks and pleasing manner.

In connection with these Christmas exercises, the Superintendent, George E. Hall, has asked for donations of toys, games, clothing and provisions—all such articles to be sent to the Plainfield Day Nursery for the children's Christmas. A cordial invitation is extended to all to enjoy this program with the school. Exercises will begin promptly at 2:30 o'clock.

Dr. Chambliss to Preach.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will preach morning and evening at the First Baptist church, tomorrow. In the morning his theme will be "For Duty's Sake or Love's—Which?" and in the evening, "The God of All Comfort." On Sunday, December 26, special Christmas services will be held by the choir and the Sunday school, for which a special program is being prepared.

Mr. Hooley's Meadowview Yale also won over the Invincible Fleet dog "Southport Hero," conceded to be the best dog in England and only recently imported by Tyler Morse, the well known Boston millionaire. Mr. Morse is said to have paid $4,700 for Hero. James Mortimer, who is manager of the great New York show, was the presiding judge and as he is considered to be the foremost judge in America the honor comes to the Plainfield dog from the greatest authority in this country.

Mr. Hooley was kept busy answering the telephone late yesterday and this morning to accept the congratulations of his friends on his remarkable victory.

The Meadowview Kennels were also successful in the English setter class as the following awards will show:

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION TO BE GIVEN BY MAYOR

Mayor Fisk intends to keep open house on New Year's Day at the office in the Smalley building. He will be there from noon until 4 in the afternoon of that day and will be pleased to see all those who would like to call upon him.

In making this announcement Mayor Fisk said that he thought the custom was a good one and it ought to be perpetuated. His forthcoming message is likely to be an interesting document and in making the facts clear to the taxpayers the Mayor will delve deep into the intricacies of municipal bookkeeping and lay bare the facts of the city's actual financial condition.

It is more than probable that some of those who have adversely criticised the Mayor and Common Council will have their eyes opened to a condition which they have failed to realize. Of course it would not do to give out any of the figures here, but it will undoubtedly surprise many to know that the city is in a far healthier condition financially than most of the citizens believe.

At any rate it will be a message in which the work of the Council and the Mayor will be reviewed in a manner to leave no questions unanswered, at least questions which directly concern those who pay taxes. The message will probably be read at the meeting which will be postponed from Friday, December 31, to the following Friday.

DUNELLENITES OPPOSE GRANTING A LICENSE

The citizens of Dunellen are greatly agitated over the application of W. W. Oliver, of New Brunswick, for a saloon license at South avenue and Chestnut street, in what was formerly known as Wyckoff's hotel. Arrangements have been made for a large delegation to go to New Brunswick next Friday to attend the hearing to be granted by the court on the matter. They are prepared to enter a vigorous protest and believe that it will have such weight that the court will deny the application.

The residents of Dunellen are of the opinion that there are now a sufficient number of licensed places in Dunellen and the fact that the new application, if granted, would place a saloon near the Levering & Garrigues' Works, is the cause for a more determined remonstrance on the part of the residents. Even those who are not prohibitionists or temperance in any degree, are opposed to the opening of a new place. They claim that there is no room for another saloon in Dunellen and want to see the court turn down the application.

The place applied for was once a wholesale place and the proprietor was found guilty of retailing liquor, against the law. Soon afterward the place was closed. Residents in the immediate vicinity of the place are strongly opposed to the court granting another license there and they will join the large delegation going to New Brunswick to protest against favorable action.

FINED FOR SELLING CIGARETTES TO BOYS

It is not profitable to any man to break the law, and it is less so when a storekeeper violates the ordinance which prohibits the sale of cigarettes to minors. Abraham Wolf, who keeps a store at 428 West Front street, was fined five dollars this morning by City Judge William Runyon and had to submit to a severe lecture besides.

John Coffey, a thirteen-year-old lad, told the court that he had bought the objectionable weeds from Wolf, and that Wolf had not questioned him as to his age. Of course, the boy was sorry that he had indulged in the forbidden smoke, but that didn't let Wolf out.

Being the Hebrew Sabbath, Mr. Wolf could not see his way clear to pay the fine today, but he will pay it on Monday and will probably remember that the laws must be obeyed regardles of money getting.

DUTCH ARMS MEN'S CLUB HELPS OUT SANTA CLAUS

The Dutch Arms, the men's club of Trinity Reformed church, held their regular business meeting in the Sunday-school room last night and after the formalities were over enjoyed some excellent recitations by Addison Hoyt.

Mr. Hoyt's entertainment was quite adequate to the demands made upon him and he was acompanied in his musical selections by Charles Suhr. Two new members were added to the club last night.

A suggestion that the members aid Santa Claus and the Good Fellow, as outlined in the recent issues of The Daily Press, received instant recognition and as the members passed out contributions were deposited in a receptacle at the door. The amount realized for Santa Claus was almost five dollars which will be put to the best use for a happy visitation to some who will scarcely expect the good Saint to call at their homes.

The program of music to be rendered by Orangist R. L. Laslett Smith at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock will include the following selections: Toccata in E minor, Callerets; Scherzo, Hoffman; Melodia, West; and Chansonette, Gaston de Lille.

Peace and Arbitration Day.

Peace and Arbitration Day will be observed by the W. C. T. U. at their rooms, 100 Madison avenue tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. T. C. Bodine will be in charge and lead the meeting.

REVIEWED THE REGIMENT

Brig. Gen. Collins and Staff Inspect the Soldier Boys at Trenton.

GREAT CROWD IS PRESENT.

Trophies Are Awarded—Dinner at Sterling Given by Colonel Dungan to His Staff.

Co. K went to Trenton last night and took part in the review of the Second Regiment, National Guard, in the armory by Brigade General Dennis F. Collins and his personal staff. It was a great night for the regiment, as this is the big event of the year. "From reveille to taps" might be the proper military style of describing the review.

Many invitations were issued and the armory was packed with people. The gallery was reserved, and this was filled as well as the drill floor down stairs. The soldiers formed in regular style used in camp life, and assembled to the calls of the bugle from the field music. Promptly at 8:30 o'clock, the general and his staff assembled on the floor, and after the regiment had been formed by Regimental Adjutant Rogers and turned over to Col. Nelson Y. Dungan, he in turn reported to his superior, Gen. Collins.

Prior to the review the general and his staff made a personal inspection of the officers and men and then took their places before the regiment and reviewed the troops as they passed. This was followed by a regimental review by the colonel, after which there was retreat and the lowering of the flag to the national airs, during which the entire audience remained standing. Then followed "lights out" by the bugle corps, and for a moment the entire place was in darkness. Then the first morning was sounded and the lights were turned on, after which the companies were dismissed. Gen. Collins then presented the companies with their trophies won during the year as well as the individual members' honor medals and badges.

Before the review, Col. Dungan gave a dinner at the Hotel Sterling ot Gen. Collins and staff as well as his personal staff. The officers were in full military dress and presented an attractive sight with their gold-trimmed uniforms. Among those present was Major William B. Martin, formerly captain of Co. K. The local company made a fine appearance at the review and was highly praised.

MAY HAVE TO ENLARGE TUBERCULOSIS PAVILION

Owing to the number of applications for admission to the tuberculosis pavilion, it is believed that the Plainfield Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis will soon build an addition to the present structure on the hospital grounds. There are now eight patients receiving treatment and they have all shown marked improvement. One patient has gained seven pounds since receiving the treatment and the lowest gain is two and a half pounds. Six applications have been received from persons wishing to go to the pavilion for treatment.

The tuberculosis society at its next meeting will probably consider plans for building an addition to the pavilion. It is evident that the present accommodations are not large enough to meet the present needs, and now that the people of Plainfield are so much interested in the proposition it is of the opinion that funds for the addition can be secured easily.

Settle Your Taxes on Time.

Persons in the borough owing poll or personal tax can save fifty cents by paying the same on or before Monday. After that date, Collector George F. Brown will start Deputy Collector Frank Neal on his rounds and all delinquents wil be charged fifty cents extra, which covers the fees for delinquent collection.

Pythians Hold Euchre Party.

After the regular meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last night the members enjoyed a euchre, after which refreshments were served and there was a smoker. There was a large attendance of Pythians. The committee in charge comprised J. B. Higgins, Asa D. Pope and Thomas Caleen.

OBSERVE CENTENARY OF MOTHER SETON

The pupils of St. Mary's School joined in a celebration yesterday, in common with the many parochial schools and private schools taught by the Sisters, in honor of the centenary of the Foundress of the teaching Community of the Sisters of Charity.

Elizabeth Anne Bayley, born in New York in 1774, married Wilbur Seton, of that city in 1794, and traveled extensively in Europe shortly after her marriage. Nine years later, while in Italy, her husband died, leaving her with three young daughtrs with but little means to meet the requirements for living. In 1806, having returned to America, she opened a private school in Baltimore for the education of poor children. The idea took shape and the community, meeting with the approval of ecclesiastical authorities, began its life of usefulness and wonderful success.

Today there are nearly five thousand Sisters devoting their lives to the education of children, and all united in religious life by the rules designed by Mother Seton over one hundred years ago.

Yesterday's exercises began with a solemn mass of Thanksgiving at 9 o'clock in the morning, at which all the pupils, numbering 527, attended in a body. Father Bogan was celebrant of the mass, assisted by Father Hogan and Father Sciolla as deacon and sub-deacon.

In the afternoon the children gathered in the school assembly hall, and entertained their friends with drills, choruses and recitations, which were followed by an address by Father Bogan.

CHARLES GREER FINED; CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Charles Geer, found guilty of the charge of cruelty to animals, was fined $30 this morning by Recorder Dolliver in the borough police court. The convicted man did not have the money to settle and he was given until Monday morning to pay. If the money is not forthcoming then, Geer will be taken to the county jail at Somerville.

For a time it looked as though the ends of justice might be defeated because Clifford Applegate, one of the principals, did not want to appear and testify. His store was full of customers and it was not until a bench warrant was served by Chief Weiss that Mr. Applegate decided to go to court. It was his opinion that the horse should not have been shot, but he did not offer any substantial reasons to prove the statement. Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, local agent, and Lewis Teed, of Newark, State agent for the S. P. C. A., and Joseph Finney were all called as witnesses.

The horse in question was shot on October 28, after being found in the borough in a starving condition. It belonged to a New Brunswick mail-carrier from whom Geer stole it and a wagon.

TWO BICYCLE THEFTS REPORTED TO POLICE.

The bicycle thief is busy again and managed to get away with two wheels yesterday. John Abele, who is staying at Truell Inn, reported the loss of his wheel to the police last night. It was taken from in front of the Inn at 5:30.

Theodore Borelty, of 404 East Fourth street, requested the police to be on the lookout for his new wheel which was stolen from in front of the house at the corner of Madison avenue and Fourth street at 8:30 last night. No traces of either bicycle has been found.

JACOB KIRKNER BURIED

Prominent Citizen Laid to Rest With Solemn Masonic Honors.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR SERVICE.

Impressive Ritual at Obsequies of a Valued Citizen—Interment at Hillside Cemetery.

The impressive ceremony of the Knights' Templar exemplified at the funeral obsequies of Jacob Kirkner yesterday afternoon were attended by fellow Masons from various parts of this State and New York. Past Commander Samuel Bingaman, of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, was in charge of the services and Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss acted as prelate for the local commandery.

The services were opened by the singing of "Lead Kindly Light" by the Aurora Grata Cathedral quartet of Clinton Comandery of Brooklyn. Following this splendidly sung hymn, Past Commander Bingaman made the pronouncement which was followed by the Scripture reading by Sir Knight John A. Chambliss and the prayer. The quartet then sang "Thy Kingdom Come," in an unmistakably feeling way. Rev. Dr. Chambliss followed with the oration in which he said in part:

"This is not an ordinary occasion, nor was our friend, comrade and brother an ordinary man! This service was especially desired by him. If he could see us gathered around his mortal remains, he would see how sincere are the hearts which mourn for him.

"He had the heart of a Christian and was loved by all men who love truth and character. There are few men in the United States who have attained such eminence in Masonic circles as our brother and knight. He was a soldier of that Cross which is recognized the world over. He was not afraid to call to the attention of the members to their solemn obligations and did so on one occasion when the principles of the Knights Templar for the moment had been forgotten."

Dr. Chambliss paid a high tribute to Mr. Kirkner's citizenship and loyality to his convictions of truth, his steadfastness of purpose and his simple, pure life; and in conclusion said, "We commit him to the hand of God and to Christ, our Saviour." A short prayer folowed, and then Past Commander Bingaman was handed the sword of the dead member by Junior Warden Lee, and said:

"I call the attention of the fraters to the fact that the sword in a true and courteous knights' hand shows three most estimable qualities—the hilt, fortitude undaunted; the blade, with justice impartial and the point in mercy unrestrained."

"After applying these attributes as practical, eminent Sir Knight Kirkner during his life expressed the prayer that 'mercy unrestrained' which is the glorious attribute of our Great Commander, be extended in his behalf; blunt the sword of Divine justice and admit him among the companionship of the saints and angels in life and light ternal."

At the conclusion of this part of the service the quartet sang "I'm but a Stranger Here."

As the signal was given for the review of the body the quartet chanted "Remember Thou Thy Creator in the Days of Thy Youth."

This chant with the solemnity of the occasion created the most profound impression on the assembled friends of Mr. Kirkner and many expressions of sympathy were evoked and silent prayers offered as the members and friends passed the catafalque.

People prominent in all walks of life paid their respects to the dead. Floral pieces of extreme beauty decorated the reception hall in which the catafalque rested. Crosses and wreaths were received from the Congregational church, Grand Chapter, R. A. M., Clinton Commandery, K. T., of Brooklyn; Lydia Chapter, O. E. S.; Kane Lodge, R. & S. M. M., of Newark; Trinity Commandery, No. 17, and the Grand Commandery, K. T., of New Jersey, besides other societies.

Among those present from out of town were: F. T. Burr, J. E. Sparrow, Marcus O. Burr, Chester E. Rhodes and William Bamber, of Clinton Commandery, Brooklyn; John R. Bonnington, grand recorder of the New York Grand Commandery; Robert W. Fielding, past commander; Edward Cooper, the oldest living commander and grand commandery historian; Right Eminent Sir Peter McGill, George B. Nicholson, J. C. Loudon, Past Commander B. F. Corriell, Sir Knight, S. B. Joseph and Past Comander Charles G. Little, the last named six being the pall bearers. Interment was in Hillside cemetery and the commitment was read and benediction pronounced by Dr. Chambliss.

Santa Claus Has Unloaded Great Loads of Toys at TEPPER'S

We ought to sell Toys to everyone in Plainfield—because you will be the one to gain by buying here. Mainly—we have the largest stock and devote more space to the display of toys than any other store. Our entire second floor is used entirely for their display and sale. Then—our prices are lowest because we bought at a lower price and mark all goods at a less percentage of profit—it's our way of doing business.

People who go to every store come back and tell us—our prices are lowest. If anyone knows—they do.

SPECIAL

To give greater freedom in selecting we have assembled our entire stock of dolls on the main floor in the Millinery section. You'll see lots of dolls ranging in price from 25 cents to $10, that will make you wonder how they can be sold for so little. And too—you'll find the dolls at $10 are as wonderful a value as the ones priced for a few cents.

Shop early—in the morning is best—you'll be able to choose easier and more satisfactory and be through before the day is half over—shop early. We would ask—all those who can—to take small packages with them. This will eliminate the possibility of your package going to the wrong address. Should an error occur, kindly notify us at once—same will have prompt attention.

Any of these will make splendid Christmas gifts. Stocks are large and offer widest range of selection. Above all else decide to shop early. You get better selection and plenty of time to make your selections. Shop Early.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by a weak and lame back and I was unable to find anything that would give me relief. My back pained me so badly that I could hardly stoop and when I caught cold or overexerted myself, my suffering was doubled. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy, helped me at once and I continued taking them until I was cured. I have had no need of a kidney remedy in the past two years, but value Doan's Kidney Pils today as highly as ever."

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The Western Golf Association will change its name to the American Golf Association and will make any organized golf club "in North and South America and the islands pertaining thereto" eligible for membership if the report of the committee appointed to frame amendments to the constitution is adopted. These proposed amendments, which were reported favorably by the committee Thursday night, will be voted on at the annual meeting in New York on January 15.

As each club in the association is entitled to cast two votes, either by mail, proxy or direct representation, the chances are in favor of a heavy vote being polled. The proposed amendments, read in the form of a resolution, are as follows:

Be it Resolved, that Article 1 of the constitution of this association be and it is hereby amended as follows:

By striking out the word "Western" and inserting in lieu the word "American," so that said Article 1 shall read: "This association shall be called the American Golf Association;" and further,

Be it Resolved, that Section 1, Article 3, of the constitution of this association be and it is hereby amended as follows:

By striking out the whole of said section and substituting therefor the following: "Any properly organized club on the contin nts of North and South America, and islands pertaining thereto, maintaining or controlling a golf course shall be eligible to membership in this association."

According to statements by prominent golfers here, proper consideration has not b en given the Western Golf Association by the United States Golf Association on several occasions and it has practically been "taxation without representation."

Further evidence of the way Western golfers feel on the subject is shown in an appeal by George H. Bryant, a member of the Glenview Golf Club. In the current number of "The Golfers' Magazine" Mr. Bryant urges all clubs in the Western body to cast their votes in favor of the amendments. He says in part:

"It is the American spirit when problems arise to solve them. Golfers for years have been trying to solve the problem of a national golf association. Ultimately it will be done and in a manner to fit the whole country, not just a small portion of it. The problem apparently cannot be solved through the United States Golf Association, as it turns a deaf ear to all attempts to change it into a representative body. Why, then, not make the attempt through the Western Golf Association, in which every club has an equality of votes and which has established a reputation for progressive methods.

"There are many in various sections of the country who contend that the United States Golf Association, as at present constituted, is not a national association and should not be termed such; that its method and form of government are fundamentally wrong; that its actual membership is composed of only forty-five clubs, as in politics it is only the voters that count, and the non-voting clubs, 230 in number, having no voice in legislation and elections, should not be counted as members of the United States Golf Association, they being disfranchised.

"A vote in favor of the proposed amendment means the ultimate formation of a representative national association. A vote against the amendment means what we now have, the United States Golf Association—an un-American anomaly. Which shall it be?"

AWARDED $20,000 FOR BROKEN BACK.

Hackensack, Dec. 18.—Axel Holm, whose back was broken by a falling wall in June last, while employed by the General Chemical Company in their plant at Edgewater, was yesterday awarded $20,000 by a jury in the Bergen County Circuit Court, Hackensack, as a result of his suit against the company. The young man is now paralyzed from his hips down, and one foot will soon have to be amputated, gangrene having set in.

Holm is a Dane and speaks but little English. He lay on the floor in the courtroom in front of the jury, and when he heard one doctor use the word amputate, he asked the interpreter what it meant, for in the Danish language the word is pronounced almost similar. Holm wept when the interpreter told him the real truth and exclaimed: "My God, haven't they cut me up enough?" The young man is a baker, but he sought labor that would give him a better chance to learn the English language.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Strange, when we get a fit of quiet thinking about it, how fast the old traditions hold us in their grip. Here comes Christmas, a commemoration of a sacred event, originally celebrated by the heart but now by the stomach mainly. Mother Church made it a spiritual festivity, encouraged her children gifted with the sense of beauty to express the common people's pious joy in new melodies and choruses that mounted up to the vaulted roof and rolled in glorious harmony with the scented clouds of incense and waves of organ harmony. Not only was the heart charmed with this rich interpretation of its soaring emotions, but the ear, the eye, and the equally important nose were gladdened and made thankful for such uplifting Christmas cheer. Why our churches which spend so much on architecture, decorated walls, stained windows, and lavishly gilded organs should crowd these offerings to please the eye and yet utterly ignore the nose is one of those mysteries I have never found out. Suppose we pew folk revive the snuff-box fashion. It would at least keep us awake in sermon time.

* * * *

With the later day motorcycle rush of what we call "Progress," this spiritual intellectual view of Christmas has to a considerable degree been conducted to a back seat in our craniums, that we may more freely indulge in the material celebration of the divine event. The olden sacrifice of a dove has a rather pretty poetical sound—except to doves, but I don't remember seeing any verse which tells us that the fact of sacrifice ended by eating it in the form of a pigeon pie. The turkey, not being a poetical creature, we prosily sacrifice on the altar of a Christmas appetite. Our celebration is on a banquet basis. One misses the poetical garland of well-browned sausages the English wreathe round the lordly turkey. Its grandeur deserves the porky tribute and its lack of flavor demands some such atonement. It makes for economy too, as the wise feast their eyes on the turk and their stomachs on his savory adornments. When the Pilgrims and Puritans came over they did not leave behind them these material aids to spiritual thoughts. Even their Christmas devotions have come down to us in the impressive form of mince piety. So we see how natural it is to associate food for the mind with little feasts for the body. The only question is as to their relative importance.

* * * *

One's Druidical memory recalls a long and richly varied array of Christmas feasts eaten, enjoyed, and once in a way digested. In baronial halls, with all the old-time honors of bringing in the boars' head with ancient carols; in city mansions; in bachelor halls; in gipsy camps; and a Christmas or two with no Christmas dinner at all. Top of the lot rises the famous feast in the spacious cottage of a Yorkshire mechanic, and here is the chronicle. It was in the merry days of yore, when the grassy village in bowery glen was deemed more beautiful than any gorgeous avenue of palaces, when young folks thought more of rosy cheeks and simple outdoor delights than of theatres, hair rats, cuffed trousers, or the tailor-made fascinations of silly Sunday papers. We were a band of mixed sorts, youths and maidens, rich and poor, but brothers and sisters all in such good works as our various talents, one to ten, enabled us to do among the less lucky. One of our devices was to go a-waiting. Christmas Waits. For three months we worked at making and singing a goodly program of oratorio selections, old carols, a rousing Christmas anthem or two, and a few merry glees, rounds, and catches, with home-made words to suit our audiences.

* * * *

We effectually disguised ourselves in any self-made costume our genius suggested, and we were orchestra as well as soloists and chorus. One made and played a giant double bass fiddle, all you saw was a sort of bedpost, a cigar box and something else not to be told, with strings of course, but its deep rich tones were worthy of an opera house. Another had what looked like a bagpipe, but it gave out organ music. Our violinist was genuine; not so our organist, whose genius turned a tea chest into a jumble of tinkling wires as he turned the Handel and the wooden plate a-top, on which leaden horses chased round. At each end of our long semicircle as we took our stand in the streets was a small boy, robed in his choir surplice. Home made goose feather wings flapped between their shoulders, brass haloes adorn d their yellow-wigged heads; they played the tunes very prettily on their tin whistles, on the ends of which were screwed brass candlesticks to make the public believe they were archangels' trumpets, and on their breasts were boxes for free-will offerings.

* * * *

But all this is drowning th dinner. We started at 10:30 on Christmas eve, made our round of calls on friends until noon on Christmas day, being regaled at each house with everything bad for us, from puddings and pies to hot ale with rum in it. We were bribed several times to stop and play up in the streets. Our gifts came near averaging ten dollars for each of fourteen, all of which was expended at our discretion among the poor old people it was then the good custom for all youngsters to visit and cheer. in their own immediate neighborhood.

* * * *

Sad to say, but too true, three—they were our senior brothers—succumbed under repeated doses of the rum and ale, but it was a miserable sleety night and the lotion was mighty as well as good and welcome. We broke up in every grade of demoralization except of spirits, and as the sun was shining merrily two of us, too cowardly to go back to town to be guyed, gladly went to the village home, three miles off, of the said ingenious mechanic, best of good fellows and a true gentleman in the rough. After a civilizing wash in ice water, we huddled in sheer starvation round the little table in the middle of the big parlor. The buxom young hostess cruelly ignored the feeding until she had showed us the new number one baby. The merrier he chuckled and crowed the more we inwardly groaned, but she was a genial soul and we knew would soon load us with fatness.

* * * *

In she marched, stately as a queen, bare armed and all smiles, holding at arm's length one of those spacious brown stone basins used, of course, as baby's bath tub. And in it, bedded around, its blind but smiling face rising above the lake of rich gravy in which it was swimming, was our Christmas dinner—a sweet little duck of a darling Suckling Pig! Of all flesh dishes the daintiest and deliciousest. Only one weeny little drawback, I grieve to confess it, each forkful was so succulent that it slid right down your throat before you could bite it, and so it was that I must have swallowed—not eaten—half the pig, but, mercy on me! All through the feast I verily felt I was devouring the Baby! Never mind, we all have our delusions, but let me assure the delicate reader that of all the birds, fowls and beasts, tame and wild, that deck the Christmas table, give me suckling pig, in a brown washbasin borne by a beaming young matron, in a village home, after a vagrant Christmas eve.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Hal Stephens, author of the book of "A Broken Idol," is accredited with giving the theatre-goer who delights in musical comedy one of the best books ever presented with a musical setting. In fact the piece, it is asserted, could have every musical number eliminated and still succeed in a straight farce. It is replete with situations which generate laughter waves ranging from ripples to roars for the two acts that it requires to unravel the story, the thread of which is never lost sight of for an instance during the entire presentation. The music which is by Egbert Van Alstyne, and the lyrics by Harry Williams, are on par with the book and the combined results of clever work on the part of the author, composer and lyric writer has been intelligently produced by Gus Sohlke, the celebrated stage director. The play is presented by a cast of unusual excellence. The chorus has been pronounced the best singing and dancing ensemble ever gathered together in one company while the special scenery and costume equipment is elaborate and highly artistic. "A Broken Idol" has enjoyed a run of over 300 performances at the Whitney Opera House in Chicago and comes here with all the glamor of its metropolitan success. The entire cast and chorus is at the Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

STUDENTS' SELF-HELP
DOING A GOOD WORK.

Princeton, Dec. 18.—With the usual holiday exodus of students for their homes, the bureau of students' self-help in Princeton University has institut d a novelty in the activity of the organization. It announced yesterday that the baggage of all students who may desire it will be handled by the members of the bureau at the usual rates. Owing to the interruptions of classes in the morning, the students who are to handle the baggage have requested that their fellow-students leave word the night before, designating the train and destination. This is a departure in the work of the bureau, and already a number of students have given orders to the self-helpers.

The bureau of self-help in Princeton University was organized last year with the purpose of securing employment for needy and deserving students. There is always a portion of the students enrolled who are working their way through college, and in order to centralize the various agencies that alway exist in college towns, the bureau keeps a list of the needy men, and awards the agencies to them according to their respective ability. A comparatively small percentage of the student body is registered with the bureau of self-help, but the other students of the university are l nding a ready hand to assist the needy ones on every occasion. Some of the most popular men in the university are often among the self-supported ones.

The Philadelphian Society was addressed last night by Fred M. Harris, '07, who is a member of the executive committee of the International Association of the Y. M. C. A., being at the head of the work in this section of the country.

The junior class in the university will hold a smoker at the Princeton Inn on January 12.

The Orphic Order, an organization of undergraduates musically inclined, gave a concert in Murray Hall yesterday.

At Proctor's Next Week.

Thoma, a sweet miss of sixteen, and her famous horse, Indian Chief, will be seen at Proctor's next week. His wild spirit is still unbroken, but he will obey his mistress slightest command. NEW JERSEY MAY BUILD THREE MORE ARMORIES

The State Military Board at a meeting at Trenton last night, recommended armories for Elizabeth, Camden and Bridgeton. Delegations of citizens and of the militia appeared before the Board and declared these armories were needed to stimulate interest in the National Guard. The federal government insists that the State properly house the guns of Battery B at Camden. At present the guns are housed in the Third Regiment Armory at Camden, but this, the government rules, is not satisfactory.

Brigadier General Dennis T. Collins declared that Elizabeth citizens have signified their intention of giving money or grounds for the armory there. He wanted an affirmative action of the Military Board, so that the amount could be determined and placed in the next tax levy.

The Freeholders of the counties where armories are to be built will be waited upon by committees. The Elizabeth committee consists of General Collins and Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan. For the Camden and Bridgeton armories the committee is composed of General Collins and Colonel John H. Mather.

Sundays in England

No. 3—At Edinburgh

By Rev. Charles L. Goodrich

I hardly know why our arrival at Edinburgh seemed so much like getting home. It could not have been because of any ancestral inheritance recognizing its own; for it was one of the sorrows of my boyhood, fed on Scott's "Tales of a Grandfather," to learn that I was not of Scotch descent but only of unromantic English. Nor was it because in reaching Edinburgh we passed near Netherby Hall and among the low, rounded, heather-clad, sheep-browsed hills of the Douglas country, though Lochinvar and the Black Douglas were among the earliest known names of childhood. But for some reason we straightway felt at home in Edinburgh, this finest city of Scotland.

Perhaps the impression was the stronger in our case because of the fairly palatial apartments into which we were received through the address given us by a friend. With the large drawing-room of a once fashionable mansion most comfortably, even elegantly furnished, for our private sitting room, with meals served us by one who was so expert that we thought he must once have been a butler in some noble's household, we felt as if Edinburgh was giving us its best in way of welcome.

Setting out from 18 Coate's Crescent, one is soon upon Princes street. "Perhaps the finest street in Europe" one authority calls it. I know none to rival it. Other city streets may be as broad and long, may have finer business houses, but there is hardly another that combines so many remarkable and interesting features. There is not only a long wide street with handsome business buildings and fascinating stores in which the visitor is tempted to spend much of his time and all of his shillings; but along one side is a park with gardens and lawns of exceptional beauty, which sweeps down into a deep ravine and up again on the other side to a towering cliff on which rise the towers and battlemented walls of the ancient castle, commanding and impressive, the middle ages looking down upon modern busines life in the gay shops. High upon the further side of this remarkable valley, also, are the tall buildings of the old city, dwellings, universities and Parliament halls and churches dominated by the lantern tower of famous St. Giles and extending from the castle along the high ground and descending at last to Holyrood Palace. And up the far end of Princes street one sees Calton Hill, giving with its classic arches and columns some faint suggestion of Athen's Acropolis; just outside the city in full view is a bold peak which springs up into view straight out of the level on one side, as if eager to look upon the site of Edwin's Burg, then falls away in soft green slopes and terraces on the other, called by the name of King Arthur's Seat. Midway in the street on the border of the Park stands the magnificent monument to Sir Walter Scott, the finest gothic monument in the kingdom, enclosing a marble statue of the writer; and not far away are statues of Livingstone and Christopher North and Ramsay and others. So though as a spacious and business thoroughfare with fascinating shops Princess street is attractive enough to the visitor, yet he finds himself constantly turning to enjoy the gardens, to study the monuments in honor of Scotland's most distinguished writer and Scotland's greatest missionary, or his eyes are led away to the gray old buildings on the high ground opposite, and continually his gaze and his thoughts will keep coming back to the great, grim castle on the hill, and his mind will be going back to the stern old days, the struggles, the momentous events in which kings and queens, earls and princes figured, which those walls recall. Thus it is that Princess street is unrivaled because in addition to modern business interests and present day architecture and art, nature has wrought in unusual ways, and the past is there and, as it were, ghosts of kings and queens, of mail-clad knights, of martyrs and reformers, of scholars and saints, of dead poets and authors, mingle with the sightseers and the shoppers in the noble avenue.

On Princes street, I said, your eyes will ever be coming back to the castle. You will not be able long to refrain from following your eyes thither. You will cross the bridge near Sir Walter's monument, and climb the hill to the Esplanade in front of the entrance. Here, perhaps, you will pause long enough to reflect that there are few places where there has been more human agony than just what you stand. There in the course of three dark centuries were tortured and burned no less than two thousand unfortunate being accused of witchcraft. A king of Scotland even applied the torture at times with his own hands. And if you will take pains to go to a certain point in the wall you can look over upon the Grassmarket, where heroic adherents of the Reformation suffered martyrdom at the stake and the gallows.

So cruel were the old days, so unfeeling and revolting the deeds that have been done in the name of law and religion. Such facts one may well recall when he is tempted to fancy that the world is not growing better. You will not wish to linger too long in the Esplanade. You will go in through the frowning portals which red-coats guard; you will pass the portcullis gate and perhaps remember with what cunning the Black Douglas had a teamster overturn his laden wagon beneath the gateway, so that the portcullis could not fall, and his fierce fighting men rushed in before the cart could be removed, to take the castle which was never to go out of Scotch again.

You will wish to go into the crown room to see the regalia of Scotland, which was hidden away for over a century and forgotten till Sir Walter found them. You will wish to look down over the walls at the precipitous cliffs up which Randolph, Earl of Moray, led his assaulting band guided by William Francis, up heights inaccessible under any stimulus of war, but which he had learned to climb under spur of love. You will wish to enter the banqueting hall, an armory now with old weapons arranged in peaceful and artistic patterns, where the young Douglas and his boy brother, invited in with treachery, saw the fatal Black Bull's head brought in and set before them. You will wish to go into the room wherein the Duke of Argyle slept the quiet sleep of innocence to refresh himself just before ascending the scaffold, a scene that is depicted in a great fresco in the House of Commons of London. You will wish to go into the chamber of Mary Queen of Scots, the room in which the VI, of Scotland, James I, of England, was born. A tiny stone cell is all it is. Royalty was content in those days with rooms that would not satisfy us. You will wish also to go into St. Margaret's chapel, the oldest building in Edinburgh and the oldest church in Scotland, and having visited that chamber and that chapel you will have brought to mind the two queens that figure most prominently in Edinburgh's history. The contrast between them is very marked. Margaret, devout queen of exemplary life, teacher of religion in the rude early days, beloved of her people, on whose fair fame the there is no stain.

Mary, able, beautiful brillaint, fascinating, a woman of the later gayer world, pleasure loving, affectionate, passionately ambitious, in religion a Romanist but in moral principle lacking, thorn in the side of Elizabeth, disturber of England's peace, who would have driven protestantism out of the realm, whose name is darkened with more than suspicion, and yet who in remarkable degree seems to have thrown a spell over those of her time and over historians and readers of other times also. No one can come to visit Edinburgh without thinking of her.

With her in mind you may leave the castle and go down to Holyrood Palace in the low ground at the foot of Salisbury's Crag, you may go into the little room in which she sat with Rizzio when the conspirators burst in and strike their daggers into him over the very person of the queen and drag him forth to die. You may go into her chamber through a narrow low door, built to be easily barricaded, reminder of the days of violence when no one was safe, and see the bed in which she slept, with draperies once brilliant and rich now dull and tarnished. You may see a square of embroidery wrought by her own hands which once must have been very beautiful, but is now faded and gone to decay. One can but ask though with all desire to have charity, of her life work, of what profit to have had beauty and power and to have done nothing of lasting good, to have left a tarnished name.

Now it is Sunday morning. If this is your first and only Sunday in Edinburgh you will wish to be astir earlier than some, that you may attend the nine-thirty military service at St. Giles'. Edinburgh is a garrisoned town. There are always soldiers at the Castle, as in fact from the time when King Arthur, of the Round Table, sat on the mountain height opposite which now bears his name, and watched his men contending on Castle Hill down to the present time there have always been armed men stationed there. You are never long on the streets of Edinburgh without seeing the gay and picturesque costumes of the Highland pipers, or the redcoats and plaid trousers of the lowland regiment which composes the garrison. These uniforms give color and interest to the street scenes, so do also the quaint costumes of the fishwomen of Newmarket who come up in the mornings with great creels of fish upon their backs to cry "Caller Herring."

On Sunday morning at St. Giles', the oldest parish church of Edinburgh, there is a service which the garrison is expected to attend. They march in due order to their places in the cathedral and at the close of the service pass out before the rest of the congregation and form upon the square and after one or two military movements march up the hill to the Castle.

Impressions come thickly and fast upon one who for the first time enters the cathedral for that morning service. It is a gray severe interior with little of beauty or brightness to attract one. The one who built that church doubtless thought of religion as something severe and compelling, as something awe-inspiring, to impress one with man's littleness and God's greatness, with the necessity to give up the vanities of the world and walk the stern ways of duty. There is little in such interiors to make religion attractive. And yet if one enters with the right spirit there is much which may tend to make religion impressive. One's first impressions are military rather than religious. There are faded and tattered battle flags hung up in the nave. Is there not always something in the sight of old battle flags to stir thoughts that are akin to tears? There are tablets all along the walls to the memory of soldiers of different regiments and wars, that some how speak more powerfully than the preacher did that day. Such far off places are named on those tablets, Egypt, Soudan, Afghanistan, India. To such remote regions England's dominion extends, to such far-off places her soldiers have to go, so far have soldier lads, such as these sitting there in their redcoats, listening to the preacher's words, been sent to die! Has it been any spur to them in the hours of danger, I wonder, to think that if they fell their names would be placed upon the walls of the old church at home? Here again as at so many places in our journeying we came upon late monuments to men who had died in the South African war. These new memorial tablets on walls of cathedrals, monuments in public squares, we found all along in our journeyings, till we came to expect them, to recognize them in the distance and to be able without looking closely to repeat the words upon them, "To the memory of officers, non-commissioned officers and privates," of the ... regiments, who fell in the So African Wars they all began!

St. Giles' church is spoken of as a cathedral. It is not one of course, though at one time it was. Presbyterians have no cathedrals because they have no bishops. It seemed strange to be sitting in this cathedral-like building, and have a Presbyterian service going on. The Episcopal form would have seemed more in keeping. Yet to have whispered it might have brought up the ghosts of dead Covenanters who just a step from that spot had signed the Solemn League and Covenant securing Presbyterianism as that state established church of Scotland. Indeed, would not old John Knox have come out from his statue in the aisle, or up from his grave under the pavement outside if we had breathed such a thought! The service, though not Episcopal, was sufficiently formal, however, and the ministers were in robes if not in surplices.

Singularly enough our first sermon heard in Scotland as our first sermon heard in England had very much the same theme. Both treated of "little things." The same passage of Scripture, containing Christ's words about the cup of cold water was read. In this case the preacher chose Isaiah's "Line upon line" as his text. The critics of the prophet laughed at his line upon line and were impatient of his slow methods. But life is a growth, character is a growth, it is folly to slight the little upon little for thereby we should miss the growth and consummation. Little by little a flower matures but at last we are struck with the beauty of the results. Character develops slowly, slowly, by one little act, one small choice after another, by heeding one precept, and another. At times it all seems small and insignificant, but the outcome is significant, the outcome is a life, is a character, a developed personality.

One grows impatient with the littleness of things at times, and fails to feel the importance, and is inclined to let himself go to the careless moment, the passing impulse waiting some great opportunity to distinguish himself. Yet this is folly; life consists of little things, it is folly to act as if it did not. It may seem sometimes that the time of a service of worship may be of little value; but think what it is. It is a touch of the divine life upon our lives, a touch of the divine spirit on our spirits. Just a little, but with that little we may get on to till some other touch of the divine comes.

However good the sermon was, one may confess that it was not so absorbing but one's thoughts could now and then wander to John Knox, who so often had stood in that pulpit. The service and the sermon, the voice and manner of the preacher were all so quiet and gentle, one could but contrast in thought the days of tense excitement in that very place, when, for example, under Charles I, the attempt was made to introduce the English church forms, fiery Jane Geddes stood up and flung her stool at the preacher's head, crying, "Our priest! Dost say mass at my lug?" and those earlier nobler days of John Knox, when great gusts and currents of feeling swept through the place, when at the risk of his life John Knox used to preach there with boldness of deep conviction and an indomitable spirit, and with fierce eloquence, vehement both in argument and denunciation, inveighed against popery and sin in high and low and championed Protestant cause, regardless of Queen Mary's beauty or power or the power of Rome or all Catholic enemies, that threatened his life. He spoke to a throng deeply moved, feeling the momentousness of the times and the issues. How different the peaceful scene of the unemotional service we were attending! It is because of the heroism and staunchness of those of the old days who fought out the fight for religious liberty that we do have the peace of today. The debt we owe them must not be forgotten. And yet one could wish that more of the fire of those old days were in evidence now, more of deep feeling in religious matters, more zeal for the real battles which are yet to be fought, more sense of the deep and vital importance of religious concerns as above all others!

The forenoon was by no means gone when we came out of St. Giles'. Having done our duty by the historic and the famous, we were moved to seek our own. So we found our way to a Congregational church. The building had no resemblance to a cathedral, far from it. But it seemed more home-like. The pulpit was too high to seem just home-like even to a New Englander. When it was time for the service to begin, one felt that he was not at home but in one of McClaren's stories to see the sexton first "Take up the Book" into the pulpit, then come down and escort the minister up and lock him in. I had long known of the Scotch unwillingness to make a positive statement, but never heard a more striking instance of it than appeared in the minister's manner of giving an announcement. "I am requested to intimate that the Ladies' Guild will resume meetings on the 23."

Enjoying these likenesses and differences before the sermon, in the sermon itself we had the same experience that we had had at the Cathedral town of Wells. Both at Wells cathedral and at St. Giles, the impressiveness of the service had been in architecture and the historical associations, while the sermon had been uninspiring, whereas in each case in the Congregational church the sermon had been stimulating, earnest, spiritual and strong, and from the humbler edifice one went away with the deeper spiritual impressions.

If one could whisper it only to those of our own denomination, one would say, from our limited experience, in England and Scotland if you want thought, strong, stimulating, go to the Congregational churches. There is no truth more vitally important for all places and times than that which was held to our thoughts that day; that religion is primarily within the soul; that it does not consist in the outward things of architecture or art or forms or profesions, or creeds or traditions, but is primarily in the soul and is to be known by personal experience; and the first supreme question for every person's welfare is, has he the "white stone," the "secret that cannot be told," spiritual life, personal religion?

And is not Edinburgh's eminence due in no small degree to the importance which the people of Edinburgh, from Queen Margaret's day to this, have placed upon experimental religion? That which may first and most prominently attract the casual visitor; the grim castle, the historical places, the picturesque scenes, the gardens, the bright shops, the cheery avenue, may fail to interpret to him the true Edinburg after all. The University, the Divinity School, the churches, the book issues, the almost yearly convocations of delegates from all lands for religions objects; all these must be taken into consideration, and these indicate a city eminent above most in its deep interest in learing, in religion and in righteousness. Royal Edinburgh, Mrs. Oliphant calls it. Religious Edinburgh we must also call it; and the latter title is the higher praise.

By JAMES FORBES

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"Don't you dare push me!" I'll raise the roof an' bring the police an' all the neighbors up," came Patsy's voice in distinct but not loud tones.

"Great Caesar's ghost!" swore Crawford. "She'd do it. What brings that woman here? She mustn't see you. Get into the bedroom—quick!"

* * * * * * *

When Patsy had returned to the dressing room at the theater with a glass of stimulant for her sister and found that she was not there she was very much astonished and also much perturbed. They ought already to be in their places for the performance. She began a hurried search for her. That the girl might have left the building did not occur to her; for she had noticed that her street clothes were still hanging on their accustomed hook. She was unable to find her, however, nor had anybody of whom she made inquiry seen her. She ascertained by observation that she was not where she ought to have been, among the other girls in the wings. The stage door keeper had not seen her go out, he said, which was perfectly true, for he neglected to mention that he had absented himself for a few minutes. Greatly mystified, she could reach but one conclusion, that she had got out of the theater in some way and gone home. Nora had been terribly agitated and had said that she felt ill. She must have been in a bad state indeed not to have changed her clothing.

Milly Sultzer came running into the room.

"Come on, Patsy," she cried. "They're holding the curtain. You'll get into trouble."

But Patsy's mind was made up. She would go to Nora. The girl might need her help.

"Let 'em hold it!" she said. "My sister's gone away ill, an' I've got to look after her."

Swiftly she changed her clothes and made her way home. There was no light in the flat. Nora was not there nor had she been there apparently, for nothing had been disturbed. Patsy now was more than worried; she was alarmed. She returned in haste to the Long Acre, but nothing had been seen of Nora there. It flashed upon her that the girl in her desperation might have dashed off just as she was to seek Crawford and demand the note, intending to return to the theater as quickly as possible. This became a conviction, for at that moment the call boy came along and noticed her troubled mein.

"Lookin' fer yer sister, Miss O'Brien?" he queried.

"Yes," she said eagerly. "Have you seen her?"

"I seen her hike off in a cab just now," he replied. "She ast me to get it fer her. She wuz in a turrible hurry an' dreffful white about the gills."

"Where'd she tell the man to drive to?" she inquired.

"I dunno. I didn't hear that," said the boy.

Patsy waited for no more. Her first thought was to try and find Dan in the audience. He knew Crawford's address, and she did not. But she reasoned that if she went to her sweetheart she would have to tell him the whole circumstances. And, besides, he was with her parents. She decided that she had better leave him out of it. Dragging him in might only make matters worse. Yet how was she to find out where Crawford lived? It occurred to her that his name might be in the city or telephone directory. She could have consulted the telephone book at the office of the theater; but, concluding that it would be advisable to avoid the office, she went to a neighboring drug store. The book gave the address, sure enough. In another minute she was on a car bound uptown.

Crawford had hardly closed the bedroom door on Nora when Patsy burst into the den, followed by Rogers, still remonstrating.

"I knew you was in. I felt sure of it," said Patsy by way of greeting. "Where's my sister?"

"Your sister?" he repeated.

"Yes, Nora. Is she here—has she been here?"

"I've just come in. My man might know," he answered frigidly. "Rogers, has a young lady called within the last five minutes?"

"No, sir," replied the valet.

"That will do, Rogers."

"That's funny," said Patsy half apologetically. "She ain't at the show shop. I thought sure she must 'a' come here."

"Did Miss Nora say she was coming here?" he inquired.

"No," she admitted.

"Perhaps she went home," he suggested dryly.

"She did not," said Patsy, "an' I wouldn't be surprised if she's on her way here."

"You wouldn't? Well, I would be."

"Why? You've been tryin' to make dates with her after the theater an' invitin' her out to supper, ain't you? An' you've had her out to lunch."

Crawford wondered where she could have learned about it. He did not at all like the way things were turning.

"I've invited her to supper several times," he admitted carelessly, "but she never would accept."

"Well, maybe she'll be here t night a little later," said Patsy, who was recovering her habitual sang froid.

"I haven't received any word that she'll be here later," he remarked, with a bored air.

"I've a presentment—don't you call it?—she will," continued Patsy. "I got to see her important. You don't mind if I wait a few minutes?"

"Oh, certainly not," he said, with plain annoyance, thrusting his hands in his pockets and looking at her in a way that indicated that he did mind and would much prefer her room to her company.

"You ain't awful affable, are you?" observed his imperturbable visitor. "I could use a chair if it was handed me."

"I beg your pardon, Miss O'Brien."

With a very bad grace he advanced a chair for her, but remained standing himself.

Patsy settled herself in the seat and began to make preparations for a stay by removing her hat.

"Gee, I'm tired," she said. "I done a hard chase here. Ain't it awful the way these hatpins can crimp you? Would I be takin' a liberty if I asked for a drink?"

"Certainly not," he said sulkily. "What will it be, a glass of champagne?"

He went toward a pail of cracked ice in which the champagne of the interrupted supper was standing and which he had not had time to remove with the other things.

"Nix with the wealthy water," she refused.

"A glass of beer?"

"No suds in mine, thanks; just plain Croton."

"This place is awful cute and cozy," she commented. "You must enjoy life to beat the band—nothin' on your mind but your hair."

He vouchsafed no reply.

"How many rooms you got?" she asked.

"Oh, two or three," he answered.

"Where does that door lead to?"

"That's a sort of closet for my man. Aren't you dancing tonight?" he demanded.

"No; I got the pip in me ankle. Got too gay at rehearsal yesterday," she said.

"Dancing must be very hard work. It looks so acrobatic," he ventured.

"The smile's the hard part," she explained. "It's no cinch standin' on one toe, with the other pointin' to quarter to 6 an' then look like the cat that's just eat the canary. I've often wished I'd gone into Wall street. I got a great head for bizness. Now, Nora's just the opposite. Wonder where she is? Oh, well, it's no use worryin'! I'm enjoyin' meself."

There was another interval of silence. This time it was broken by Patsy.

"Gee, it's hot in here!" she exclaimed. "Say, what was we talkin' about?"

"Yourself, I think," he said, balancing himself on his heels and toes and indicating by his attitude that he wished she would leave.

"Let's talk about Nora," she went on.

"What about Nora?"

"I want you to let my sister alone. She's new to the game, an' she's a good kid."

"I guess she's able to take care of herself—and when a girl's good"—

"She's good anywhere. Yes; I know all about that. An' that other one about the wages of sin bein' death. Well, maybe—but, say, when you're scrimpin' along on twenty per an' the next girl to you in the dressin' room comes down to the show shop every night in a benzine buzz wagon—in ermine capes an' diamonds big as oysters—it ain't religion so much as a firm grip on home and mother that keeps you handin' out the icy eye to the man behind the bank roll. You see, Nora's a awful ninny. Why, she even thinks that note of hers you got is good. Honest, when she told me I nearly laffed meself to death!"

Crawford's bored look vanished, and he reddened to his hair.

"She told you about that note?" he questioned.

"None other," said Patsy.

"The note's good, all right," he bluffed.

"Quit yer kiddin'," she said quietly.

"It's good for $300," he insisted.

Patsy eyed him pityingly.

"Get a transfer, Crawford; get a transfer," she said. "It's only a forgery, an' a bum one at that."

"I don't believe Mr. P. O'Brien would put it to protest if I presented it at my bank for payment, all the same," he declared, angry through and through, but doing his best not to show it.

"But you're not goin' to do that," she said persuasively.

"That depends," he parried.

"You wouldn't show Nora up to her father. You're too good a sport for that."

"I'm a good sport, all right, but I'm not a mark," he said emphatically. "That money is due me honestly, and I purpose getting the value of it."

"Honestly! Is it?" she retorted. "Now, on the level, you don't call leadin' a girl of seventeen into makin' a fool of herself an' puttin' her father's name to paper honest? If you ask me, it's a bunk."

"But I'm not asking you. If you please, we'll not discuss it."

He said this coldly and firmly, as if that ended it. Patsy, however, was not to be intimidated.

"Sure we'll discuss it and settle it now," she said, rising and facing him. "It'll save me a trip to your office tomorrow."

"This concerns your sister and me alone," he told her.

"You mean it's none of my business?"

"Precisely."

"Then I'm goin' to make it my business. This note with the phony signature brings pop an' the family into the muss."

"The matter is entirely between your sister and me. We are competent to manage our own affairs, and we will."

"You can manage yours, all right, but I'll have a hand in managin' my sister's or know the reason why. I've promised my mother to take care of her, an' you bet your life I'm goin' to."

"And I am going to protect my interests."

"Well, let me tell you you're not goin' about it right. Your interest in Dan Mallory's stable's a pretty good thing, ain't it?"

"What has that to do with it?"

Patsy looked at him grimly.

"What has it got to do with it?" she said. "You get gay with that phony note an' I'll show you up. Dan wouldn't do a thing to you!"

Crawford laughed at her.

"Do you think you can frighten me with your threats?" he sneered. "I'm not afraid of Mallory or of any other man. Besides, he wouldn't be such a fool as to jeopardize the future of his stables."

"He wouldn't, eh?" replied Patsy quickly. "A lot you know about it. Why, he'd dump you an' that stable so quick on my say so it 'u'd make your head swim. Dan's all to the good, he is. It's the right steer I'm givin' you, Crawford, an' if you've got a lick of sense you'll pass over that note an' let me go home. I'm tired."

She took up her hat and put it on.

"If you've stayed here all this time it isn't because I've detained you," he said sarcastically. "As for the note"—

The door opened simultaneously with a knock upon it, and Rogers came in, much flustered.

"Mrs. O'Brien's in the hall, sir," he announced.

"Mom!" exclaimed Patsy in great alarm.

She and Crawford looked at each other.

"I can't receive her," said Crawford.

"She says she won't leave without seeing you, sir."

"It won't do for her to find me here," whispered Patsy. "She wouldn't understand, an' I couldn't explain without givin' Nora away. What'll I do? Where'll I go?"

Crawford was at a loss what to do himself. The complication was beyond him.

"You people are getting on my nerves," he growled. "Here, step behind the curtains."

But Patsy had darted for the bedroom door, which she had been told was that of a closet.

"No, no; not there!" cried Crawford, rushing forward to stop her.

It was too late. She had gone in.

Cursing deeply under his breath, Crawford turned to meet the old woman.

CHAPTER XI.

DOWN at Maple Grove the winter had been a long one to everybody. After Nora had left the life seemed to have gone out of the homestead. At first it had not been so bad. The excitement incident to the departure of the girls and endless discussion as to what they would do and how Nora would get on kept Mallory and the old people keyed up. That they would be all right was never the subject of doubt for one moment. All had unbounded confidence in Patsy, the breadwinner, and in her ability to shift for Nora as well as for herself. That their faith was fully justified was proved when, two weeks after the arrival of the girls in New York, a letter was received announcing Patsy's engagement at the Long Acre theater and subsequently came the news that she had procured an engagement for Nora in the same company. This caused great rejoicing.

On top of this was Patsy's momentuous enterprise in taking a flat and her glowing descriptions of the luxury and comfort they enjoyed in it. The letters of both girls gave such minute particulars that the old people were able to picture the place in the mind's eye, though the picture, as such pictures always do, differed largely from the original.

Nora's departure, however, was a tearing away which was bound to be felt and felt severely. As the "baby" she had held a very large part indeed in the hearts and lives of her parents, especially after Patsy had flown the home nest. After a time the loss of her bright presence and talkativeness began to have its effect on Mrs. O'Brien. She became irritable, then melancholy.

"Sure the house is loike a stove in winter with the foire out since me baby's gone away," she complained.

Another person by whom Nora's absence was keenly felt was the Duke, and her departure had further consequences for him in troubles of various kinds and another fierce encounter with the Shrimp. The Duke's liveliness had been succeeded by a gloominess that was positively melodramatic and alternated with periods of sickly sentimentality. His moroseness was so marked, especially as it was accompanied by diminished appetite, that Mrs. O'Brien noticed it, and her motherly solicitude was aroused. She rather liked the Duke.

"'Tis billous ye are, choild," she said one morning after watching him attentively. "Yir liver's all upset. Oi'll have to physic ye. Show me yir tongue."

The Duke shook his head.

"You myke a mistyke, mum," he replied. "It ain't because I don't feel like blowin' aout me kite that I wants physic."

"Thin phwat's the matter?" she demanded.

"Nothin', habsolutely nothin'. Hi'm all right," he assured her.

"But ye're not all right," she said authoritatively, "an' ye can't fool me by sayin' that yez are. If it's not yir liver, phwat is it?"

The Duke heaved a heavy sigh.

"It's 'igher hup, Mrs. O'Brien—'igher hup," he said tragically.

"Thin it's indigestion," she diagnosed.

He shook his head.

"I carn't tell you what it is, so don't arsk me," he sighed. "Time p'r'aps 'll cure it."

It dawned upon Mrs. O'Brien that the cause of his trouble might be other than physical.

"Ye haven't had bad news from yir mother?" she inquired kindly.

He answered in the negative, and the old woman definitely made up her mind that he was suffering either from biliousness or indigestion. She made no further allusion to the matter, but the next morning when he came in to breakfast he found a surprise awaiting him. Instead of being allowed to sit down, as usual, to the nourishment called for by two hours of hard work after rising he was waylaid by Mrs. O'Brien with a big cupful of black strong senna tea.

"Down with it!" commanded Mrs. O'Brien peremptorily. "Ye're not a baby. Hold yir nose an' ye woan't taste it."

He hesitated, and she coaxed him.

"Oi'll give yez a lump av sugar after it."

Once again for the sake of Nora he sacrificed himself and under the eyes of the grinning Shrimp swallowed the obnoxious concoction, though every internal organ of his body revolted.

For the best part of the remainder of that day he really was ill, and he was careful thereafter not to let his love sickness show in the presence of Mrs. O'Brien—by gloominess, at any rate. In the stable, however, and out exercising the horses he was free to let it influence his moods. He liked to utter Nora's name aloud. To him it was as sweet music. Plucking an unusually beautifully tinted leaf left on hedge or tree by the winds of winter, he would dedicate it to her and wear it next his heart with a portrait of a woman he fancied looked something like her that he had cut from a stray page of a newspaper. When no one was nigh he could murmur his secret and his hopes and doubts to Nora's favorite, Lady Belle, and it seemed to him that the creature's big lustrous eyes regarded him understandingly and sympathetically.

"Lydy Belle," he would tell her, "my Nora's a hactress, a lovely hangel, like the fairies in the pantomime at Droory Lyne an' Sanger's, with pink tights an' wings and spangles, an' the limelight pl'yin' on 'em. She's too pretty an' good for me naow. Yus, she is. But some d'y the Djuke's goin' to be somethin', too, an' all the pypers'll be talkin' abaout William Perkins, the gryte jockey. Then you'll see me dash up in me motor to lay me nyme an' fortune at 'er little feet, an' she'll be me blushin' bride. An' Lydy Belle, I'll tyke you too."

In his rare hours of leisure he had, at the cost of much labor and brain racking, written many letters to her declaring his love, only to tear them up in his fear of sending them.

The Shrimp happened upon him in the stable one day while the Duke was in the throes of one of these epistolatory efforts. The amorous stable boy was seated on an upturned pail and drafting his letter with the stump of a pencil on a paper grocery bag somewhat crumpled and dirty from having been thrown with other refuse on the garbage heap, whence he had rescued it as affording a handy medium for recording the phraseologic conceptions of his brain as inspired by the promptings of his heart.

"Writin' po'try! Oh, mother!" sniggered his tormentor.

The Duke did not condescend to respond.

"Take my tip, Dook, an' quit," went on the Shrimp. "It's a sign you got 'em bad when you gits de pome microbe under yer lid. Dere ain't a bundle in de woild as is worth doin' de Shakespeare act for."

Still the Duke vouchsafed no notice of him.

"Youse thinks she's all to de jam pots, don't yer? But take it from me, she couldn't stand no acid test. She'd be marked down to 30 cents at de bargain scrimmage."

"To 'oo wus you alludin', Mister Mitchell?" demanded the Duke haughtily.

The way of putting the question staggered the Shrimp. He struck a pose and bowed low.

"To who was I alludin', Mr. Perkins, sir?" he mimicked. "Who'd I be alludin' to if not to yer fr'en' what jiggles her crutch sticks an' beetle crushers at that dime museum in Noo York?"

The Duke remained silent, and the Shrimp went away whistling.

"Say, Dook," he said, retracing his steps and stopping in front of him, "scuse me fer bein' alive, but on de level, is it true she's run off wid a ash can white wing?"

"You're booboo, ain't yer? Hi dunno what you're talkin' abaout," replied the Duke, whose heart sank within him at the thought that behind the Shrimp's raillery there might be bad news concerning Nora.

"No, ol' chap, I'm not dotty," continued the Shrimp. "I keeps a haff Nelson an' a double diamon' cinch on me sense, so's not to let it git away from me. But I seen the old 'ooman a-tearin' her hair just now an' cryin' like she'd been peelin' onions 'cause de boss came back from de village widout any mail. 'I know somethin's wrong wid me baby,' she was hollerin'. 'They never write any more. I ain't had a letter from her an' Patsy for a week, an' there was a owl hootin' on de roof last night, an' I put me stockin' on inside out dis mornin'.' Fancy callin' dat peep show stall a baby! She's a infant fermuminum—I don't think."

"An' d'you know what I think?" commented the Duke. "I think you're a low daown mut to talk like that of any gal, 'specially such a nice, respectable gal as Miss O'Brien."

Among the Many Gratifying Things

We have experienced during twenty-three years of value-giving to satisfied customers, the fact that the people to whom we have sold furniture, have been people in the main who have shown good judgment and know how to appreciate real values.

* * * * * * *

We know, and so does every thoughtful person (excuse this axiom for it's pretty old) that "a chain is no stronger than its weakest link." Just so with a piece of woodwork. If a piece of poor wood has been put into an article, no craftsman, however skilled, can make a perfect job.

* * * * * * *

Almost invariably that's the wood that is put into the seemingly rediculously low-priced furniture you see advertised. How adroitly the pen-and-ink artist, with his wash-drawing process, presents a beautiful piece of furniture. He accomplishes on paper what the woodworker couldn't do, in the article illustrated. Well, you all know about it, so there.

* * * * * * *

This class of furniture is what misleads the buyers. Another instance—if you please—where "furniture appearances are deceptive"—when not in the hands of reliable dealers. No customers of ours has any such experience to fear. They never have had. They never will have.

* * * * * * *

We believe no one will question the privilege and pleasure we take in making these statements. They may sound a trifle like boasts—but who would not take pride in a business that has been built to such large proportions, when it can be conscientiously said that it has been done by always treating all patrons right, by giving them what they wanted at the lowest price for which it could be sold, consistent with the quality.

* * * * * * *

Well, we have the satisfaction of knowing that our business principles have been just and fair, as is so eminently vouched for by the large number of people who always come here to buy their furniture.

* * * * * * *

Now! If we have served your friends and your neighbors with such pronounced satisfaction during all these years, don't you suppose we will do equally well by you? Come in and we will talk it over. "You get just what you pay for when you buy here."

P.H.S. BASKETBALL FIVE WINS FROM N. P. H. S.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team went down to defeat in a contest with the Plainfield High School five yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. by the score of 28 to 19. At the begining of the game things looked a little in North Plainfield's favor but the local boys soon picked up and showed what they could do. Morris played the star game for Plainfield Highr School, making eight of the twelve goals shot from floor. Clark did some pretty shooting and played a strong game at forward. Smith played the best game for North Plainfield, making most of the goals for them. Doane and Conroy started by the foul goals they shot for their respective teams. In the first part of the game the ball hovered around the North Plainfield goal a great part of the time but the fellows couldn't seem to get it in. They played all around P. H. S. in their passing. All during the first half. Dunning distinguished himself by his powerful guarding. At the end of the first half the score stood 17-6 in favor of P. H. S.

The second half was spent in a great deal of passing and fumbling, but few shots, then North Plainfield began to pick up and also did their score, and in the last few minutes some pretty classy work was shown by both teams. The line-up:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Clark, Woodhull; centre, Morris; guards, Overton, Doane. Goals made were, Clark 2, Woodhull 1, Morris 8, Overton 1, Doane 4 foul goals.

N. P.—Forwards, Conroy, Stein; center, Smith; guards, Becker and Dunning. Goals, Conroy 5 fouls, Stein 2, Smith 3, Becker 1, Dunning 1. Time of halves 20 minutes. Paul Collier, umpire.

LEAGUE STANDING OF THE BOWLERS

The Central Bowling League, of which the Park Club is a member, is progressing finely and there is unusual interest in the results of the various matches. The tournament was started during the week ending November 27, and since then a number of high scores have been made. The league is composed of the Parks, the Jersey City club, The Elizabeth Y. M. C. A., Cranford Casino, Newark Bay, Roselle Casino and Elizabeth club. The standing of the clubs for the week ending December 4 is as follows:

	W.	L.	Av.	HS.
Y. M. C. A.	5	1	.864	932
Jersey City	5	1	.849	955
Elizabeth	3	3	.838	964
Park Club	2	4	.866	922
Newark Bay	2	4	.842	877
Roselle	2	4	.802	875
Cranford	2	4	.800	865

Of the Park club players, Mulford holds the highest average, 180.1, being third. Barlow is sixth with 177.3, Long seventh with 176.7, while Ball holds twentieth position with an average of 167. 3 and Daniel is twenty-fourth with 164.3.

Garrison, of the Jersey City club holds the highest individual score, 243, while the Elizabeth club has the highest team score, 964. The league this season is composed of much stronger players and in view of this the showing made by the Parks is creditable. They are more than holding their own and stand an excellent chance to win the trophy again.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS FOR COMING SEASON

The prospects of a representative baseball team in Plainfield next season is very slim, according to the opinion of those who have heretofore been interested in the national game here. A Daily Press reporter in conversation with Manager Ernest Dorflinger, of the Plainfield Baseball team, learned that that organization will probably not be represented on the local diamond next season.

Manager Dorflinger has been in communication with the owners of Crescent Oval with a view to purchasing the land, but the price is practically prohibitive. The owners want $800 an acre and the tract comprises about six acres. This price together with the taxes would make it an expensive proposition for the club. And there is no other available site that would come within the resources of the club.

The Plainfield, or Clinton Avenue team, has been together for a great many years and the prospects of disbanding are not enjoyed by its many supporters who have looked to it for a good articles of ball. However, the Y. M. C. A. will be in the field as usual and according to Manager Listman's plans will furnish better baseball than ever before.

"Lou" Wilstse, who resided here, had plans under consideration for placing a first-class semi-professional team here next season, but nothing definite has been heard from him of late. He is away from the city at present and his views cannot be learned.

Several players on the Plainfield team will be found on minor league clubs next season. "Jack" Martin, the star short-stop, will go with Worcester, of the New England League, while Emery, one of the best third basemen in this part of the State, will be given a try-out by the Reading Tri-State League team.

The manager of the Readings is a personal friend of Manager Dorflinger, and as soon as the latter mentioned Emery to him, he jumped at the chance to get a good man. Emery is exceptionally fast as a third baseman, seldom misses a chance and his throwing arm is in the pink of condition. Besides, he has a good average in batting. He will doubtless make good.

"Cliff" Randolph, who was formerly the star pitcher for the local team and who was with the Binghampton New York State League club last season, will return to that team in the spring. He made a favorable impression there and next season should do far better work after a year in fast company.

Other members of the Plainfield team will doubtless find good berths by the time the season opens. The passing away of the local organization is regretted by a host of fans, but with the Y. M. C. A. team in the field the fact that it has no local opposition, will likely prove an incentive to put up a first-class article of ball and schedule games with only the best team available.

PLAINFIELD FIVE TWICE DEFEATED BY ELIZABETH

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball players sustained a double defeat at Elizabeth, last night. The first team was swamped by the Elizabeth association team by the score of 68 to 32. The locals were weakened considerably owing to the inability of Cahoone and Aaholm to play, owing to injuries. Denton also played under disadvantages. In the first part of the game he strained his muscles which made it necessary for him to slow up.

The Y. M. C. A. second team fell before the speed of the Loeser Brothers' quintette in a close game, the score being 28 to 25. The line-ups:

Plainfield Y. M. C. A.—Forwards, Collier, Denton; centre, Linke; guards, Rumsey, Mackey, Hoagland and Fritts.

Elizabeth Y. M. C. A.—Forwards, Reeves, Patterson, Ross; cenre, Seller; guards, Richards and Loeser.

Goals from field, Collier, 2; Denton, 5; Linke, 6; Rumsey, 2; Reeves, 7; Patterson, 8; Seller, 6; Richards, 1; Loeser, 3. Goals from foul, Collier, 2. Officials—Listman and Cann.

Second Game.

Y. M. C. A. (second team)—Forwards, Templin, Bentley; centre, Hoagland; guards, Fritts and Mackey.

Loeser Brothers—Forwards, Bill and Charles; centre, Bob; guards, Chris and Ned.

Goals from field—Charles, 2; Bob, 4; Chris, 3; Ed, 4; Templin, 4; Bentley, 1; Hoagland, 1; Fritts, 2; Mackey, 4. Goals from foul—Ed, 1; Hoagland, 1. Officials—Cann and Lines.

Adjourned the Case.

The case of cruelty to animals preferred against Thomas Hand, of Terrell road, was adjourned this morning until January 7 at the request of Walter Hetfield, Sr., who wants a complaint in regular form drawn up against his client. He may demand a trial by jury.

ACCIDENTS ON THE ICE

Skating Season Ushered in by Five Mishaps on Tier's Pond.

WILLIAM SUTTON IS A HERO.

Rescued William McDonald From Being Drowned—Walter Penney Had a Close Deal.

Skating is now the king of local sports. The cold snap froze up all the ponds in this city and vicinity and the ice speeders were out in large numbers on Saturday and yesterday. All day yesterday skaters filled Tier's pond, while hundreds of youths journeyed to New Market and Washington Valley.

The first day of the sport was featured by five escapes and accidents, all of which occurred on Tier's pond on Saturday.

One of the narrow escapes from drowning was in the case of Walter Penney, the ten-year-old son of James Penney, of Watchung avenue. Young Penney was on the pond with a party of playmates. He ventured on a section of thin ice and broke through the surface. He was unable to extricate himself from his perilous position, and was about to sink for the third time when Willie Hand pulled him out of the water with a hockey stick.

Harry Pierce, twelve years old, of West Fourth street, fell on the ice while skating and broke his right wrist. He was taken to the office of Dr. Pittis, who attended to the injury.

Another accident, which nearly cost the lives of two young men occurred at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. William McDonald, of Race street, with a companion, while crossing the ice on Tier's pond near the dam, broke through and dropped into water over their heads. William Sutton performed a deed of valor when he succeeded after several attempts, in rescuing his friends.

McDonald went down twice and was in a precarious position when Sutton extended a limb of a tree which had been wrenched from an elm nearby by one who refused to give his name and hauled the two shivering boys to safety. So far as can be ascertained no bad results have followed the immersion.

John Kennedy, another youthful skater, steered himself into an air-hole and was immersed. He was rescued by two skaters.

Dr. Coles Unveils His Bronze Gift.

—Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of New York, whose summer home is at Scotch Plains, was the donor last year of a fine bronze replica of the Paris bust of Mendelssohn, to Calvary Baptist church, New York, which he unveiled last night at the church service when Mendelssohn's Oratorio "Elijah" was rendered, and Rev. Dr. MacArthur's address had "Elijah" for its subject.

The gift was a token of Dr. Coles' appreciation of the work of Calvary church and of the almost forty years' pastorate of Dr. MacArthur.

LOVING COUPLE SEEKS SERVICES OF MINISTER

A couple who were anxious to be married arrived in Elizabeth this morning and asked several clergymen to officiate. But as they were not residents of the State and had no license their request was refused. The young woman gave her name as Miss Eleanor Tenney, and claimed to have a sister living here. The man, who says he came from Boston, gave his name as Allen S. Weeks. Miss Tenney gave her home address as Philadelphia and said that she was well known to people in this city.

After trying in vain to find someone to perform the ceremony they boarded a train for this city, but up to press time had not been heard from in matrimonial circles, that is to say Judge Hezekiah Hand had not seen them.

HE EXPLAINS CHANGES IN TELEPHONE SERVICE

The new telephone directory recently delivered contains the names of two new exchanges in this vicinity—Fanwood and Washingtonville. "The latter," said Mr. Burns, the local agent of the company, "is established for the purpose of rendering service to the farmers in this section for reasonable rental. Fanwood was established for the purpose of offering a similar favor to the subscribers in that borough and in Scotch Plains and other parts of Fanwood township, which the new exchange includes. In the territory covered by both these exchanges the telephone rates formerly quoted were Plainfield rates with a certain amount added for mileage because the stations were located so far from the Plainfield Central Office. In many cases this mileage made the rate almost prohibitive.

"Conforming to the desires of the present subscribers in the sections in question," said Mr. Burns, "the new exchanges were established and the company was able to quote rates practically one-half what they had formerly been. From each of these exchanges there will be a five-cent toll charge to Plainfield, but the amount saved annually on the basic charge for the service would purchase great numbers of these messages—approximately 500 from each telephone.

"In the Washingtonville section there were practically no telephones and the exchange is awaiting the development of business, which is sure to come with the reduced rate. In the Fanwood Exchange about forty subscribers were benefitted by the change."

SEATS ARE ON SALE NOW FOR "THE CLIMAX."

Interest in the forthcoming production of "The Climax" in connection with the charity ball on the night of December 31 is great. The box office of the Plainfield theatre was opened for the sale of tickets this morning at 5 o'clock and ten minutes after that hour there was a long line of men eager to purchase choice seats.

Mayor Fisk was there to see that things went along smoothly and he said this morning that there is every indication that the house will be sold out shortly.

"The Climax" will have as a special attraction Effingham Pinto, the young actor from this city, who has "made good" in the best company, and it will be the New York cast which has made such a success of this wonderful play which will produce it here. Those who want good seats are advised to get in line. Theatre parties of twenty, fourteen and ten bought their tickets this morning.

HIGHWAYMAN IS CAUGHT

RESCUED IN THE NICK OF TIME.

Henry Allen, Al. DeCamp and John Velomey Make Capture—Secured No Booty.

What may prove to have been an important capture was made by the borough police Saturday night. Michael Ricardel, a six foot Italian, employed at Wilson's stone quarry, is the man and he was captured after a fight in the bushes alongside the brook near Maul's hotel.

Mrs. Edward Cannon, of Watchung, while on her way home from this city after a shopping trip at about 10 o'clock, was attacked by the Italian a hundred yards above the hotel, knocked down and choked. The Italian attempted to rob Mrs. Cannon, but his attempt was frustrated by some very vigorous screaming which attracted Henry Allen, Al. DeCamp and John Valomey, who were in the hotel.

These three men ran to the assistance of Mrs. Cannon and the Italian made off through the bushes. After escorting Mr. Cannon to the home of John Gunn, Allen and his companions instituted a search for the burly highwayman. They finally located him hiding behind some logs where he had jumped a distance of ten feet in an endeavor to elude his pursuers. They hauled Ricardel out and brought him to the hotel, where he was identified by his victim. Chief Weiss was then telephoned for and arrested Ricardel. He will be taken by Detective George Totten to Somerville today, where the grand jury is in session.

Mrs. Cannon said that she saw the man following her when she had gone about a hundred feet from the trolley terminus, and in trying to avoid him she stepped into the light of Maul's hotel and for fifteen minutes waited for him to disappear. Not seeing the man again she made another start for home but she had not proceeded far when the Italian jumped from behind some bushes, grabbed her by the throat and threw her to the ground with sufficient force to stun her. However, she quickly regained her senses and creamed lustily for help. This was not long in coming and Ricardel made off without securing any booty.

It is believed that this is the same man who murderously assaulted George Elmer, the aged recluse, near the same place last summer.

MAYOR-ELECT SANFORD TO ACT AS KRIS KRINGLE

Mayor-elect William A. Sanford is being hailed as Santa Claus by the little girls of Dunellen Mr. Sanford has always been popular with the little folks of that borough and an evidence of his standing with his juvenile constituents was gathered by the mayor-elect when he went to the Dunellen postoffice Saturday evening. In a pack of letters he discovered a missive signed by Eloise, a little girl, who addressed him as Santa Claus, asking him to have a doll baby for her on Christmas eve.

The letter was printed in a childish hand and read as follows:

Mayor Sanford,

Dear Santa Claus:

My mamma says you are going to take Santa Claus' place in Dunellen this year. Don't forget to leave me a nice big doll baby with a pink dress and also a baby carriage if you can spare one. I have been a good girl all the year. Ask my mamma.

Your friend,

ELOISE.

Mr Sanford gave a hearty laugh when he read the message to a Daily Press reporter and said in his characteristic jovial manner: "God bless Eloise. If she will send me her full name and address I'll see that Santa Claus gives her one of the largest and pretties dolls in his stock.

"If there are any other little girls in Dunellen," continued the mayor-elect, "who want doll babies, tell them to drop me a few lines and I will see that old Santa supplies their wants."

Plenty of Skating Nearby.

Boys and girls from this city and North Plainfield are taking advantage of the fine skating at Washington Valley, where Maul's pond is said to be in splendid condition. New Market pond is also able to bear the weight of the steel shod enthusiasts and was crowded Saturday afternoon.

MAY HAVE TO FACE CHARGE OF DESERTION

Charles Vermeule, twenty-five years old, has been arrested in Rochester, N. Y., on a charge of vagrancy. He was picked up by the police on Friday and is being held until his record here can be investigated. He gave his address as 402 Park avenue.

Vermeule, according to the story he told the Rochester police has not seen his wife and son for several months and on that account he is being held until an investigation is made. It is believed that he abandoned his family after resigning his position as station master with the North Jersey Street Railway Company some months ago. It is believed that his wife is living in Jersey City and Miss Holly, agent of the Charity Organization Society, will try to locate her.

Chief Kiely, of the local police, said this morning that there were no complaints lodged with him against Vermeule.

HE WROTE HIS WILL ON A POSTAL CARD

It has just been learned that Ira Randolph, who died Thursday night, December 9, at the home of James C. Manning on Dunellen avenue, wrote his will on a postal card while a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital from September 27 to November 8. It was an exceedingly brief will reading as follows: "I bequeath all I possess to my niece, Mary Moore."

Mr. Randolph possessed considerable property and money and it is believed that he intended making a more specific disposition of his property, but owing to his severe illness, was unable to do so. Mrs. Moore was a favorite niece, being the daughter of his only sister, Mrs. Catherine Rocap. He was never married. So far as known the will has not been offered for probate as yet.

THINK HE'S HIGHWAYMAN

Burt Sawyer is Accused of Attacking Servant Girl.

WAS CAUGHT BY MARSHALS.

Two Complaints on File—Recorder Dolliver to Give Prisoner a Hearing Tonight.

Another holdup was reported from the borough last night. Burt Sawyer, who claims Connecticut as his home, will be arraigned before Recorder Dolliver this evening at 5:30 for having attacked Jennie Cross, a domestic in the employ of Councilman William L. Smalley, Jr., at 7:30 o'clock last night near Stine's bridge.

Miss Cross was returning home from a visit to friends in this city and was nearing the bridge when Sawyer, it is alleged, jumped at her and attempted to seize her pocketbook. Her shouts were heard by Mr. Smalley, who ran to her assistance. The man got away and the thoroughly frightened girl was escorted home by her employer. Mr. Smalley telephoned to Chief Weiss, who dispatched Marshals Pope and Keller to the scene of the holdup.

After an hour's search the marshals found Sawyer in the woods with an axe in his hand and he pretended to be cutting bean poles. He was taken to the borough jail and will have his hearing tonight. He is believed to be the same man who attacked a domestic in the employ of William J. Butfield in the same place about a week ago.

PUPILS WILL TELL YOU "WHY SANTA IS HAPPY"

"Why Santa is Happy," is the title of a Christmas cantata to be given at the Bryant school on Wednesday night. The scene is laid in Santa's toy shop, and the synopsis is as follows:

A reward of a thousand dollars was offered by him for its recovery. The Misses Mistletoe and Jack and Joe Holly find him in Santa's establishment, where he has been taken by the Billykins, jolly little helpers of Santa's.

CAUSE OF THE BLAZE MYSTIFIES FIRE CHIEF

Fire, of a mysterious origin, on Saturday afternoon destroyed a one-story frame building in the rear of the residence of George W Chandler, 728 Carlton avenue. The structure was recently erected by Captain John E. Curtis, of 715 Carlton avenue, a son-in-law of Mr. Chandler, for a garage, but the building was utilized as a storehouse, and at the time of its destruction the contents consisted of a few empty boxes. A number of pigeons were also consumed by the flames. The loss is placed at $250, covered by insurance.

The alarm was sounded at 4:35 o'clock and when the firemen reached the scene the flames were burning through the roof. One stream was put on the flames and after three quarters of an hour's labor the fire was extinguished. The frame of the structure is standing but the building was virtually destroyed.

Chief Doane entertained the opinion at first that the building was set on fire by a gang of small boys, who had been in the habit of building bonfires near the building of late. The matter was reported to Chief Kiely, but after a thorough investigation by the latter official, no evidence could be discovered that the fire started on the outside of the building. Now, it is the impression that the crossing of electric wires caused the blaze.

DR. STILLMAN PRIZE AT STEVENS' INSTITUTE.

Dr. Thomas B. Stillman, formerly of this city, and for a great many years a professor at Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, has founded the Stillman Prize in Applied Technology in memory of his mother, Mary Starr Stillman. This prize, amounting to $50, will be awarded annually, beginning 1910, to the member of the senior class who prepares the best paper on a subject pertaining to applied technology.

The subject for these papers will be selected by the Curriculum committee of the faculty and will be announced six months in advance of commencement. The papers submitted in competition for the prize must be presented to the chairman of the committee not later than May 1. If none of the papers submitted should be found deserving, the prize will not be awarded.

Ranchman's Ideas.

Arthur W. Templin, formerly of 189 North avenue, but now a ranchman in Montana, arrived Saturday to spend the holidays with his parents. Mr. Templin recently disposed of some five thousand sheep at the Chicago stock yards before leaving for the East. He says the life of outdoor work on a ranch is all that could be desired for a man who wants to become rugged and healthy, and while there are some hardships in the business the return makes the trouble worth while.

Willie Mullen in Trouble.

Willie Mullen, of this city, and Catharine Kahill, of New Market, were arrested in the borough on Saturday night by Chief Weiss, who entered a charge of disorderly conduct against the pair in the borough court this morning. Mullen and his pal were each fined five dollars by Recorder Dolliver.

Pat Kearns on a Frolic.

Patrick "White Wings" Kearns, of the city street cleaning department, imbibed too freely in the borough Saturday night and was arrested by Chief Weiss. This morning Recorder Dolliver suspended sentence.

MANY JOIN RANKS OF "GOOD FELLOW"

Real Christmas Cheer Assured for Poor Little Fellows by Red-Blood Recruits.

Special dispatch from Santa Claus Land, 2:30 p. m.—One hundred and seventy-five poor little fellows will find something in their stockings on Christmas morn; that number having been provided for already by the Army of Good Fellows. Can we enlist enough recruits to provide for 500? There are more than that number who have no naughty marks against them.

SANTA CLAUS.

RECIPE FOR A "GOOD FELLOW."

Take two minutes' consideration of your own inherent desire to give some child that ought to laugh on Christmas the reason for doing so; seize an impulse just as it is formed, while it is fresh and almost sizzling; grab the opportunity presented by the offer of a "Good Fellow" to all good fellows of Plainfield; add as much money as you think you can spare for the sake of children to whom the world owes a Christmas; stir it up briskly and dish it out in the form of the following letter:

"Santa Claus, care of The Daily Press.—I live at No. ——— street. I will be Santa Claus to —— children.

Sign that and put it in the mail. It will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on it the names and addresses of as many children as you asked for. It will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all.

Their hearts brimming over with sympathy for the poor children whose prospects for a visit from Santa Claus have been rather slim, many "Good Fellows" yesterday added their names to the list of those who are willing to play the part of good old Kris Kringle and bring joy to the souls of the destitute youngsters.

A large number of "Good Fellows" have answered the call of the "Good Fellow" who started something when he appealed to his comrades throughout Plainfield and North Plainfield. These have written to Santa Claus in care of The Daily Press and have agreed to carry Christmas to many children whose names are to be placed in the hands of the "Good Fellows" immediately.

In justice to all, it must be said that the "Good Fellows" are not confined to the male sex. Letters are being received from women and even from children. While old Santa always has been respresented with long whiskers and masculine attire, "Good Fellow" heartily welcomes the women and children.

As a matter of fact the children are not well up on Santa Claus lore, and it isn't going to matter much to them whether Kriss Kringle or Mrs. Kriss makes them a visit.

The Noble Army of Good Fellows will please take notice that they will receive their lists of names in tomorrow morning's first mail delivery. These lists will be mailed tonight.

Those red-blooded individuals who respond to the call will be good enough to enclose a stamped envelope with the address plainly written. It saves time and expense. Remember there are no "incidental expenses" in this undertaking; there is no advertising; no notoriety; no cheap and worldly charity where any vain-glorious one may shine by having his name flaunted in public print as a benefactor. There is too much of that sort in this world.

Don't fail to read the letter of Good Fellow published again today. It will do you a world of good and not only will you feel better for it but you will write instantly to "Santa Claus, care of The Daily Press."

Will Bring Joy.

This came today from a big hearted man:

"Please send me the names of twelve worthy children whose lives will be brightened and made happy by a little Christmas cheer. Your plans, dear Santa Claus and by its means, if adopted by all those who can help, joy and comfort may be brought right home on Christmas day to many little ones who need a ray of light and the gladness which comes from the sunshine of a warm heart—those who help will enjoy, I'm sure, that complete Christmas cheerfulness which comes from a knowledge of having helped others have a merry Christmas day."

He Likes the Plan.

"Good Fellow" acknowledges the receipt of this:

SOMERVILLE.

A concert and entertainment of unusual interest was given in the Second Reformed church, on Thursday evening, under the direction of Mrs. Satterthwaite, leader of the choir, and her sister, Miss Jessie Dell Lewis. One hundred and seventy-five children and young people took part in the event. They had been training for ten weeks. The children were all seated on a huge stage, erected for the occasion, and presented a fine appearance. The program consisted of choruses, recitations and numerous musical selections, many in costume. The Little Mothers was a beautiful selection, sung and acted by ten little children under six. The Jolly Bumble and the Owl and the Pussy Cat were two other numbers sung and acted by several little girls. The entertainment was concluded by the audience rising and singing with the performers, "The Star Spangled Banner," while a large flag was waved.

NEW BRUNSWICK FIRE DEPARTMENT CONDEMNED.

A complete reorganization of the volunteer fire department at New Brunswick is recommended by the National Board of Underwriters in their report received at New Brunswick Saturday. The underwriters say the city cannot expect adequate fire protection under existing conditions.

The large membership of the department due to social and political conditions, with the rivalry between individual companies has proven detrimental to the service. The amount appropriated by the city is declared inadequate and the present equipment too small. The board avers the efficiency of the department has steadily decreased in the past few years, with no prospects of improvement unless radical changes are made at once.

The board urges a paid department and the disbanding of the present companies. A higher water pressure is advocated. The report created something of a sensation.

RECEPTION TO A MAN ACQUITTED OF MURDER.

Elizabeth, Dec. 20.—Following the release under $2,000 bail Thursday of Humbert Alaise, a reception was given to him by his countrymen in Peterstown, the Italian quarter of Elizabeth. Alaise, as told, was acquitted Wednesday on his plea of self-defense of the murder of one of his countrymen, and has been indicted for killing another of them. Alaise's bondsmen were Nicola La Carte, of 621 Third avenue, and Joseph Calabro, of 574 Fourth avenue, this city, each of whom qualified in the sum of $2,000. La Carte is Elizabeth's contractor for rendering the city garbage, and also carries on a general contracting business.

Calabro is a mason builder and contractor.

It is the general opinion here that Alaise will never be brought to trial on the second murder charge.

TO THE "GOOD FELLOWS" OF PLAINFIELD

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS OF PLAINFIELD:

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I have tried for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press was asked to aid in reaching the good fellow by publishing this suggestion and to receive your communication in order that you may be assured of good faith and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll od a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

The Daily Press has investigated the "good fellow" who wrote the above, has looked him in the eye and put its O. K. on the plan. The cold blooded blase reporter who saw him wrote: "He made me feel, personally, that it would be really worth while in satisfaction to carry a little happiness to some children who otherwise wouldn't get any on Christmas eve." "Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of from fifteen to twenty children a year in Plainfield. He said that last Christmas day he wished he had curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might have had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through school teachers, investigators of various organizations who work in poverty stricken districts and others who come in contact with those whom we always have with us. Lists of worthy cases will be welcomed from such organizations as the Charity Organization Society, Salvation Army, King's Daughters, and churches of all demoninations. These lists should be verified and certified to by the officers of the organizations submitting them and should be arranged by wards and divisions of the city.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus" care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.———— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.

John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come in, good fellows.

William B. Wilson.

William B. Wilson, son of the late Colonel John F. Wilson, of "Tunlaw," North Plainfield, died Saturday evening at his home in Baltimore, Md. He had been ill but a short time. Mr. Wilson had made his home in Baltimore for several years. His cousin, J. Alexander Wilson, of Grove street, was with him when he died.

Miss Grace Debele Injured.

Miss Grace Debele, of Pine Grove farm, Rock avenue, bookkeeper for Hirst & Bro., of East Fourth street, severely sprained her right ankle Thursday morning. She was going from the store to the warerooms, when she slipped on an incline, spraining the ankle. Medical attention was secured and Miss Debele is now able to again take up her work.

I am out of the children business myself, but enclose $5, which I think you will find some way of being handled along the line of your suggestions. Rev. Mr. Warner or the Salvation Army will doubtless handle any cash which you receive and do it to good advantage. The only conditions I make are that the children who would not otherwise have any Christmas be considered, and that the gifts be distributed without regard to creed or color. I would like to see each recipient get a toy of book and some fruit and candy. Whether this amount will provide for five or ten or more, I will leave it to those better qualified to handle the matter than I am. I wish you every success."

Among the batch of letters today is this from a woman recruit:

"I will be Santa Claus to three children; wish I could make it twenty. May your Christmas be richly blessed!"

"I would like to be permitted to help make some little ones happy who otherwise might have a sad Christmas and I will look after five children."

Idea Splendid.

One of Plainfield's solid and public spirited men writes: "The idea of 'Good Fellow' is a splendid way to make the Christmas spirit help the kids who would otherwise lose the joy of the day. Please send me the names of ten children."

"Good Fellow" wishes to express his hearty thanks to the regiment already recruited. The enlistment blanks filled in by the recruits are being arranged by wards and districts and the work of compiling the names of worthy little children is also being rushed. The Charity Organization Society, a clergyman too modest to allow his name to appear and the Salvation Army are co-operating in the cause and their services are invaluable in many ways.

This afternoon the following sentiment was received from one who is now mustered in the Army of Good Fellows:

"Thanks to Good Fellow, I would like the names of five children who would enjoy a taste of Christmas joy."

PARK AVE. BAPTISTS OBSERVED CHRISTMAS

Christmas Sunday was observed by the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school yesterday afternoon, with exercises of unusual interest, which was enjoyed by one of the largest audiences in the history of the school. The program, which was in charge of Superintendent George E. Hall, follows:

Opening selection, orchestra; hymn, "Joy to the World," school; prayer, W. J. Clark; carol, "Haste to Meet Him," school; recitation, "The Beautiful Story," Edward Ryder; song, "Christ Was Once a Little Boy," primary department; carol, "Heralds of Christmas Morning," school; offertory selection, orchestra; carol, "Shine On, O Star," school; recitation, "Keeping Jesus' Birthday," Doris Henry, Olive George, Ada Dayton, Cornelius Smith; carol, "Guard the Redeemer's Rest," school; song, "The Angel Song," primary department; recitation, "Birthday of Our King," Clara Hadley; carol, "Christ Is Born," school; recitation, "Charms of Yuletide," Jennie Dayton; recitation, "When Christmas Comes," Gladys Hadley; carol, "Portals of Light," school; recitation, "In the Wintry Heaven," Emily VanWinkle; recitation, "Stars and Candles," Ernest Naylor, Vitor Chamberlin, Harold Bush, Joe Bush, Wilbur Cuming; carol, "To the King," school; address, Miss Ruth Angel; carol, "The Holy Night," Mrs. Ada Cuming, Miss Adelia Runyon and school; carol, "Singing in the Starlight," school; emblematical exercise, "The Christmas Light," the Misses Arline Brown, Edith Bechtel, Edith Neilsen, Ida Odam, Dorothy Hall, Helen Poole, Elsie Stelle, Mildred Poole, Ethel Naylor, Edith Whitney; carol, "Bethlehem," school; selection, orchestra.

The exercises by the elementary department were in charge of the superintendent, Miss Elmira Runyon. Splendid work was done by the orchestra of fifteen pieces, led by Arthur S. Mosher and included the following:

Violins, Dyckman Winckler, Edson Martin, Ernest Higham, Chauncey Wheeler, Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown, Arthur S. Mosher; flute, Elmer P. Wheeler; viola, G. W. V. Moy; 'cello, Dr. J. F. Berg; bass, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan; cornet, Whitney Frazee and Edward Young; trombone, Garret T. Dunham; piano, Miss Mary E. Clark. The selections were as follows:

"Gloria" from J. Haydn's B flat mass; "Serenade," cornet solo, Whitney Frazee, with orchestra accompaniment; "March Pontificale," Gounod.

In response to an appeal that had been previously made by the superintendent, a large quantity of toys, games and provisions were brought in by members of the school; all of which were taken to The Plainfield Day Nursery at the close of the session, for the children's Christmas. The offering taken together with donations received by the superintendent, amounted to $35.29 and this will be given to the Day Nursery also.

The talk by Miss Ruth Angel, of New York, was especially interesting to both children and adults. She wore the typical costume of the native Jewish woman and her remarks held the close attention of every one present, as she told of the customs of the Jews at the time of the birth of Christ, and in her pleasing manner told again the wonderful Christmas story. Specimens of the children's work in the various grades of the elementary department were on exhibition, and attracted considerable attention and complimentary remarks.

A feature of the program was the beautiful calendar, with which Superintendent Hall presented every one in attendance, as a souvenir of the happy session of the school.

MRS. DOWD BRUISED ON CROWDED TROLLEY CAR.

Mrs. Thomas Dowd, of Westfield, mother of Mrs. James Blair, of North Plainfield, was so roughly handled on a main line trolley car on Saturday evening that she was bruised and required the services of Dr. Pettis, who after attending her sent her home on another car.

Mrs. Dowd was pushed up against the platform railing of a car and received bruises to her back and limbs and was forced to drop her muff and other packages. The man who did the shoving escaped in the excitement.

Calendars for Patrons.

Following its annual custom the progressive Plainfield Trust Company is distributing among its patrons beautiful art calendars for the home and sensible and hand big date calendars for the business office. The Trust Company, as usual, is the first to place its calendars among its friends.

Will Not Open Until January.

The public market on North avenue will not be opened until probably the first week in January. The owners have decided that the place will not be opened until all the lessees of the various stalls are ready and all of the stalls are leased and stocked up ready to do business.

The Sewing School of Warren chapel has postponed its meetings until January 8.

George H. Rockefeller has tendered his resignation as librarian of the West End Tabernacle.

The Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel will resume its meetings after the holidays.

"The Coming of the King" will be sung by the choir of the First M. E. church next Sunday night

The Christmas entertainment at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel will be held Monday night, December 27, when a special program will be presented.

Next Sunday all of the schools connected with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet at the latter place and participate in a Christmas service.

Dr. H. K. Carroll preached a Christmas sermon at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, yesterday morning and J. D. Loizeaux, of this city, had charge of the evening service.

The rendition of Guilmant's music by organist and choir master S. Frederick Smith, of Grace P. E. church yesterday was a treat which will be remembered by those who heard it. Guilmant, one of France's most eminent organists, has composed some of the best organ music of his time and the March Funebre and Chant Seraphique which was played yesterday is a masterpiece of beauty. Mr. Smith's interpretation of this music was splendid. All four selections were finely played.

John C. VanDyke, of East Fifth street, who is at Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment for injuries received in a fall a few weeks ago, is improving slowly.

COCKADES AND BUTTONS.

The cockade originated simply in the knot of ribbons or strings, by which the broad flaps of the seventeenth century round hat were "cocked," or drawn up to the brim in fine weather, and thus originated the three-cornered hat, as well as the cocked hat of the later times, says an exchange. There was nothing specially military about the usage, as the ignorant assert. The same strings survive in the loops of the hats of bishops and other ecclesiastical dignitaries in Great Britain: in the strings of the hats worn by French cures and Spanish and Italian padres, and in the cords which are still seen on the hats of some livery servants.

It naturally becomes the custom for military men to "cock" their hats with the livery color of the prince served, and, as the Hanoverian color was the convenient one of black, the "black cockade" became associated in the minds of the people with military uniform.

In an old Scotch song of Shirramuir, citing Woodword's Heraldry, we read of "the red coat lads with black cockades," and a knot a white ribbons was naturally chosen as the badge of their opponents.

When the old use of the strings was forgotten, the knot, in the form of a rosette of ribbon, survived, just as did the buttons on the backs of our coats, which were intended to fasten back the flaps in riding or marching.

STATE SENATE CAUCUS MONDAY, DECEMBER 27

President of the Senate Joseph S. Frelinghuysen has announced that the date of the Senate Republican caucus for the selection of officers will take place Monday, December 27, at 11 o'clock, in the State House.

This slate, like that of the House of Assembly, was practically decided upon some time ago, and the only thing of interest will be the sergeant-at-arms in which Mercer county is interested. Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, will be selected as president and Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union, majority leader. Howard Tyler, of Cumberland, is slated for clerk again and the minor offices will be determined by the Steering Committee.

There is a strong probability that the sergeant-at-arms will be wrested from Mercer county and go further south than this county. It will surely not go further north. North Jersey has been given everything to speak of and rumor has it that the southerners will make a fight for the sergeant's post. The fact that Speaker Ward comes from Bergen, Clerk Park from Passaic and the sergeant-at-arms of the House from Essex, all in the northern district, as against the leader, Mr. Edge, from Atlantic City, which is south, gives rise to the claims of the southerners for the Senate sergeant-at-arms.

The claim of the south Jerseyites to the Senate plums is that both the president and leader are from North Jersey — Senators Frelinghuysen from Somerset and Ackerman from Union, while the clerk, Howard Tyler, is from Cumberland, which they claim is just as unevenly balanced as the House. They claim more patronage and declare that the sergeant-at-arms should be shifted, as it is in Mercer, which is considered north.

Mercer will make a fight for it again, but whether the present incumbent, Gaudaloupe Holl, is to be returned, is not known only to those on the inside.

HOBO SUCCESSOR TO TELEGRAPH'S INVENTOR.

Morristown, Dec. 20.—A little smoke curling gently from out of the old weather-beaten and lightning struck chimney of the abandoned but historic building at the Speedwell Iron Works, where Samuel V. Morse toiled day and night in perfecting the telegraph, was seen early Friday morning by Policeman George Burney. It had been many years since any one had noticed any signs of life within the dilapidated structure and Burney knew this from tradition, so he decided to investigate.

In the room where, it is said, the first telegraph instrument was put together, the policeman found a hobo nestled closely beside a fire he had built in an old fireplace. The derelict had kindled the fire to keep warm and was about to really wake up and go out after food for breakfast when Burney walked in. It was learned that the man had been spending several nights in the building and oftentimes had invited hobo friends to share the comforts under a thatched roof.

Burney invited the stranger to accompany him to police headquarters. There he was given four days and costs in the county jail. He said his name was James Teack.

PASTORS SEE BOXING BOUT.

Westfield, Dec. 20.—The second annual banquet of the Westfield Riding and Driving Club was held Thursday night. Horsemen were present from various parts of this State. In the absence of J. H. Senior, president of the club, Dr. Chauncey M. F. Egel, vice-president, was toastmaster. Speeches were made by Dr. W. A. Hayes, pastor of the local Methodist church Rev. S. L. Loomis, pastor of the Congregational church; Rev. J. C. Greenwood, pastor of the Baptist church; Mayor A. L. Alpers, Harry Evans, W. K. Whatley, Andrew Guerin, of Morristown; W. G. Peckham and W. H. Hudson.

After the speechmaking was over the tables were cleared from the dining room and the company witnessed a six-round bout with boxing gloves between William Jones, of New York, and Tommy Prince, of Brooklyn. E. D. Floyd, chairman of the police committee of the Council, supervised the bout to see that there was nothing but exhibition boxing. At the conclusion of the boxing "Chuck" Connors, of New York, known as the Mayor of Chinatown, entertained the party by telling some of his experiences.

CHANGES IN STATE BOARD.

Governor Fort has appointed Robert L. Fleming, of Hudson county, to succeed Mrs. Katherine E Abbey, of Mt. Holly, as a member of the State Board of Children's Guardians. Recently, as told, the Governor named Benjamin F. Edsall, of Newark, to succeed Frederick G. Burnham, of Morristown. Mr. Burnham, it appears, had been reappointed without his knowledge, and on account of his age was not anxious to serve longer on the board. Mrs. Abbey, who is actively engaged in charitable work in Mt. Holly, said, in tendering her resignation, it would be impossible for her to attend the meetings.

President Hugh F. Fox, of this city, has also tendered his resignation, but no successor has yet been appointed. Mr. Fox has been actively identified with the work of the board since its inception, and has borne a large share of its financial burdens. Because of the pressure of business, he was anxious to retire some time ago, but was dissuaded from doing so by Governor Fort. He agreed to serve until the close of the last fiscal year, October 31, but tendered his resignation three days later.

GOVERNOR EXPLAINS INCREASED EXPENSES.

"When they make such a declaration they are simply talking in the air," commented Governor Fort at Trenton Saturday when asked if it were true, as alleged in the Democratic conference in Trenton last Saturday, that the cost of maintaining the State government had jumped from $1,500,000 to over $8,000,000 since the Republicans came into power fifteen years ago in New Jersey.

The Governor stated that the assertion made in the Democratic conference about State finances was a bald misrepresentation of the facts. He added that, while it was true that over $8,000,000 was passing annually through New Jersey's exchequer, as against about $1,500,000 when the Democrats were in power in the State house, at least one-half of the present revenue was returned to the counties and municipalities for the relief of local taxation, a sum totaling about $4,000,000, for which the State simply acts as a convenient collecting and distributing medium. This great sum of money, the Governor said, could by no stretch of facts be accounted as representing an increase in the cost of maintaining the State government.

"Now, as a matter of fact," continued the Governor, "the total cost of operating the State government during the last fiscal year was, in round figures, $4,300,000. This increase over the cost of running New Jersey fifteen years ago is not due to extravagance or inefficiency in the governmental machinery; it is the natural increase that might be expected from the growth of the State and the extension of its functions in various directions, from which not even the Democrats are willing to take a backward step. In a decade and a half New Jersey has grown in population from 1,700,000 to 2,500,000. Naturally, the demands on the State government have kept pace with the increase in population. All of our institutions for the care of dependents and criminals have grown larger and the expense of maintaining them has increased proportionately, while at the same time there have been several new institutions established and supported by the State. Figures will show that the ordinary fixed charges of administering the State departments collected together here in the State house have increased only $307,983 in the last five years, while the expenses of maintaining institutions have gone up $1,066,575 during the same period."

CAPT. BARTLETT WANTS TO REACH SOUTH POLE.

If he can raise $300,000 to outfit an expedition Captain Robert Bartlett, Peary's skipper, is on record at Boston Saturday as willing to try for the South Pole.

"I'd come pretty near either getting this or never returning to tell the tale," he said Saturday.

"The question of money is, strangely, one of the biggest in trips of this sort. It is hard to find people who will finance these expeditions. People have no idea what it has meant to fit out Peary. It is considerably worse than touching a friend for money under ordinary circumstances, but I would willingly go if I have a half a chance to fit out an expedition."

Bartlett was the man whom Peary left behind when the latter, with Mate Henson, a colored man, made his last reach for the North Pole.

MINERVA'S MAXIMS.

We seldom think, says Goethe, how much we owe our first love.

Tom Moore compared love to a potato, "because it shoots from the eyes."

Devotion is the last of our loves; through it the soul, thinking that it aspires only to felicity in another life, unconsciously seeks to procure some fresh sweetness in this.

"I would not be a women," said Montaigne, "for then I could not love her." Lady Montaigne said: "The only objection to being a man is that I should have to marry a woman."

Marry into a different blood and temperament from your own.

Every woman needs annually two chastisements; the bad woman in order to make her good, and the good one in order to keep her good.

"Marriage is a burden so heavy," said Madame de Stael, "that it requires two to carry it, and sometimes three."

A woman may be as true as steel, but then, you know, some steel is too highly tempered.

The whisper of a beautiful woman can be heard further than the loudest call of duty.

Before marriage it takes a woman a long time to make up her mind. After marriage she can make it up more quickly than her husband.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Novelized From Forbes' Play of the Same Name by JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"Aw, g'wan," said the Shrimp, delighted at having achieved his object of "taking a rise" out of the boy. "What d'you know about her? Let's have a decko at yer pome."

He snatched the paper from the Duke's hand and started away with it. This was the last straw. The Duke bounded up from the pail and dealt his tormentor a blow on the jaw with such force that it sent him to the ground. Then, before the Shrimp had recovered his senses sufficiently to realize just what had happened, the Duke had secured the paper, thrust it in his pocket and was standing over him, quivering with rage and inviting him to get up and be "spifflicated." The Shrimp was not slow to respond. He was on his feet in a twinkling and rushing at his adversary. The boys were fighting all over the stable, and the Duke was having the life pounded out of him, when Mallory, attracted by the noise of the scuffle, appeared upon the scene and took a hand. He kicked the Duke through the stable door and then kicked the Shrimp after him, administering a sound cuffing to each as he did so.

This ended the last duel the boys were ever to engage in, for the same evening there came a telegram for the Duke. It was from his mother in New York and read:

"Come here by first train. We leave for London on Saturday."

An hour later the Duke, marveling greatly, had bidden goodby to everybody, including the Shrimp, for he was not a boy of grudges and was on his way to the railroad station.

The Shrimp's account of Mrs. O'Brien's outburst was a faithful narration of what had occurred. Her mother's heart, pining for Nora, had led her to worry and into a frame of mind in which it needed only such a combination of dire omens as the hooting owl and the stocking turned inside out to cause her to harbor forebodings of a most alarming and depressing character. Mayhap also that intuition, which in some natures at times attains the degree of psychological phenomenon, especially in the case of a loved one absent upon whom thought is constantly concentrated, warned her that danger of some kind menaced the girl. There was nothing in the letters from New York calculated to occasion the slightest uneasiness, and the sisters had assured her repeatedly in answer to her inquiries that all was very well with them. Yet her mind was not tranquil, and her moping and fears gave both O'Brien and Mallory serious concern.

It was about three months after the departure of the Duke that an offer to purchase Lady Belle came to Mallory. His partner, Crawford, had not returned to Maple Grove after his first visit. Mallory was not exactly an adept in the art of letter writing. He decided that it would be advisable for him to continue the negotiations with McGovern in New York, where also he could have the benefit of ready counsel with Crawford. This course seemed the more advantageous in that it would afford him the yearned for opportunity of spending a few hours with Patsy. He argued, further, that if he gave the old people a treat by taking them with him Mrs. O'Brien, being able to see with her own eyes and hear with her own ears that everything was all right, would regain at once her cheerfulness and her health, which had begun to suffer.

The joy of the old woman when at the supper table he announced his plan and extended his invitation was a rich recompense for the sacrifice of expense it involved, for Mallory was very fond of her. O'Brien's satisfaction was scarcely less than that of his wife. Doubts and fears were dispelled as though by magic. Mrs. O'Brien recovered there and then her old time energy. A proposal by Mallory that they should keep the news of their coming from the girls and take them by surprise was adopted with almost childish enthusiasm.

The few days of preparation were busy and lively ones. O'Brien was so glad to see his wife herself again that he enjoyed the ordering about, admonishing and snubbing that seemed to be part and parcel of all extraordinary occasions and from which for several weeks he had been absolved, his spouse having been too apathetic to take an interest in things. The trip was an event of no small importance to both of them. They had not been to New York in many a long year and had been able to judge of the transformation the city had undergone during that period only from the descriptions given by Patsy when she came home for the holidays and from the pictorial postcards the girls sent to them from time to time. Such an overhauling of long hidden and carefully preserved treasures of the wardrobe the journey necessitated had never occurred in the household.

At last the great day when the trio found themselves amid the towering buildings of Manhattan arrived. It was early evening when, a little tired from their long journey, but buoyed by excitement and expectancy, they reached the metropolis and put up at a hotel near Times square, where Mrs. O'Brien arrayed herself in her gala attire, and Mallory telephoned to Crawford's residence and to McGovern, the prospective purchaser of Lady Belle, who promptly followed this call with a visit. Then after refreshing themselves with a substantial meal they set off for the theater, the old couple gleeful at the thought of the glad surprise they had reserved for the girls and prepared to enjoy the treat of their lives in seeing them act.

It was with much ceremony and a proud consciousness of the attention she was attracting that Mrs. O'Brien took her seat in the orchestra with her husband and Mallory. But soon after she had settled down and looked about her she was much vexed to discover that she had no fan. This was an awful oversight. How could any one sit in a theater in a black silk dress and lack a fan!

"Pat," she demanded in a stage whisper, "didn't Oi have a fan wanst?"

O'Brien, with a very dim recollection that at some remote period she had possessed this coquettish article, replied:

"Oi believe yez did."

"Thin phwy didn't ye think to bring it?" she wanted to know.

"Oi disremimbered that yez had such a thing," he answered apologetically. "Did yez foind it among the clothes?"

"Ye're the most contrariest man," she said, ignoring the question. "Ye nivir think av annything when it's for me. I do belave ye'd forgit yir head if it wasn't screwed on."

"Can't yez use yir handkerchief or yir programme?" he suggested.

"Patrick O'Brien," she exclaimed, "Oi'm ashamed of ye. Wheriver did yez learn such manners?"

O'Brien subsided, and Mallory, telling them he would rejoin them after the first act, went out to seek Crawford. First of all, however, he repaired to the stage door and, having ascertained that Patsy was upstairs, sent his message announcing their presence in the theater.

While Dan was on his way uptown, chuckling at the thought of the astonishment and delight of the girls, the O'Briens were trying in vain to recognize their darlings among the array of beauties on the stage. Throughout the first act the mother was straining her eyes and fidgeting and demanding of O'Brien whether he could see them. He had to confess that he could not, and a dime-in-the-slot opera glass failed to aid them, except to the extent of confirming Mrs. O'Brien's pronouncement that none of the girls was Patsy or Nora. At the conclusion of the second act, when they had not appeared, her growing conviction that something was wrong became a certainty, and with wild alarm she started out to investigate.

CHAPTER XII.

FEELING perfectly safe behind the door which already had sheltered her so effectively and familiar now with the room, Nora was seated on the bed. She was tired of trying to listen to the conversation she could not hear, except as a confused murmur, and having regained her composure was waiting for Patsy to go and intending to follow her at once. She realized that Crawford had gone too far, was dangerous, as Patsy had warned her he was and that it behooved her to be extremely careful. She surmised that her sister had come to get the note and, not hearing her voice raised in anger, assumed that Crawford had succeeded in mollifying her and that everything was going along all right. She wondered at the length of her stay, however, and was getting impatient.

When the door opened brusquely and Patsy, seeking refuge herself, appeared to her startled gaze, she was too surprised to move. Patsy as she closed the door and found herself confronting Nora was not less startled and astonished. The supper table standing between them told eloquently enough the tale of what had taken place. Doubt that her sister had fallen victim to Crawford's snares was impossible.

"My God!" she groaned.

Nora had risen to her feet and stood speechless.

Patsy went to her, her eyes blazing and her teeth set.

"What is this?" she demanded.

The girl did not, could not, answer.

"Speak," she ordered, "but whisper. Mom's in the next room."

"Mom!" gasped Nora, if possible, still more terrified.

She raised her hand to her head in a dazed way. Patsy grasped her wrist furiously, and, squeezing it as in a vise, twisted the arm until she forced the girl to her knees.

Chapter of Mishaps.

Samuel Bedell, of 684 West Third street, fell down the ladder of his barn while descending with a lantern. The fall caused the lantern to explode setting fire to the hay he had thrown down for his horse. An alarm was turned in from box 47, but Bedell had extinguished the fire before the department arrived. Bedell's legs and face were scraped and bruised in the fall. The damage to the barn was trifling.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATS THOMAS A.C., OF NEWARK

The Plainfield Association football club defeated the Thomas A. C., of Newark, Saturday afternoon on the Clinton avenue grounds, by a score of 2 to 0, in a fast and well-played game. The Plainfielders made a rush on the visitors' goal right at the start of the game and came very near scoring, the ball bouncing off the cross bar.

A penalty kick was given to the home team and taken by McComb, who made the first goal. The visitors tried hard to equalize, but were always brought back by the home defence. A few minutes later a fine shot from Mitchell, of the home team, went sailing through, making the second goal. Although both teams played hard now, no more scoring took place and half time was called.

On resuming play the Newarkers made a better showing and twice had a fine opening on the home team's goal, which they lost and the Plainfielders also had several close trys. About twenty minutes from time Mitchell, of the home team, was injured, and had to leave the field, and the home team was left with ten men. The Newarkers redoubled their efforts now, but the home men were all alive and held them down nicely.

Buckland, of the home team, also had to leave the field about five minutes from the finish, through injuries received, but the nine remaining men played a great game and kept the visitors at bay. No more scoring took place, and the game ended in a well deserved victory for Plainfield by a score of 2 goals to 0. Although it was quite a rough game, James Henderson, who refereed, kept all the players in hand in a very able manner. The lineup:

GRIGGS AGREED ON FOR COUNTY JUDGE

Somerset's Republican Leaders Select Him as the Successor of Louis H. Schenck.

At a conference of leaders yesterday John Y. Griggs, formerly prosecutor of Somerset county, was slated to succeed Louis H. Schenck as judge of the Court of Common Pleas at Somerville, and Claence Case, also of Somerville, was picked to succeed John F. Reger, as prosecutor of the county. In case Mr. Griggs will not accept the position, Hugh K. Gaston, of Somerville, is the second choice for the place.

This arrangement eliminates Judge Isaac P. Runyon, of North Plainfield as a candidate for Judge Schenck's position. He was prominently mentioned for the place. It is the belief that the appointment of Mr. Griggs would meet with general approval. Mr. Case has been a practicing attorney at Somerville for several years. Both Mr. Griggs and Mrs. Case are well known throughout the county.

TALKS ON TUBERCULOSIS

Dr. Frederick J. Hughes Addresses Pupils of the N. P. H. S.

An instructive lecture on tuberculosis was delivered to the pupils of the borough high school this morning by Dr. Frederick J. Hughes. The discourse contained many pointers for the youths in which a safeguard may be taken against the White Plague.

At the conclusion of his address, Dr. Hughes made an earnest plea for the support of the consumptive poor and the local sanitorium at Muhlenberg Hospital, through the purchase of Red Cross stamps and by becoming members of the local society. Dr. Hughes said:

If you were asked what is tuberculosis, no doubt you would all answer consumption. A quarter of a century or more ago tuberculosis was only recognized in its last stage when the victim suffered with cough, a wasting away of the body or a consuming of the tissues by the disease and it was thus called consumption. Now we know that before the disease reaches this stage it has existed a long time in the system and is then termed tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is usually in the lungs, but may be in the bones, throat, glands, etc. It is often called the great "White Plague;" to distinguish it from the great Black Plague that devasted Europe a few centuries ago and killed off millions of the inhabitants. The Black Plague is now practically under control as we hope the 'White Plague' will be some day. The Black Plague is so called because the skin of its victim frequently became black, whereas in consumption as you know the skin becomes pale.

"In the very beginning of tuberculosis there are few if any symptoms, the person really does not feel very sick. What should draw everyones attention is a cough lasting more than a month, loss of weight and a tired feeling, especially in the afternoon, no ambition for work, impairment of appetite, slight fever in the afternoon, some times chilliness in the mornings, and spitting of blood. It is possible to have one or all of these symptoms and still not suffer with tuberculosis, but their presence should always send one to a competent physician for examination to ascertain if anything is wrong for it is only in the early stages that tuberculosis is absolutely curable.

School children can help in the campaign against tuberculosis in two ways—by keeping well and thus not obtaining the disease themselves and, by helping those to get well who already have it. Never expectorate upon the sidewalks nor allow others to do so. A consumptive may be expectorating millions of germs but if he is careful about his expectoration there is no more danger of him than from any other citizen. Do not shun a careful consumptive for to do so would be both foolish and cruel. Increase your own health and bodily resistance as much as you can. Have plenty of out door air to counterbalance the time spent in the school rooms. Children to be strong and hardy must exercise in the air several hours every day. Do not have mufflers about the neck. Keep the feet warm. At night have the windows in the sleeping room open wide; do not sleep in a draught and do not be afraid of the night air. There is but one kind of air at night, which is of course night air and pure night air is better than impure night air. Have plenty of sleep at night. Avoid over-heated rooms, never have the temprature over 65°F. Sunlight in the room is very, very good.

"Never breathe with the mouth open. Air entering the lungs should be warm, moistened and filtered and this is done by breathing through the nose. Mouth breathing stunts the growth and is bad in other ways. Practice deep breathing night and morning. Every morning on arising every child should sponge off his neck and chest with cold water quickly and then rub the neck and chest vigorously with a coarse towel. Twice a week a child should have a warm soap and water bath. Invariably wash the hands before eating and never put pencils or other objects into the mouth. Plenty of nourishing food is proper but overeating is harmful. Always eat a substantial breakfast before going to school. No child can be well and do the school work properly without a good breakfast.

CO. K GIVES RECEPTION

Elizabeth National Guardsmen Enjoy Combined Drill and Feast.

Company K entertained Company I, of Elizabeth, last night in the local armory and a right jolly time they had. After the visitors and Company K had been put through their paces, Major Martin, who was a guest of both companies, combined the two companies into one and drilled them as they had never been drilled before.

An entertainment of professional talent from New York to which was added some excellent local celebrities made the evening pass pleasantly. Captain Kitchell welcomed the visitors in a little speech. Captain Hall, of Elizabeth, also added his appreciation to the general feeling of comradeship.

Major Martin gave some interesting anecdotes of his experiences of both companies and proved beyond cavil that he still loves the National Guard and all it stands for.

Add. Hoyt, a professional entertainer from New York, sang and passed out some humorous monologue work; Louis Kassler, a member of the Seventy-first regiment of New York played the piano and Sergeant Hastner of the local company entertained with songs Afterwards the two companies enjoyed a German dinner. The non-commissioned officers were in charge of the entertainment Sergeant Tranchand being chairman.

NO ELOPEMENT THERE; ONLY SOUGHT LICENSE

Miss Eleanor Tenny, of Philadelphia, and Allen T. Weeks, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. T. Weeks, of Boston, will be married on Monday noon, January 3, at the home of Miss Tenney's sister, Mrs. Howard Colby, of Evergreen avenue.

The fact that the couple appeared in Elizabeth yesterday in search of a five days' license, which is required in their case as both parties come from out of the State, gave rise to a rumor that they intended to be married yesterday. This was not so. The fact that both were total strangers in Elizabeth caused a trifle delay in the issuance of the license, it is said, but when Miss Tenney explained that she had a sister living in this city; also many friends, there was no trouble. After obtaining a license, the couple came to this city, where Miss Tenney is now visiting her sister.

After the marriage and a honeymoon, the couple will reside in Boston, where Mr. Weeks is engaged in business.

CITY RECEIVED $125,000 IN TAXES ON LAST DAY.

This has been a strenuous week for Tax Collector Wiliam R. Townsend. He estimates that close to $125,000 were the total receipts for yesterday. The office has been flooded with returns to notices during the past few days. Mr. Townsend has been engaged in checking up the various amounts received from out-of-town owners of local property.

One out of town man who holds about $157,000 in mortgages on Plainfield property was among those who called to settle the taxes, and he is only one of many similar cases.

Enough Turkey for Them.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy McVoy, of East Front street, are making preparation for a home party on Christmas, at which the guests will be the parents, brothers and sisters of Mrs. McVoy. There is sure to be big doings in the turkey line as Mr. McVoy has received a 42-pound Missouri "turk" for the feast. The guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duvier, Miss Emma Duvier, and Benjamin Duvier, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. John Linbarger and children, of Brooklyn, and Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Hacquer and "Toddles" Hacquer, of Philadelphia.

Club Discussed Plans for Work.

The informal meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday in the Hartridge School auditorium, was devoted to the consideration of the program for 1910-1911. The discussion led by Mrs. Walter L. C. Glenney was animated and was followed by an interesting discussion on "Socialism," the theme of the course of six lectures delivered before the club and which has just closed.

Announce Engagement.

A heart party was given this afternoon by Miss Florence Cahonne, of Watchung avenue, to announce the engagement of her sister, Miss Frances Walcott Cahoone to James Ward Pettit, of East Orange.

GERMAN BUNCO STEERER

Fleeces Confiding Italian Workmen Out of $25 and Makes Clean Getaway.

The gullible Italian is still with us and as long as he is so anxious to secure work just so long will he be buncoed. And this is why. Yesterday morning at about 11 o'clock, a middle aged man speaking broken English with a German accent, called at the residence of J. W. Pitts, on Leland avenue, and asked permission to remove some heaps of dead leaves and a pile of gravel which were in the yard, promising in return for the gravel to bring in a cord of wood which he had cut on the mountain near Mount St. Mary's College.

Mrs. Pitts readily granted the request and the German departed to bring the men who were to rake up the leaves and cart away the gravel. He had laid his plans well, for in a few minutes he returned with his workmen. They were three Italians, Peter Delaboro, Mike Delonga and Pietro Buslardi. These men got busy at once and began raking up the leaves and piling the gravel into a cart which was in waiting. At 12 o'clock the German knocked at Mrs. Pitts' back door and explaining that he had come away so early that he had had no breakfast, asked her for a cup of tea, thus impressing the laborers with the fact that he owned the place. While in the kitchen he opened the window and called to the men asking them to come close. He was short of money and wanted to pay a bill next door. Did they have any money with them? Sure! Delaboro proved his innocence by handing over $20. Delongo confessed to having $3, which he was willing to loan and Buslardi found $2.

After securing the twenty-five dollars the German went out while the men resumed their task of piling up leaves and loading gravel. He made a move to go next door, but instead jumped a fence and disappeared and his workmen are still awaiting his reappearance and Mrs. Pitts has probably given up hope of receiving her cord of wood.

Delaboro and Delonga reside on the corner of Raymond and Midway avenues, while Buslardi has a home on Plainfield avenue. When seen this morning Delaboro said that the German approached them while the three were talking together about seeking work for the day and proposed to give them employment at $2 for ten hours. They readily accompanied him as he appeared to be honest and he told them that he owned the place where they were to work they thought it was all right.

They will probably be more careful in the future and in the meantime it will hardly be healthy for the persuasive German to make his appearance in this city.

ALLEGED HOLD-UP MAN DISCHARGED BY COURT

Bert Sawyer, of Somerset place, who was arrested in the borough on Sunday night in connection with the holdup of Jennie Cross, a domestic in the employ of Councilman William L. Smalley, was exonerated from the holdup charge, but was adjudged guilty of trespassing on the property of William J. Buttfield, and was fined seven dollars.

The Cross woman was unable to identify Sawyer as the man who accosted her. She did not appear in court, but Mr. Smalley informed Recorder Dolliver that she had informed him that it was a person who wore a dark suit, while Sawyer wore light clothes.

Mr. Buttfield, whose servants had been annoyed of late in the same vicinity as the Cross woman was held up insisted to the court that an example should be made of Sawyer. In view of the lack of evidence, however, Recorder Dolliver refused to hold Sawyer on that charge.

Sawyer explained that his presence on Mr. Buttfield's property was for the purpose of cutting two small saplings to use for clothes poles. It was for this act that Sawyer was fined.

"WEALTH" DIVIDES HEIRS

Rival Factions Seek the Phantom Riches of Admiral Drake.

According to reports published in the New York papers this morning there is a bitter rivalry existing between Mrs. Eleanor Dunn, president of the local Drake Association, and Miss Mary Board, of Metuchen, who followed Mrs. Dunn abroad. It appears from the accounts published that Miss Board represents one set of heirs and Mrs. Dunn another and as Mrs. Dunn has returned from England without having obtained anything like encouragement of the claims of the Drake Association, the return and report of Miss Board is awaited with anxiety.

A statement attributed to Mrs. Dunn states that she was perfectly willing that Miss Board should go in quest of the possible fortune, but as she was chosen she went. She was much surprised to learn in Plymouth that Miss Board had preceded her and has been wondering ever since why Miss Board was trying to "insert her finger in our plum pudding." Mrs. Dunn says she does not yet know who Miss Board represents.

Various reports have been published from abroad during the past two months in which statements have been made that the American descendants of John Drake, even though they established their relationship would be unable to get anything owing to the fact that the English heirs are in possession and that the estate has dwindled to a mere $150,000 or so. Mrs. Drake was not at home this morning to a reporter who called to ask her about the latest phase of the case.

BIG TIME IS COMING FOR LOCAL FORESTERS

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, hold its last meeting for the year on Friday night, December 31, when a class of fifteen to twenty applicants will be initiated by Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger W. T. Bingham, of Elizabeth, and a special degree team. This has been a successful year numerically and otherwise for the Court and at this meeting, addresses pertinent to the Court's welfare will be made.

The Court's annual entertainment and dance will be held on Friday night, January 21, at Saengerbund Hall, when Ad-Hoyt's black and white face minstrels from New York will furnish the fun; as each of the twelve performers is an artist in his line, there will not be a dull moment during the two and half hours they occupy the stage. Professor Heinmeyer and a full orchestra from Elizabeth will have charge of the dance music and High Court Ranger Arthur C. Wenzel, of Newark, will make short address between the first and second parts of the program. The admission will be by tickets only furnished by the members.

LAST DAY'S RECEIPTS FOR BOROUGH $13,000.

Borough taxpayers were unusually prompt in paying their taxes this year according to figures given out by Tax Collector George F. Brown today. The receipts of yesterday, the last day, were a trifle more than $13,000, bringing the total sum collected up to $72,462.69. This amount is approximately $6,000 more than the total amount collected during all of last season. The 1909 budget calls for $92,748.47.

Death of Little Boy.

Howard B., the three-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bror Peterson, of 705 West Third street, died suddenly yesterday. The funeral service was conducted this afternoon by the Rev. Theo. Englund, and interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

AFTERMATH OF A DEATH

Italian Who Threatened Little Victim's Father Arraigned in Court.

An echo of the killing of little Paulo Durso, the four-year-old son of Joseph Durso, which occurred on August 7, was heard in the city court this morning when Frank Carpinetti was arraigned before Judge Runyon on a charge of threatening the father of the child. Carpinetti was allowed to go after promising to keep away from Durso. Walter Hetfield, Sr., appeared for Carpinetti, while Walter Hetfield, Jr., represented the State.

The trouble between the two Italians dates back to the day the little boy was killed by a falling clothespole which two men were erecting for Carpinetti in his back yard on West Third street. Durso in seeking some redress for the death of his boy tried to have a criminal action acknowledged by the grand jury on grounds of criminal negligence. Fail-in this Durso has tried to get a lawyer to take up a clam in the civil courts, but in this also he appears to have failed.

Meantime there was a question of a bill for bread delivered to Durso by Carpinetti, who is a baker, and in attempting to collect this bill had several controversies with Durso and Durso alleged that on these occasions Carpinetti threatened to do him bodily harm. The reasons alleged by Durso for the threats was not the bill for bread, but for Durso's activity in attempting to prosecute a suit for the recovery of damages for the accidental killing of his child.

Durso paid the small account which Carpinetti had against him and they will be kept apart in the future.

W. L. HETFIELD JR. GETS VERDICT FOR LITTLE ONE

Ellen Rafferty, a ten year old girl of Dunellen, got a verdict of $1,000 from the Public Service Corporation by direction of the Middlesex County Court yesterday at New Brunswick. Her counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city, stated to the jury that at a previous term of court a verdict for damages had been given the child, but the Supreme Court had set aside the judgment (which was $4,000). Since then the child has almost recovered from the injury, and her family has agreed to compromise with the railway company for $1,000. As Ellen is a minor, however, it was necessary to have a jury verdict to wind up the matter.

The little girl was sworn, but Judge Lloyd said it was not necessary to take her testimony if the lawyers agreed to the statement of facts and the amount of damages. Alvah A. Clark, counsel for the Railway Company, assented to what Mr. Hetfield had said, and the jury returned the verdict of $1,000.

'GOOD FELLOW' APPEAL TOUCHED THEIR HEARTS

Dreary Homes of 365 Little People of the Poor Will See Christmas Joy and Gladness.

Santa Claus Land, Dec. 21, 3 p. m.—Say, old man, bless your heart, you're right there with the goods. When you put it right up to them that you and I, maybe, blow in the "long green" and possibly raise a "noise" on Christmas eve and wake up on Christmas morn to ask ourselves as to what we have done for the "pal" that is "down and out," you went "under the wire" with the facts. You weren't "juggling with the truth;" you were "telling it to 'em." Now, "I'll be blowed" if you haven't provided already for 365 little girls and boys, who otherwise would be unhappy on Christmas morn. You've "done yourself proud," brother, for when these little people crawl out of their warm beds on Christmas morn, they won't find empty stockings; they'll find something that will make them happy for one day at least. Old man, we're right proud of you. I hope I'll see your straight-from-the-shoulder letter on page one today, and here's hoping we'll provide for the 500 good little people of the poor.

ANOTHER GOOD FELLOW.

It seemed yesterday and today as if "Good Fellow," who addressed himself to other "good fellows" of the city, had touched a secret spring which opened the hearts of men, as if his sure finger had reached directly for it, and as if scores and hundreds of his fellow boys—and the girls too—in the land of good fellowship had jumped in instant response.

It seemed? It couldn't be doubted. Yesterday's mail deliveries brought a lot of letters to Santa Claus addressed in care of The Daily Press. They carry the pledge that at least 350 children, altogether, in whose homes the kindly, generous, wholehearted legend of the saint who watches over the joys of little ones would have been only a tale, if told at all, will know now that there is a Santa Claus.

There are several grownups who have seen that great stack of letters who know there is—But that is not important except to them And the proof of the existence of this saint and the pledges that he will not forget this year the children who may have been forgotten last time have only started to come.

"Good Fellow" had no idea what he was starting. Probably he thought that if he appealed to those of his kind who spend from $10 to $200 every holiday season proving to themselves that Christmas is a time of jollity and good will on earth five or even fifty men might be moved, and that ten or 100 children would find something in stockings otherwise sure to be empty Christmas morning.

Here are some extracts from letters reecived today by Santa Claus:

"The names of five children, if you please.

"The original Good Fellow deserves the praise and thanks of the entire community, for, as a result of his forethought and the love for the poor unfortunates, Christmas cheer will be carried to the homes of many, and the little tots will rise up in praise of the 'Santa Claus' who gladdened our hearts in years gone by.

"May the five hundred mark be reached, and more too! Success and good wishes in your undertaking old 'Santa!'

"Yours in admiration, etc."

"Wishing to become a member of the Order of Good Fellows, I would like the names of three girls from five to eight years of age and three boys from seven to ten years. I wish you the best of luck in this good cause."

"I will be more than glad to fill up the stockings for a small family of children, say three or four, and would like to know their ages and sex if you can tell me. Thanking you very much for giving me a chance to do something I shall greatly enjoy."

"I thank you for letting me in on this deal."

"I think your idea a first class one. Send me the names and ages of six kids and I will try and see if I can give them a merry Xmas."

"The pupils of the Plainfield High School desire to aid you in your work

ONE of the LARGEST

retail stores in New York City—in fact, anywhere in this country—regularly employs a large corps of chiropodists to care for the feet of its salesmen.

We know that a whole lot of benefit and comfort is thus assured, but we believe nine-tenths of all foot trouble could be prevented by the adoption of our method of shoe-fitting.

"When we shoe you, you are shod right."

Santa Claus Has Unloaded Great Loads of Toys at TEPPER'S

We ought to sell Toys to everyone in Plainfield—because you will be the one to gain by buying here. Mainly—we have the largest stock and devote more space to the display of toys than any other store. Our entire second floor is used entirely for their display and sale. Then—our prices are lowest because we bought at a lower price and mark all goods at a less percentage of profit—it's our way of doing business.

People who go to every store come back and tell us—our prices are lowest. If anyone knows—they do.

SPECIAL

To give greater freedom in selecting we have assembled our entire stock of dolls on the main floor in the Millinery section. You'll see lots of dolls ranging in price from 25 cents to $10, that will make you wonder how they can be sold for so little. And too—you'll find the dolls at $10 are as wonderful a value as the ones priced for a few cents.

Shop early—in the morning is best—you'll be able to choose easier and more satisfactory and be through before the day is half over—shop early. We would ask—all those who can—to take small packages with them. This will eliminate the possibility of your package going to the wrong address. Should an error occur, kindly notify us at once —same will have prompt attention.

Any of these will make splendid Christmas gifts. Stocks are large and offer widest range of selection. Above all else decide to shop early. You get better selection and plenty of time to make your selections. Shop Early.

She Meant Professionally.

As the young man caressed the cheek of his lady love she drew away hastily.

"I think," she said indignantly, "you had better see father first."

"Why, what do you mean?" asked the perplexed lover.

"Father," she replied, as she nursed her cheek, "is a barber."—From Success Magazine.

MAY NAME M'GURN COUNCIL'S HEAD.

Elizabeth, Dec. 21.—Tonight's Democratic caucus is the sole topic of discussion in political circles today. There may be some discussion and disagreements now, the Democrats say, but this will be smoothed over and there will be no contests.

The latest development is the boom launched for Patrick J. McGurn for president of the Council. Mr. McGurn, it is admitted, will get some support, but it is not thought that he will have sufficient to win over Alfred A. Stein, the man selected by the party organization for the place. Should this be the case it is likely that Mr. McGurn will withdraw and no effort will be made by his friends to enter any "deal" with the ten Republicans.

Samuel J. Berry, former Mayor, who is the minority candidate for comptroller, is not in the best of health and has declined, for this reason, to accept any office. When mayor he declined a second nomination for this reason. John S. Saur, according to present indications, will get the full fourteen Democratic votes.

John McGrath, candidate for city treasurer, who now holds the office, is said to be the choice of the majority of Democrats for the place. Fred Zior is the other candidate. He has several friends among the councilmen.

George L. Daubner will probably again be named for City Hall custodian.

The next most interesting matter after the caucus will be the police appointments. There are several sergeants and patrolmen to be named. There seems little doubt but that the Republicans will claim some recognition as far as these appointments are concerned. Without their aid it will be impossible to make the proposed $10,000 police appropriation.

STUDIO ROMANCE IS JUST REVEALED.

Sister Finds Ring and Learns of Ceremony, Which Took Place a Month Ago.

A studio romance, which culminated on Thanksgiving eve in the marriage of Miss Genevieve M. Furman and Wilbur Davis Houston, both of Elizabeth, has just been revealed through the finding of the wedding ring by the bride's sister.

The couple were married in Hoboken and were accompanied by Mrs. James French, a sister of the bride, and John J. McGary. After the ceremony they returned to the home of the bride's sister in Brooklyn and later to Elizabeth. The couple had intended to keep the wedding secret for a year.

Mr. Houston conducted the College Inn Studio in Broad street, Newark, and Miss Furman went there to pose for photographs. It was the old story of love at first sight, and it was not long until Mr. Houston became a steady visitor at the Furman home.

The wedding was the sequel. The couple are now in Atlantic City on a belated honeymoon. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Furman, of Broadway. She is a member of Grace Episcopal church and is well known in musical circles. She is a master of the violin and possesses a pleasing soprano voice.

Mr. Houston is connected with one of the oldest and best-known families in the city. He is an athlete, a member of the Clark Club track team and the Liberty A. C. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Houston, of Fulton street, and a nephew of former Sheriff Robert G. Houston.

GOULD'S NAME ON LIQUOR LICENSE.

Toms River, Dec. 21.—Notwithstanding his license application was signed by George J. Gould and about fifty of the leading Lakewood millionaire colony, Lazarus Constantinon was refused a license yesterday for his French restaurant by Judge Berry, in the Ocean County Courts.

Constantinon rested his case on the fact that he had on his application the endorsement of almost all of the prominent men in the cottage colony. He was opposed by I. W. Carmichael, who represented Postmaster A. M. Bradshaw, the Rev. W. G. Wedenmeyer, pastor of the Baptist church, and the Rev. Mr. Butler, pastor of the Presbyterian church. It was shown that among the many signers for Constatinon, George J. Gould, Charles L. Pack, John E. Pye, Francis D. Hoyt and others had all signed another license application within a year.

DR. LISSENDEN RESIGNS.

Pastor Just Vindicated to Go to Millville.

Trenton, Dec. 21.—The Rev. John W. Lissenden, pastor of the Hamilton Square Baptist church, who was on Saturday vindicated by his church board of the charges that were recently made against him by some of the members of his congregation, announced yesterday his resignation from the pastorate.

He has accepted a call to the First Baptist church of Millville, and will go to that place at once, preaching his farewell sermon to his Hamilton Square charge next Sunday.

"GOOD FELLOW'S" APPEAL

for the poor children. Several of them have agreed to fill stockings as was requested." They provide for thirty-nine.

"Incidently, please let me say that in a world where the self-styled moulders of morals and life so often miss the real genuine heart beat of humanity and set up instead their own opinionated often canting rules of conduct, it is a pleasure to meet with such a personality as Good Fellow, whose letter gets down to the bed rock of humanitarianism. He has struck the keynote of things as they ought to be.

"I'm too busy a man to write a letter but not too busy to think of the poor little ones on Christmas. Here's $5." The five dollars was received, despite the rules that each Good Fellow must act as Santa Claus personally. In this case a royal good fellow, "a man of the cloth" by the bye, will act as the contributor's proxy.

Through the kindness of Miss Holly, of the Charity Organization Society, any possibility of Santa Claus visiting undeserving cases is prevented. Miss Holly is giving valuable time at this busy season to an investigation of all names submitted.

Among a batch of letters received in the morning mail, Santa Claus wants the Good Fellows to read this one:

"Dear Santa Claus:—I heard of you being here and I and my little brother would like for you to come and bring us something as my mother says she is so poor she does not know whether you will come to see us or not. I am eleven and my brother four. Please, dear Santa Claus, come to see us."

An investigation proves that the letter was written by a little Italian girl who has nothing but good marks according to her teacher in the public school.

WILL LAUNCH UTAH.

Huge Battleship the Biggest in the U. S. Navy.

Camden, Dec. 21.—The most formidable battleship in the United States navy, the Utah, will be launched Thursday. The huge floating fortress, costing several millions of dollars, is being constructed in the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company.

In the construction of the Utah a new record of only nine months and eight days on the stocks has been set by her builders. Her keel was laid March 15.

One of the principal features of the Utah will be the wide availability of her ten twelve-inch rifles, her principal armament, which may be used with equal facility on either broadside. In this she will have an advantage over the Neptune class of British battleships in fighting power, as their main batteries are not thus available.

The Utah will have a displacement of 21,825 tons, the nearest approach to her in size being the United States battleships Delaware and North Dakota and the British battleships of the Neptune class, each of which is of about 20,000 tons displacement.

GINNELLEY CUT OFF IN UNCLE'S WILL.

Trenton, Dec. 21.—There is likely to be a bitter contest here over the will of Dr. Josiah Hellyer, a wealthy dentist, who left an estate valued at more than $50,000 to Mrs. Nellie Martindell, of Doylestown, Pa., a niece, and William Hellyer, of Philadelphia, a nephew, cutting off all his other relatives, including Assemblyman Edwin H. Ginnelley and Dr. Warren H. Stover, of this city, nephews.

Dr. Ginnelley and Dr. Stover learned the dentist business with their uncle and then branched out in opposition to his practise. It is supposed that this led him to cut them off without a penny in the will.

The relatives to whom Dr. Hellyer left his money are poor. Mrs. Martindell's husband drives a milk wagon. Mr. Hellyer is a traveling salesman.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Another of A. H. Woods' great scenic plays comes to the Plainfield theatre on Christmas Day matinee and night. "The Workingman's Wife" is the title, and eminates from the fertile brain of the veteran playwright, Walter Lawrence. One of the startling scenic mechanical innovations, will be a full stage representation of a tin plate mill in full operation, requiring the use of a twenty-horse power Corliss engine and boiler. A boulder of white hot metal is shown as it is crushed by the great rollers to a sheet of tin plate, showing also the travelling platform, sixteen feet long, on which a human being is seen solwly drawn toward the huge wheels which will crush his body almost to paper thinness. The act closes with the most exciting rescue scene ever presented upon any stage. This is but one of the many interesting things to be seen in this remarkable play of homely surroundings, and family hearthside. It is not all thrills. There is much good comedy intermingled with a few tears. An evening could not be more profitably spent than at the popular theatre presided over by Manager Sanderson.

WOULD SELL HER CORPSE.

Mother's Way to Get Christmas Presents for Children.

Baltimore, Dec. 21.—Driven to desperation by the thought that her four children would be deprived of Christmas joys to which they had been accustomed, a mother yesterday afternoon advertised that for $10 she would sell her body, to be delivered after her death to the purchaser. She begs that her name be not mentioned. This year, owing to an accident that incapacitated the husband, the little family has just been eking out an existence on the $3 a week earned by the eldest girl, who is 14.

"It's a simple business proposition," said the woman. "I need some money to make the little ones happy and I don't know of any other way to get it. I can't beg. I don't want to borrow without knowing just how or when I can return the loan. I've nothing else to sell, so I am willing to give a lien on my body, which will be turned over to the buyer when I am dead."

RACE WAR IN LOUISANA.

Three Men Dead, Six Wounded and Troops Called for.

Grand Cane, La., Dec. 21.—Three men are dead here, following a battle between whites and blacks. Six others were wounded, and the whole parish is greatly excited, many negroes fleeing to other sections.

John Allen, a farmer, accused Bill Bower, a negro, of stealing hogs. Bower and his brother-in-law resented the accusation by opening fire on the farmer. Other negroes joined in the fight, as did other white men. Soon a battle was in progress.

Bower and his kinsmen were killed and Allen died a few hours after being shot. The others wounded are all negroes. An appeal for troops to restore order has been sent to Baton Rouge.

DIES FROM EXCITEMENT.

Woman About to Start West Suffers Stroke.

New Brunswick, Dec. 21.—Mrs William M. Leonard died suddenly yesterday at the home of her lifelong friend, Mrs. Jonathan Combs, 105 Redmond street, of a stroke of apoplexy, caused by excitement over a trip to California, on which she was to start yesterday morning with her husband, mother and two cousins. They had planned to go to Los Angeles to make their home, owing to the poor health of Mr. Leonard. Their furniture had been shipped last week and their trunks went Saturday.

The furniture and trunks have been recalled and the proposed trip abandoned by the rest of the party.

ROBBED EMPLOYERS.

Detectives Say Plumber Stole P. R. R. Car Journals.

Trenton, Dec. 21. — Michael Schmidtz, a Newark plumber, employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, pleaded guilty in the Central Police Court here yesterday to the theft of numerous car journals from the station in this city.

Detectives who have been following him for weeks declare that he has been using his railroad pass to come here for robberies, and has been making good hauls. Justice Harris held him in $300 bail for the action of the Grand Jury.

Fractures Skull at Work.

Andrew Szciestah, a Polish laborer, employed at the New Jersey Steel Works, Rahway, had his skull fractured late yesterday afternoon when a heavy iron bar fell on him at the plant. He was removed to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth. The injured man lives at Perth Amboy Junction.

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS OF PLAINFIELD:

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I have tried for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press was asked to aid in reaching the good fellow by publishing this suggestion and to receive your communication in order that you may be assured of good faith and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll od a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

The Daily Press has investigated the "good fellow" who wrote the above, has looked him in the eye and put its O. K. on the plan. The cold blooded blase reporter who saw him wrote: "He made me feel, personally, that it would be really worth while in satisfaction to carry a little happiness to some children who otherwise wouldn't get any on Christmas eve." "Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of from fifteen to twenty children a year in Plainfield. He said that last Christmas day he wished he had curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might nave had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through school teachers, investigators of various organizations who work in poverty stricken districts and others who come in contact with those whom we always have with us. Lists of worthy cases will be welcomed from such organizations as the Charity Organization Society, Salvation Army, King's Daughters, and churches of all demoninations. These lists should be verified and certified to by the officers of the organizations submitting them and should be arranged by wards and divisions of the city.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus" care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.———— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.

John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come in, good fellows.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Novelized From Forbes' Play of the Same Name by JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"Speak, speak, I say," she ordered. "What is the meaning of this?"

"Let go, you are hurting me," whispered Nora in agony. "I have done nothing wrong."

"Nothing wrong!" hissed Patsy, trembling with grief and passion. "You lie, an' you know you lie. You've been lyin' to me all along. I'll let mom in an' show her the thing you are," she said.

Nora threw her arms around her knees and clutched her frantically.

"No, no, not that!" she supplicated. "Listen to me, Patsy. I'm not what you think. Indeed, I'm not. I haven't done anything wrong. Don't let mom see; oh, don't!"

"I wouldn't believe you under oath," said Patsy. "What are you doin' in this man's room, in his bedroom? What's this here blowout? What are you doin' in that dress?"

"I came to get the note. I didn't mean to stay, but I had to."

"Yes, you had to stay to supper."

"He'd have given it to me if you hadn't come."

"He'd 'a' given it to you, at what price, you fool! Didn't I tell you not to come?"

"I had to. I was afraid of pop and mom. Oh, Patsy, don't be hard on me. I know things look queer, but I'm a good girl."

"Let go my legs an' get up. How many times have you been here before? Own up—tell the truth. If you lie, I'll kill you."

"Never; it's the very first time."

"Swear it, by the Holy Mother!"

"By the Holy Mother, it's true. I wish I may die if it ain't."

"Swear that you ain't yet gone to the bad."

"I swear it, Patsy. You can believe me. And I'm not going to the bad ever."

"You'll go in spite of yourself, in spite of me, in spite of pop an' mom," said Patsy bitterly.

"You haven't any right to say such things," protested Nora. "I've been foolish, perhaps, but I didn't mean to do wrong."

"That's just it. You don't mean to do wrong, but you will—you will, God help us."

"What did you come here for—the note?"

"Yes, and to see if you was here."

"Have you got it?"

"Not yet."

"How did you leave the theater? I thought you couldn't do it, leading the chorus."

"I didn't ask. When I couldn't find you I hiked to the flat, an' when I saw you wasn't there I got a hunch you'd be fool enough to come to Crawford's. An' then I heard mom's voice an' rushed in here, 'cause I couldn't tell her why I was there without tellin' all. I wonder what's she sayin'? They know we're not at the show shop an' are huntin' for us, sure pop. Hark! What's that?"

She gripped her sister's shoulder, and a cold sweat broke out upon her brow.

"Oh, my God!" she whispered. "There's Dan!"

Mallory, after his first interview with Crawford had walked around to the Eighty-sixth street station of the subway, as his partner had directed, and soon was speeding toward the Long Acre theater. He was well satisfied with himself and with his evening's work. The prospective purchaser of Lady Belle had practically agreed to buy the mare and was merely holding out on the question of price, from which he had attempted to beat the shrewd trainer down. That McGovern would pay the $5,000 demanded Mallory was convinced. The racer was a bargain at that figure, but the sale, as he had intimated to Crawford, would mean a good deal to the stable in the shape of prestige, and, besides, the money would enable them to do things. His good humor was heightened by the incident of the female hand and the narrow escape of its owner from being observed. Also by the naivete of the O'Briens, who had been unable to recognize their daughters in their stage finery. He knew the girls were there, because the boy who had taken his message had said they were.

When he reached the theater he could not find the old couple. After hunting about awhile he took his seat in the orchestra, thinking they might return there and that, anyhow, he would be able to assure himself that the girls were on the stage. It did not take him long to ascertain that neither of them was in the chorus, and he hastened around to the stage door. There he was told, as the O'Briens had been, that the girls had left before the performance began. It occurred to him that when they received the message he had sent Patsy it had occasioned such joy and excitement that they had obtained leave of absence, had joined their parents and were waiting about for him somewhere. No doubt they had not seen him when he re-entered the theater.

He was about to return to the front when there happened along the passage the boy to whom he had given the verbal message to Patsy, with a tip

"Miss Simpson said for you to wait here for her," he announced.

In a little while the woman whose mode of life had often aroused Patsy's sharp tongue came down majestically. It was implacable war between her and Patsy, and she was quite willing to carry it to extremes and seize every possible chance to injure her enemy. She knew that Mallory was Patsy's fiance. Not only was she curious to see him, but the boy had told her that he was looking for Patsy, and she saw a possible opportunity to work further scathe to the girl.

"Are you Mr. Mallory?" she inquired, looking the trainer over with a critical eye. "I suppose you're after Miss O'Brien. The whole town seems to be after her tonight, and everybody is coming to me to tell them where she's gone, as if I was her keeper and knew or cared."

"I'm sorry to have disturbed you, miss," said Mallory, in his blunt way, though he felt awkward and a little timid in the presence of this tall, handsome woman with the air of an aristocrat. "The boy I sent up told me that he thought you knew where they was."

"I know nothing about them, really," she said, with cold haughtiness, "but I have been given to understand that Nora O'Brien had an appointment this evening with her lover, Mr. Dick Crawford, the sporting man who keeps her, they say. Probably her sister had a date also, but I don't know where she is."

Mallory flushed indignantly.

"Well, you tell whoever said such a thing that it's a foul lie," he said hotly, "and if any man says it I'll fill him so full of lead the devil won't be able to catch him as he tumbles down to hell."

Simpson shrugged her shoulders.

"It's common talk here. You might try Crawford's," she said.

She turned on her heels and walked away.

Mallory went out in a mood to slay. How came Nora's name to be associated with Crawford's in such a way? What could have happened to cause such a story to become the common gossip of the theater dressing rooms? Where was she? Where was Patsy? What had they quarreled about? The boy said Nora had gone off in a cab. Patsy, then, was not with her. But why had both of them left the theater so precipitately when they knew that he and their parents were waiting in front? He remembered the mysterious woman in the other room at Crawford's and became suspicious. What if there was some ground for this gossip? He could not believe it. Yet how could such talk have originated?

He hastened around to the front entrance again and as he did so ran into O'Brien. The old man was pacing nervously up and down, and, knowing him as he did, Mallory saw that he was much agitated. His face brightened as he caught sight of the trainer.

"Ah, Dan, thank hiven, here ye are at last," he said. "Somethin' tirrible's happened. We can't foind the girls, an' mother's gone to Crawford's to fetch Nora. Ol've only been waitin' for yez to go an' kill that man."

"Have you seen Patsy?" demanded Mallory.

"No," said her father. "Lord knows where she is."

Mallory saw that the old man was in a condition in which he would soon lose control of himself. He took his arm and led him into a saloon to reason with him.

"I heard them tales, too," he said, "an' there's nothin' to 'em, an' if any one comes tellin' me such a thing again I'll twist his neck. I've just come from Crawford's, an' I know what I'm talkin' about. The girls probably didn't get my message an' have gone off somewhere. I'll go back to Crawford's an' fetch mother. You'd better go to the hotel an' wait for us there. I won't be long."

O'Brien was much relieved to learn that Nora at least was not at Crawford's, but this did not abate his anger aroused by the "information" imparted by the Simpson woman. He wanted to go with Mallory, but the latter, for the same reason that had actuated Mrs. O'Brien, did not desire his company. He descanted upon the improbability, not to say the absurdity, of the stories told to them, which he resented as much as he (O'Brien) did and insisted that their falsity was proved by his own visit to Crawford's home. The matter would all be cleared up when they saw the girls, which they would do presently.

After much argument along this line he persuaded the old man to go to the hotel to wait for him and to be sure that he did go there accompanied him.

"We'll all go to Patsy's flat, where we'll be sure to find them, when I come back with mother," he said, calculated to insure its safe delivery.

"Lookin' for Miss O'Brien?" queried the youth.

"Yes," replied Mallory.

"She's gone; so's her sister," he told him. "Dey had a row."

"Had a row?"

"Yep. 'Pears they had a hair pullin' match, an' both vamoosed widout tellin' de stage manager. I guess it's de hinky dink for dem. He's been fightin' mad ever since. Dey delayed de coitain ten minutes. De call boy seen de youngest go away in a cab."

"That so?" said Mallory, greatly troubled. "Where did they go, d'you know?"

"Nope, but Miss Simpson does, I think."

"Who's Miss Simpson?"

"She's one of de show goils."

Mallory took a dollar from his pocket.

"Can you tell Miss Simpson Mr. Mallory'd like to see her?" he asked.

"Sure!" replied the boy, pocketing the bill and darting off.

In a few minutes he returned.

FURNITURE FACTS

There Is No Article of Merchandise

sold that proves the deceitfulness of appearance so much so as Furniture. To conclude you are getting WHAT YOU PAY FOR is very often a mistaken idea.

Things are not what they seem—especially when you are casting about to fit up your home.

A chair, chiffonier, parlor suit or what not, MAY SHOW distinctive style, brilliancy of finish, and to all intents and purposes be an ideal piece of home decoration, but THERE IS WHERE the deceit not infrequently creeps in.

Like a well-dressed person, they MAY look well and be all right, but you must first know them before you can be sure.

Just so with furniture.

If the wood has not been CAREFULLY SELECTED and properly seasoned, no amount of polishing or varnish can make it good. When the wood IS RIGHT, the best of glue is used and the finishing is done in an artistic manner with the best materials, you CANNOT GO WRONG in buying that kind of woodwork—if you buy it from reliable dealers.

It has always seemed to us that the buyers of furniture should BE PROTECTED in some way from such wanton impositions. There are too many traps of this kind set for the unsuspecting public. The INNOCENT pay the penalty. The GUILTY go unpunished.

It is our business principle to sell every piece of furniture FOR JUST WHAT IT IS. No customer of ours is led to believe she is getting anything but WHAT WE TELL HER. If she wants low-priced, medium-priced or the highest-priced goods, she WILL GET one hundred cents for the dollar she leaves with us.

Too many buyers of furniture seem to reason that a chair is a chair—WITHOUT REGARD to what they pay for it. That is true ONLY as to name A 59 cent chair is a chair in the fullest acceptance of the term, but it CANNOT POSSIBLY BE one (only in name) equal to one sold at $2.50. There appears to be no distinction—but there is a VAST DEAL of difference.

What we want furniture buyers to do is to COME HERE and LOOK at our furniture before deciding upon a purchase. We are equally anxious to have them "shop" around BEFORE COMING, so they MAY FULLY REALIZE our real "Simon pure" values.

"You get just what you pay for when you buy here."

The opening engagements will be between the First Presbyterian and First Baptist fives, Trinity Reformed and Hope chapel and Crescent Avenue and Scotch Plains.

The Y. M. C. A. Juniors defeated the second team of the P. H. S. last night by the score of 30 to 12. In the first half the score stood 21 to 5. There was a great deal of passing and the second team would have scored many additional goals if the shooting had been more accurate. The ball was around its goal most of the time. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Runyon, J. Ricketts; centre, Loizeaux; guards, T. Ricketts, H. VanZandt.

Y. M. C. A. seconds—Forwards, Slocum, Naylor; centre, Collier; guards, Miller, Vail. Time of halves, fifteen minutes; umpire, Fine.

The P. H. S. basketball team defeated the Y. M. C. A. business men's five last night by the score of 40 to 14. All through the game the business men showed lack of training, but putting that aside, they played a good game. The first half was pretty slow, owing to many fumbles, but in the latter part of the last half, there was some fast work. Fine and Best played the star game for the business men, while Hubbard was a close second.

Manley played a fine game for P. H. S. making most of the goals, while Clark put up a strong game, keeping Hubbard busy. In the second half the high school boys had the ball around their basket a good deal of the time, but missed many good chances for making goals. During the first half Hubbard made a spectacular shot from the centre of the floor. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Clark, Bristol; centre, Manley; guards, Doan, Overton.

WEDS ROBERT S. WESTON

Miss Josephine Fitz Randolph Bride at Charming Home Ceremony.

TIE UNITES OLD FAMILIES.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss Officiates—Bride a Daughter of Lewis V. F. Randolph.

Miss Josephine Fitz Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis V. Fitz Randolph, of East Front street, and Robert Spurr Weston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lon Weston, of Boston, Mass., were married at 7:30 o'clock last night, at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore white satin with old family lace. The maid of honor, the bride's younger sister, Miss Elizabeth Blossom Fitz Randolph, wore a gown of pale yellow crepe meteor. The bridesmaids, Miss Janet Randolph Grace, of New York, and Miss Isabel Saguez, of Albany, N. Y., wore gowns of lace over yellow silk. The bouquets were of white roses and sweet peas.

Leonard Metcalf, of Boston, was the best man, and the ushers were Harry Alonzo Cushing, recently Dean of Columbia Law School, and Oscar C. Davis, of Brockton, Mass. Following the ceremony a reception was held, when the bride and groom received the best wishes of relatives and friends.

The bride was born and always lived in the house in which she was married and has a large circle of friends, as has also Mr. Weston; and, manifestly, all of these could not be bidden to a home-wedding But not a few came to offer congratulations, and among them were friends from Boston, Concord, Brockton, New York, Albany, Newark, Trenton and other cities and places, as well as from Plainfield, to the number of about four hundred.

The house decorations were of Southern smilax and white carnations and roses. Hundreds of beautiful wedding presents were received by the happy pair. They will reside in Boston, where Mr. Weston has his chief office as sanitary engineer. He was graduated from Amherst College in 1891 and later took a full course at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston. Later he went abroad to complete his studies as a sanitary engineer.

It was while abroad that he met Mr. and Mrs. Randolph's daughter, Mrs. Charles Parfitt, wife of Dr. Parfitt, of Ontario, Canada, and a sister of the bride, and the acquaintanceship resulted in a friendship with the family which eventually brought Mr. Weston to Plainfield as a guest at the Randolph home. There he met the young woman who last night became his bride.

Mr. Weston on both his paternal and maternal side is a direct descendant of the oldest New England families, traced back to 1680 when they first landed at Salem, Mass. The bride's family is equally as prominent in New Jersey, her ancestors being among the very early settlers in the State. She is an attractive young woman and is greatly admired for her many true qualities. She is a talented musician and a lover of art, having had the rare advantage of the wide experience of her parents.

WHITE PLAGUE ASSOCIATION COMMITTEE TO MEET.

The executive committee of the Plainfield Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis will hold a meeting tonight to consider several matters pertaining to the operation of the tuberculosis camp, which was recently opened on the hospital grounds. There is some talk of building an addition to the camp to meet the increased needs. Several applications have been received from persons suffering from tuberculosis. Eight patients are now being cared for and with increased accommodations, as many more could be received for treatment.

Fine Skating at P. C. C.

Members of the Plainfield Country Club are just now enjoying some fine skating on the links. There is a pond, 130x100, about two hundred yards east of the clubhouse, between the fifteenth and sixteenth holes, that cannot be excelled for skating purposes. This is strictly private and is intended for members only. The tennis courts are now being flooded and if the cold snap continues there should be skating there by Saturday.

—The holiday dinners will not be complete without a good cheese. Neuman Bros. have a full supply of foreign and domestic cheeses to suit every taste.

RIGHTS OF A DIVORCEE

Chancellor Has Discretion to Allow Woman to Resume Maiden Name.

WHEN IT IS A HARDSHIP.

Where There Are Children the Court Generally Hesitates to Grant the Privilege.

The enactment of a law four years ago authorizing the chancellor, in his discretion, to grant a divorcee the right to resume her maiden name has resulted in a large number of divorce cases in the last two years being featured by petitioning wives wishing to be known before the world by their maiden names, while the children must carry the cognomens of their fathers.

This class of divorce petitions has become so numerous recently that a question has developed in the mind of Chancellor Mahlon Pitney as to the social propriety of mothers being granted their prayer for the right to resume their maiden names. While the chancellor has not expressed a formal opinion in the matter he has promulgated a rule that hereafter all decrees nisi, or temporary decrees, which precede by six months a final decree, must not contain an order of right for a wife to resume her maiden name before the world. By this rule the chancellor reserves the determination of allowing a divorced mother to resume her maiden name until the period arrives for a final decree. The corrolary of this order is that the chancellor means to determine each case on its merits with respect to the social effect on the children born of the union which is broken by the State.

It is understood that the court does not see any impropriety in granting this class of petitions in cases where an aggrieved wife is childless.

ANTONI BARTON MISSING FROM DUNELLEN HOME.

Antoni Barton, of Dunellen, reported to the local police last night that his stepfather, James B. Dick, has been missing since last Wednesday. Mr. Dick is described as being forty-five years old, about five feet six or seven inches tall and wore a brown suit when he left home. The police of various cities and towns along the line of the Central Railroad have been asked to be on the lookout for the man.

Banquet Tickets Selling Rapidly.

The tickets for the annual banquet of the Plainfield Merchants' Association are selling rapidly and there is now no doubt but that all of them will be disposed of before the date of the affair. ANOTHER TROLLEY LINE

Proposed Traction Route Will Be of Benefit to Plainfield.

IT'S A PITTSBURG SYNDICATE.

Plans Already Out and Line Will Be Built by Morris County Traction Company.

Plans are out for a trolley line from Elizabeth to Lake Hopatcong, and assurances are given that it will be built by the Morris County Traction Company, backed by Pittsburg capitalists.

The company's representative, Mr. Schultze in New, Brunswick, said yesterday:

"In a year's time we will have a direct line in operation from Elizabeth to Lake Hopatcong, thus connecting with the Public Service Corporation lines to Trenton and Philadelphia, via Plainfield, Bound Brook and New Brunswick. With the recent change in the personnel of the officers of the company, and the moving of the books and papers to Morristown from Pittsburg we are in a position to push the work rapidly. Heretofore we have been at a disadvantage because part of our papers and records were at the Pittsburg office, and part in Morristown. Now everything is here, and it only remains for hard work on our part to get things in shape, formulate a general program and complete the route."

HE HOLDS 3 OFFICES IN CITY GOVERNMENT

Only a few appear to be in the joke, but those few are chuckling over the cleverness of the dignified Board of Education to prevent practical politics playing a part in the selection of one to fill a vacancy in that body. The same few are also laughing over what they consider a political blunder made by the board itself when its action virtually made one popular man the "pooh bah" of the city.

So secretly did the Board of Education engineer its plan to quietly name a successor to Charles F. Abbott, who resigned as a member after fourteen years service, because for two years he had not been a bonafide resident of the city, that even Mayor Charles J. Fisk, himself, did not know anything about the appointment until it had been made.

Mr. Abbott, it is said, wanted to resign long before the recent November election. He was induced, however, to keep his resignation in his pocket until after that time as otherwise the people and not the board would select his successor. Finally last Wednesday night the members secretly got together and, after accepting his resignation, unanimously chose Dr. B. VanD. Hedges in his place.

Dr. Hedges already holds two local public and one semi-public office. He is president of the Board of Health and is a director of the Public Library by appointment of the Mayor. Likewise he is a governor of the hospital, which received support from the city. The result of the education board's action is to make the popular physician probably the greatest office-holder in this section. At the same time he is excellently qualified to hold these offices.

His Horse Strayed.

Patrolman Saffron, of the local police force, found a horse drawing a carpenter's wagon on Park avenue at a late hour last night, wandering along as though searching for his stable. Patrolman Saffron took the horse and wagon to McDonald's stables for safe keeping and it was later claimed by Theodore Zeller, of 13 Spruce street, North Plainfield.

Former Teacher a Visitor.

Miss Constance Bowen, of Medina, N. Y., a former teacher in the borough school, renewed acquaintances with her former pupils today. Miss Bowen, who resigned her position last spring on account of ill health, is now fully recovered.

COP AND MESSENGER PLAY "HERO" PARTS

Patrolman McDonald and Messenger Boy Reynolds, of the Western Union office, saved the lives of a man and women last night at about half past six and the parties got away without their names being discovered and without saying where they came from. The 6:19 train was just about coming into the station when train No. 215 came rushing along. Had it not been for the prompt action of the policeman and the messenger, who together pulled the two people out of danger someone would have passed a sorry Christmas and two others would not have known what struck them.

SANTA CLAUS TO VISIT ST. MARY'S CHILDREN

Pupils of St. Mary's parochial school will observe Christmas by special exercises to be held in the school hall on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. An attractive program has been arranged for the occasion and Santa Claus will be present and distribute gifts to the children. The program follows:

NO FAVORITISM SHOWN FOR "CLIMAX" TICKETS

Santa Claus Land, Dec 22.—This statement was furnished today by Charles J. Fisk, chairman of the ticket committee for the Charity Ball and Theatre performance to be given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital:

"The ticket committee of the charity ball for the benefit of Muhlenberg hospital learn with regret that there is certain dissatisfaction and open charges of favoritism in the distribution of reserved seats at the theatre. The committee were most particular and gave strict orders that no seats were to be reserved in advance. A member of the committee was at the box office when the window opened Monday morning at quarter before nine o'clock, and at that time every ticket was in the rack and seats were issued in exchange for coupons and reservations made in regular order to those then in line. All mail and telephone reservations were taken in order received after line was worked off. Mr. Sanderson, the manager of the theatre, assures the committee everything was strictly regular and no favortism shown to anyone. The committee regret there should have been any trouble and assures all patrons that if there was any under hand work of any kind, it was without their knowledge, against their orders and absolutely beyond their control.

"So far about four hundred and fifty tickets have been exchanged. There are a number of good seats left in the house and all those holding tickets, wishing to attend the theatre, should exchange their coupons for reserved seats as soon as possible."

Joint Company Doing Big Business.

The Spicer Universal Joint company is rapidly completing its new building at Madison avenue and West Fourth street. During the past year the company's business has increased four hundred per cent. and a force of about 175 men is employed at the works. The article manufactured here is in great demand in the automobile trade and the company is kept busy on full scheduled time filling orders.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will meet with the regular Wednesday evening prayer service, there being no Friday evening service this week.

NEW $35,000 BUILDING

Edward S. Alpaugh to Erect Three Story Structure on East Second St.

ADJOINING NEW CITY MARKET.

Building to Be Fireproof and to Contain All Conveniences For Tenants.

The establishing of the city market on East Second street has resulted in a healthy boom in real estate and building circles which is sure to be a huge benefit to that thoroughfare as well as to the city.

It was announced today that Edward S. Alpaugh, of 223 East Ninth street, a retired New York market man, will erect a three story brick building, containing stores and flats, on the plot of ground now owned by him adjoining the market building. The structure, according to Mr. Alpaugh, will be modern and up-to-date in construction and will cost between $25,000 and $35,000.

According to the tentative plans of Mr. Alpaugh the building will be erected in the spring. It will be a fireproof structure and the living apartments will be embellished with all of the conveniences of a New York apartment house.

Mr. Alpaugh is enthusiastic over the rosy outlook for the success of the new market. "It is bound to improve real estate in that part of the city," said Mr. Alpaugh to a Daily Press reporter this morning, "and the market, if conducted on right lines, it will prove a popular buying place for Plainfielders."

"THE GREAT NORTHWEST" SUBJECT OF HER PAPER

The Women"s Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, which has for the year's study "Mission Work in the United States," listened to a paper of profound interest on "The Giant Northwest," presented by Miss Mary Coles at the meeting yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. The settlement of the Boundary Question prefaced Miss Cole's account of the marvelous changes wrought in the past seventy-five years in the northwestern section of this country; changes so great that she said the arid land called "the great American desert" had become the bread basket of the world.

The wonderful fertility of soil that was aforetime thought only capable of sage bush growth and the marvels wrought by irrigation and the application of scientific knowledge were full of interest as described by Miss Coles, who told further how the brave and stout hearted pioneers had developed this empire of agricultural wealth.

The story of the work of the Home Missionary Society concluded Miss Coles paper. She told of the lack of money to carry on so great a work and the necessity for the church to awaken to its opportunity for teaching the Gospel in our own country. A devotional service led by Mrs. James L. Manning preceded the paper.

The object of the association is to promote mutual sociability among the members and to aid the church financially.

Claudius R. Borden was elected president of the socity and Miss Blanche Thorne, vice-president. James D. Robson was given the office of secretary and Miss J. A. Lee that of treasurer. Mrs. J. A. Borden was named directress of the society by a unanimous vote. The society proposes to give an entertainment shortly which will draw into closer relations the younger members of the parish.

WOOLSTON WILL RESIGN

Borough Fire Chief Will Relinquish Reins of Office in January.

HE HAS SERVED SIX YEARS

Captain William McCullough and John Schenck Are Hustling for the Job—No Other New Appointments.

When Mayor-elect Newton B. Smalley takes the reins of the borough government in hand on January 1, it is generally surmised that with one exception he will reappoint all of the heads of the different departments.

The single change anticipated is the appointment of a successor to Fire Chief Howard Woolston, whom it is reported, on the best of authority, will present his resignation to the borough Council next Tuesday night. Mr. Woolston has filled the position of chief with credit to himself and borough for six years, or since the paid department was organized.

The rumor that Chief Woolston has intentions to retire has resulted in Mayor-elect Smalley being bombarded with applicants for the position. Up to date two candidates are hustling for the appointment, Captain William McCullough, of the call men, and John Schenck, a former member of the old volunteer department. Although Mayor-elect Smalley is mute on the subject of appointments, it is the general impression that McCullough stands in line for promotion. The office pays a salary of $100 and care of horse.

No changes are anticipated in the police department and Chief Weiss is certain to be reappointed. The same can also be said of Borough Clerk Frederick I. Martin and Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker.

Mayor-elect Smalley and the Council will meet for organization at noon on New Years Day.

A PROWLING MAN AND A STOVE CAUSE TROUBLE

Samuel Aakson, who keeps a small shop at 511 West Fifth street, has caused a lot of excited comment during the last few nights owing to his habit of prowling around after other folks in the house had retired. Last night, at a very late hour, his actions became so suspicious that Mrs. Burns, who with her family occupies the upper apartment in the house, notified police headquarters that she was afraid something was wrong in the house.

Roundsman Higgins investigated and found that a small oil stove which Aakson kept on a mantelpiece in his room had fallen and set fire to a lounge directly underneath the mantelpiece and their combined efforts were necessary to extinguish the blaze. No alarm was turned in. Aakson said that he did not know the accident happened.

OVER 400 WILL THANK ARMY OF GOOD FELLOW

So Successful Has Been the Appeal That Santa Must Call a Halt.

"Good Fellow" desires to announce that owing to the unusual amount of work required to expedite matters, it will be impossible to receive any letters addressed to Santa Claus after 10 o'clock tomorrow, Thursday morning. The aim is to place in the hands of the Army of Good Fellows by tomorrow night the lists of those for whom they are to be Santa Claus.

The committee, consisting of Miss Holly, of the Charity Organization Society, and Rev. George A. Warner, the friend of all the kids, have been "head over heels" in work. They never realized what they consented to do when they accepted the burden placed on them and as a result they have been at work night and day rushing matters.

By 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, "Good Fellow" hopes to be able to announce that the 500 poor little tots will have been provided with toys, dolls, etc., to make their Christmas a real one.

"Four hundred poor children at least insured a happy Christmas!"

The tidings was flashed from The Daily Press office today to Santa Claus' own igloo in Kris Kringleland.

Quicker than time to tell the receiving apparatus began to rumble and clatter and spit and sizz, and soon it was discovered that half a dozen "C. Q. D.'s" were trying to climb in at once with the return message. And this is the way they read:

"Hurray for the 'God Fellows!' I knew there were plenty of you in Plainfield, and I knew you would come give me a lift if somebody would tell you how I needed the help. And here's a thing, too, 'Good Fellows;' I'll guarantee you that this will be the happiest Christmas you ever spent in your life.

"SANTA CLAUS."

Not many realize how great a thing has grown from the Full Christmas Stocking campaign started by one "Good Fellow." Not even he dreamed he had so many comrades just waiting for a chance to show what "Good Fellows" they were. Yet these letters asking for directions how to become a "Good Fellow" Santa Claus continue to reach The Daily Press office in every mail.

"I am in thorough sympathy with your work and should like to share in it. Will you kindly send me the names, sex and ages of six or eight children."

MIDNIGHT XMAS MASS AT ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH

A midnight mass on Friday night will mark the beginning of the observance of Christmas at St. Joseph's R. C. church. Admission to this service will be by ticket only. The celebrant will be Father Baldwin, of St. Mary's College, a Passionist Father of Hoboken assisting as deason and the rector, Rev. William H. Miller, as sub-deacon.

Appropriate music will also be a marked feature of the service. A boys' and men choir, which is being drilled by James Bailey, will augment the regular church choir. Mrs. Harry DeMeza will preside at the organ, and Korff's orchestra will also assist in the service.

Labache's mass and Novello's Adate Sidenes will be sung. Masses will also be celebrated at 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock on Christmas morning. The Yuletide sermon will be preached by Father Miller.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

CASE OF HYPNOTIST BEFORE GRAND JURY

At the opening of the December term of the Somerset County Court at Somerville, yesterday, Justice Charles W. Parker called the attention of the grand jury to the case of "Professor" Arthur Everton, a hypnotist, charged before the court with manslaughter for, as alleged, having caused the death of Robert Simpson, of Newark, a professional subject, while in a cataleptic state during an exhibition given by Everton at the Somerville Theatre several weeks ago.

Justice Parker said the case was so unusual that it would be wrong for the court to pass it by without a thorough investigation of all the circumstances connected with it.

Justice Parker briefly instructed the jury to ascertain by investigating whether it was a case of manslaughter or merely an accident. Justice Parker said that it was possible that Simpson's death might have been due to neglect on the part of Everton, but the jury must find the defendant was guilty of a reckless regard for human life in order to indict him for manslaughter.

Justice Parker said that as far as the case had been related to him he saw no strong probability at the present time that Everton was guilty of manslaughter.

The jury will probably be in session for several days, and it will not be known until its final adjournment whether Everton, who is now out on $2,500 bail, will be brought to trial.

Public sentiment is against trying Everton, unless there is very convincing evidence placed before the grand jury that the hypnotist is responsible for Simpson's death. The trial, it is believed, would be one of expert testimony on hypnotism, that would be very costly to the taxpayers of Somerset county, who have only a passing interest in the principals, who are residents of Essex county.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The annual offering for Muhlenberg Hospital will be received at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Sunday.

Martin A. Korff, leader of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, is now organizing a similar musical body in the Elizabeth association.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor, will have charge of the prayer meeting at the First M. E. church, tonight. The service will be appropriate to Christmas.

On account of this being holiday week, the Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet tomorrow night, instead of Friday.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who was called to Denver by the illness and death of his brother, is expected to return in time to take charge of the prayer meeting at the Congregational church, tonight.

The prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church this evening will be appropriate to Christmastide. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Rev. L. R. Howard and Rev. F. D. Tildon will make short addresses. Rev. Dr. Zelie will be in charge.

The Sunday schools of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet at the latter church Sunday afternoon for a Christmas service. Two years have elapsed since the schools thus met, owing to the renovation which closed the church a year ago.

COURT HEREAFTER TO PICK GRAND JURY HEAD.

Before Supreme Court Justice Parker charged the grand jury at Somerville yesterday, there was an unusual action on his part which has caused much comment and is regarded as significant. In the first place the court called Michael W. Scully, the foreman of the grand jury and the chairman of the Somerset county Democratic executive committee, into his private room for consultation. After which Mr. Scully came out and took his position at the head of the panel, and Judge Parker announced that in the future the court instead of the sheriff would select the foreman of the grand jury. Justice Parker said that it was the intention of the court to begin the practise with the present term, but after interviewing Mr. Scully it had been decided that there was no reason for his not serving as foreman.

After twenty-four jurors had been sworn, Justice Parker announced that Rev. George H. Bowers and Peter Zergrebel, both residents of Warren Township, would be excused for reasons best known to the court.

Philip D. Shannon and Frank K. Schwerkhardt were also excused at their own request for business reasons. This left the panel with the unusual number of twenty jurors, which went into deliberation at noon.

The officers-elect of Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order of Foresters, will be installed Tuesday night, January 4, by a high court officer. A smoker will follow.

Miss Janet Randolph Grace, of New York, has been visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street.

GOLF.

Although unsuccessful in the national amateur championship tournament and the tri-city matches for the Lesley cup, the Massachusetts golfers played as well as if not better, this year than during any previous season. In a backward glance Ralph Cracknell, the well known critic, rates the first ten amateurs of the Bay State, and gives his reasons, in part, as follows:

1. P. W. Whittemore, Country Club; tied for sixth place in strong field of Eastern professionals at the invitation tourhament of the Country Club, score 161, and was only defeated at the nineteenth hole in match with Alex Ross; won Lesley cup match, defeating Norman Macbeth at Philadelphia.

2. T. M. Claflin, Wollaston; qualified in United States amateur championship at Chicago and took A. Sillwell to second extra hole in first match; won Lesley cup match with W. T. West; won open amateur tournament of Philadelphia Cricket Club.

3. A. G. Lockwood, Allston; qualified at Chicago, and was defeated by Mason Phelps by 2 and 1; lost Lesley cup match to W. G. Pfeil, but won foursome match; won the Country Club spring tournament.

4. H. H. Wilder, Vesper; won Lesley cup match with W. C. Fownes, Jr., and foursome match, paired with W. C. Chick against H. B. McFarland and Dr. Simon Carr; won Abenaqui tournament.

5. Percival Gilbert, Brae Burn; won Massachusetts amateur championship; played good match with H. B. McFarland in Lesley cup match, losing by 2 up.

6. J. G. Anderson, Woodland; won Connecticut match with R. L. Jackson; won Rhode Island match with D. Fairchild, champion of the state; failed to qualify by one stroke at Chicago.

7. A. L. White, Brae Burn; qualified at Chicago and defeated by 2 up by Harold Weber; won Connecticut match with S. D. Bowers and Rhode Island match with B. M. Smith.

8. H. R. Johnstone, Myopia; qualified at Chicago and defeated by 1 up by R. A. Gardner, the national champion; won Rhode Island match with C. H. Gardner.

9. J. B. Hylan, Vesper; won the Country Club's fall tournament, defeating W. J. Travis by 2 up and P. W. Whittemore by 1 up.

10. C. T. Crocker, Jr., on his all-round showing during the year; he was a strong factor in the Massachusetts amateur championship, and won his match when chosen to play against Connecticut.

G. H. Crocker and W. C. Chick would be the next choices. W. C. Chick did not play enough to get into his real form. T. R. Fuller had an off year.

CALLS MISTRESS POISONER.

Servant Girl Says Mrs. Armstrong Killed Husband.

New Albany, Ind., Dec. 22.—Mrs. Pearl Armstrong, whose husband died Sunday night, was placed in jail Monday night, charged with murder. Armstrong had been ill for some time, and circumstances attending his death caused an investigation by the coroner, which resulted in the wife's arrest.

A servant girl testified that Mrs. Armstrong gave her husband six capsules containing carbolic acid, putting on a pair of gloves when she filled the capsules. The poison was administered in doses one hour apart, the girl said.

ALMOST DROWNS WHILE SKATING.

Morristown, Dec. 22.—William Rogers, ten years old, had a narrow escape from drowning in Pocahontas Pond Monday afaernoon. With other boys he ventured upon thin ice, which gave way under their weight. Rogers went under, the other boys scrambling off in time to prevent a wetting.

An old ladder on the bank was thrown across the ice to the hole where Rogers had disappeared. Several lads crawled out upon the ladder and when Rogers came to the surface seized him and dragged him to shore.

Bayonne, Dec. 22.—A brick was hurled through a window in the home of Alfred Jugar, of John street, Monday, as he was eating his meal. The brick landed in a crib in which was a six months old baby playing with a doll. The doll was broken, but the baby escaped injury. No one knows who threw the brick.

ENTERTAINING MEETING OF CONGREGATIONAL WOMEN

The Women's Association of the Congregational church held its annual Christmas meeting in the church parlors yesterday afternoon and in celebration of the season collected a Christmas offering of five dollars which will be sent to Saluda Seminary, at Saluda, N. C.

A musical and literary program was provided by some of the members among which was a reading by Miss Ethel Millar. Miss Millar read Booth Tarkington's "Beasley's Christmas Party." This was given in two sections, the first part being read after a piano duet delightfully played by Miss Martin and Miss Weeks; and the second part finished while the women were enjoing a cup of tea. The reading was thoroughly enjoyed.

Mrs. J. A. Rawson, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Miss Louise Nichol, sang a group of Christmas songs which pleased the members. The five dollars collected will be used in purchasing a kindergarten outfit for the Saluda Seminary.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The Workingman's Wife" comes to the Plainfield theatre Xmas matinee and night, and if every workingman's wife in Plainfield knew just how much good the play would do her, they would all be there. A. H. Woods knows the likes and dislikes of the American play-going public probably better than any other producing manager. He has designed this play to please the "bread winner" and there is no doubt it will accomplish the object. Mr. Woods has placed the parts in the hands of competent performers who will give it an intelligent presentation. The stage mechanic has done some great work also in the way of effects, which are both startling and original. Reserve your seats. Don't take any chance of missing it.

At Proctor's.

George Beban's associate players in the famous sketch, "The Sign of the Rose" will appear here tomorrow for the first time at Proctor's. The play has been a success wherever it has been seen. The sketch, in which eight players assist, deals with a child stolen by the Black Hand and a child killed by an auto. The father of the latter, an Italian laborer, is taken for an emissary of the kidnappers when he visits a florist's shop, in which the action takes place. He is offered $10,000 ransom by the agonized mother and bulldozed by a detective when he refuses. He had entered the place to buy a rose for his dead child. In voicing his love for his little girl and his anguish upon being pressed by the sleuth makes a most interesting story. Don't be one of those who regretted in not seeing it. This commences an engagement tomorrow.

Plain Terms.

Dorothy, the small daughter of a busy farmer, had gone out to help her sister keep a large herd of cattle from a cornfield adjoining the meadow. Shortly before dinner she came into the house flushed and excited.

"Oh, mamma!" she exclaimed breathlessly, "I got so mad at that old cow that I just swore at her."

"Why, Dorothy," said the shocked mother, "you shouldn't have done that. What did you say?"

"I called her an old brute!"—Woman's Home Companion.

WASHING DAY IN ENGLAND.

Washing-day! Everybody knows it!

Yet even that day of sharp tempers has its quaint side, says London Answers. It is a matter of importance on which day of the week the family washing is done. There is an ancient rhyme, known to country washerwomen, which says that the first three days of the weeks are good days for the purpose:

"Wash on a Monday,
You have all the week to dry;
Wash on a Tuesday,
Very nigh;
Wash on a Wednesday,
A very good day;"

Thursday is doubtful:

"Wash on a Thursday,
But clear it all away."

But do not leave it later. The remaining days are unsuitable:

"Wash on a Friday,
Wash for need;
Wash on a Saturday,
Sluts indeed."

There are other washing-day superstitutions. In some Cornish villages—and particularly those where the men get their living by toiling on the sea—there still lingers a very old superstitution against any washing on the first day of the year, lest some member of the family be washed away very soon afterwards. No dirty water must be thrown away on that day at all.

The washerwoman has her ancient rights. She had a legal triumph a little time back, when her privileges were threatened by the authorities of the suburb of Ealing—London's premier suburb, as it calls itself. For rather more than 140 years washerwomen had had clothes-posts on Ealing Common, and week after wweewk the civic eyes were offended by the sight of garments hanging to dry in the breezes that sept the common. At last the Town Council determined to do away with the eyesore, and issued a summons for the purpose; but the chivalrous magistrates dismissed it. No doubt, they said, some old-time lord of the manor had given the women the right, and it could still be exercised. So Ealingites can still have their linen on show.

The discomforts of washing day at home are illustrated in a well-authenticated story of a Scotsman who left his Highland village to spend a day in London, primarily to lay a grievance before the King. For some reason—doubtless red tape—he could not obtain an audience, and returned home much discomfited. On his return he was worried by his friends to tell what had happened.

"Can you no' tell us?" they persisted.

"Ooo, well," scaid he at last, "'twas like this. The King just says to me, says he, 'Ye see, Geordie, I'm sorry I cannot ask you to dine tonight, for, ye ken, Geordie, it's the Queen's washing day; but I'll see to your case.'"

It was a satisfactory reason, for, of course, no one could receive visitors on washing day, as every villiager appreciated.

FALSE ALARM VOLCANOES.

Volcanic eruptions are not infrequently reported from regions where they are gealogically impossible, says the San Francisco Call. Several years ago the formation of an active crater on an Alpine summit was announced. The cause was only a forest fire on one of the lower peaks. Recently in France the papers told of an eruption in an abandoned mine shaft near Mons. Huge, thick clouds first rose from the shaft and a fine, warm dust soon began to fall over the surrounding fields. Soon flames were seen to issue and stones rained on the neighboring houses, whose terrified inhabitants took flight. An investigation led to the conclusion that all this was due to an explosion of firedamp in the old mine.

Eruptions of the same sort have occured in our own country. In one of the canyons of the Santa Monica Mountains, near Los Angeles, a volcano, we are informed by the local press, recently broke out.

Similar reports in the past have always been traced to fires in the oil-bearing shales that abound near the surface of the ground in this region, and investigation has shown that this latest "volcano" is of the same nature. The locality is about 200 yards from the sea at a point about twelve miles from Los Angeles, where sulphurous smoke rises from a little mound of miocene shale. A little below the surface of the ground is almost red hot and sets fire to bits of wood that are stuck into it.

The fire seems to have been started by lightning, or perhaps it is a case of spontaneous combustion. The region is soaked with petroleum and it is not necessary to have recourse to any theory of volcanic action for an explanation. As the nearest oil wells are fully ten miles distant the incident probably will have no unpleasant consequence.

TO LAUNDER LACE CURTAINS.

The first thing in order is to shake free from dust. If put into hot water while full of dust they will never be anything again but a dingy gray. Next mend any torn places or patch carefully by darning over a piece of bobbinet or an old piece of curtain saved for just such purposes. After the curtains are mended soak in warm suds for an hour, then squeeze and sop between the hands until clean, but do not rub on a board. After this they may be scalded, rinsed, blued, starched lightly while wet and dried as quickly as possible. No blueing is required for the popular ecru lace. If they bleach in washing the color can be restored by dipping in a coffee bath, weak or strong, according to the shade desired. This is done, of course, before the starching. A good curtain starch is made as follows: Take a large clean dishpan and throw in it a half cup or more of starch, according to the number of curtains to be treated. Add enough cold water to mix to the consistency of thin cream, then pour boiling water in a thain stream over the starch, stirring constantly to prevent lumping. Add a few drops of kerosene oil or stir with a sperm candle kept for this purpose. Dip the older curtains in first, then follow with the rest. If you have a patent curtain stretcher half the bother of doing up curtains where they must be dried on a sheet stretched on the floor, will be saved. Be careful in affixing the scallops to the stretcher so that each one is caught with a pin, or if some must be skipped do so at regular intervals. It is a good idea to attach them in pairs, pinning the scallops of the two curtains together. Place the stretchers upright so the air may blow upon them. If the day is bright and warm several pairs of curtains may be affixed to the stretcher at one time.

A meeting of the arrangement committee for the firemen's ball, December 31, was held last night at the home of William Hamilton. The committee is working hard to make the affair as success. The company will try to clear off the remaining debt on this affair.

Edward Fitzpatrick was found yesterday morning in a barn. He was almost frozen and was starving. The man was removed to the township poor farm by Overseer Dayton.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I do not want to appear presumptuous in the questions that I am about to ask, but rather to voice questions which a great many of our worthy citizens are asking. The questions are these: How are we to interpret the recent declaration of the Plainfield Medical Association regarding the increased fee for medical attendance? Does this rate apply to all who have hitherto paid the present rate of two dollars for a house call and one dollar for an office call?

Further, does this increase in the doctor's fee also mean that those physicians whose prices has been higher than the two dollar limit, will proportionately increase their fee?

It has been said that the poor will not suffer because of this increase, for this fee will be reduced for them at the discretion of the physician; but we have in our community what is commonly called the "middle class" of people. I am well aware that in a true Christian civilization there are no class distinctions, but as a matter of convenience we speak of those who are neither rich nor poor as the "middle class." They constitute a large majority of our people, and they are the ones who will feel this increase of fifty per cent in the doctor's fee, an additional burden to the present abnormal high rate of living. They belong to no union. They cannot very well combine for increased salaries or custom. Their wages have not advanced and they want no charity. How does this increased rate apply to them?

Good medical attendance is to be had in New York city, based on the two dollar and one dollar rate. Of course it is possible to pay more, but this depends largely on the physician's experience and skill. Former parishioners of mine who paid two dollars and one dollar in Plainfield are now paying the same in New York and some of these people live in the section of the city bordering on Riverside Drive. It may be that this new rate will cause many of our people to be their own physicians, when they really need professional attendance. It is possible that the people have an entirely wrong impression of this action of the Medical Association, and they will be glad indeed to have more light.

Respectfully,
CHARLES E. HERRING.

SHOW PEARY PICTURES AT XMAS ENTERTAINMENT

The Christmas entertainment under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church on Thursday night, December 30, will be of unusual interest at this time. The committee has arranged to show the complete set of pictures taken by Commander Robert E. Peary on his last trip to the North Pole, when he reached the goal for which he tried so long.

This will be the first exhibition of these views in this part of New Jersey and should prove of great interest to those who have been reading the story of Peary's travels in the far north, and especially because the National Geographic Society has placed its stamp of approval on Peary's achievement.

The entertainment for the primary department of the Sunday school will be held Thursday afternoon, when a special program will be presented. The Junior department will have its Christmas party on Wednesday afternoon, December 29.

FRANKLIN SCHOOL'S PROGRAM TOMORROW

The pupils of Franklin School have prepared a rather elaborate program of Christmas exercises which will be given tomorrow afternoon at 1:45. It will be entirely musical and is as follows: Hymn, Adestes Fideles, school; hymn, Silent Night, school; carol, "Sing for Joy," school; "Hark! A Burst of Heavenly Music," by twenty boys; hymn, "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing," school; carol, "Brightly Wave," school; solo, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Master Alpaugh; piano duet, Misses Post and Wilkins; an old English carol, "God Rest ye Merry, Gentlemen," school; carol, "Christmas Night," school; carol, with a solo by Master Alpaugh, with chorus of twenty boys; piano solo, Miss Wilkins; carol, "A Christmas Lullaby, school, and song, "The Star of Bethlehem," school.

—A. M. Griffen, East Front street, will keep his store open evenings the rest of this week. ***

MINERALS IN FOOD

NECESSITY NOT ALWAYS THOROUGHLY UNDERSTOOD.

Work of All the Organs of the Body Dependent Upon Mineral Matters Furnished—Milk and Eggs Highly Desirable.

BY JESSICA E. BESACK.

Director Department of Domestic Science and Art, National Corn Exposition, Omaha, Neb.

The necessity of mineral matters in the food is not often understood. Few people give this matter any thought other than that mineral matter is needed for the bones and to "purify the blood," whatever that may mean.

As everyone knows, the food materials are carried to every part of the system by the blood and, by a very exact arrangement, just the particular food and amount needed deposited. But what is not generally known is the fact that the work of all the organs of the body is dependent upon the mineral matters furnished. The beating of the heart is due to the presence of two mineral salts in the blood, one possessing the property of causing expansion and the other the property of causing contraction.

Many difficulties attend the work of foods and their effects upon the system. The experiments are long and expensive and subjects few and reluctant. But recent investigations tend to show that minerals cannot be successfully supplied to the body in a medicinal form, without an accompanying food, rich in the mineral desired.

It follows that a diet rich in mineral matter is essential. Fresh vegetables, fresh fruits, milk and eggs are all rich in minerals and should find a place in all diets. Milk and eggs are expensive, but the result will justify the expense in many instances. Skim milk and buttermilk are just as rich in minerals as whole milk, much cheaper and are deserving of much more attention than is usually given to them.

A pretty, inexpensive and attractive salad may be made from shredding a crisp cabbage and adding a few drops of onion juice and seasoning, using a French dressing. If oil is objectionable, melted butter may be successfully substituted.

RECIPE FOR RICE BAVARIAN

Housewife's Expenditure of Time and Trouble Will Be Well Repaid by the Result.

Put into a double boiler one and a half pints of milk and a few thin cuts of lemon peel. When it boils stir in one-half cup of well-washed rice and a saltspoon of salt. Cook until the rice is perfectly tender. The milk should be nearly boiled away, leaving the rice very moist. Then add or mix in carefully a half cup of sugar and a quarter of a box of gelatin which has soaked in half a cup of cold water for an hour and then melted by placing the cup containing it in hot water for a few minutes. When the mixture is partly cooled add three tablespoons of sherry or any preferred flavor. When it is beginning to set, stir in lightly half a pint of cream which has been whipped stiff, and put into a mold. Serve with crushed strawberries sweetened. The white mold with red sauce is a charming combination.

Vegetable Sandwich Fillings.

Delicious and unusual combinations in sandwich vegetable fillings are minced celery mixed with cream cheese and moistened with whipped cream, radish hearts chopped fine and mixed with grated American cheese and whipped cream, green peas mashed into a paste and seasoned with salt and pepper, minced green peppers and cucumbers chopped fine and moistened with mayonnaise, olives or pimentoes sliced thin and mixed with a French dressing, chopped onions that have stood an hour in lightly salted water, then mixed with mayonnaise, or a thin slice of tomato seasoned with salt and pepper and dusted with grated cheese. For the latter use round slices of whole wheat bread and serve in a circle on a doily-covered plate.

Minced Lamb.

Remove all the good meat from what remains of roast lamb and mince fine. Put the bones and bits of skin in a saucepan and cover with a pint of water. Add one onion, one-half carrot cut small, a few sprays of parsley and two mint leaves, and simmer for one-half hour; add any gravy left from roast and strain. Thicken with one tablespoonful of flour rubbed in one tablespoonful of butter, add a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and the minced lamb. Let it come to a boil and serve.

Croquettes.

To the meat of a well boiled crawfish, chopped fine, add pepper, salt and mace; mix with this one-quarter as much of well rubbed bread crumbs as there is meat; add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter; shape into pointed balls, roll in beaten eggs, then in cracker dust; fry in butter or sweet lard; serve dry and hot with crisp parsley.

Chocolate Caramels.

Put into a granite saucepan one cup of grated chocolate, one cup of molasses and the same amount each of milk and sugar and two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter. Stir over a slow fire until thoroughly mixed, then boil until it is brittle when dropped in cold water. Turn into greased pans and mark into squares before it becomes cold.

STATE WANTS $138,000 AS TAX ON BIG ESTATE

Trenton, Dec. 22.—The question whether the State of New Jersey shall collect $138,000 collateral inheritance tax from the $7,000,000 estate left by the late Wesley Hunt Tilford, of New York, was debated before Justice Reed in the Supreme Court yesterday. The question was raised in the certiorari proceedings instituted by Henry M. Tilford, a brother of Wesley Hunt Tilford, and also his executor and residuary legatee, against Samuel D. Dickinson, as register of the Prerogative Court.

Wesley Hunt Tilford made certain specific bequests in his will which were taxed under the inheritance laws of the State of New York, and upon which taxes have been paid. The residuary estate, consisting of stocks in New Jersey corporations, as well as stocks in corporations of other States, passed under the will to the brother, Henry M. Tilford.

The latter elected to take the property which his brother had outside of this State for the purpose of paying the taxable legacies, in order that the stock in the New Jersey corporations should sink into the residuum and finally pass to him who as a brother is exempt from the operating of the inheritance tax.

The executor applied to State Comptroller Henry J. West for a waiver to the transfer of the stock himself, which the comptroller declined to give. In order to test whether the executor could so marshal the assets as to pay all the debts and legacies out of the property in New York, and thus deprive the State of New Jersey of its proper share of the tax, Attorney-General Wilson yesterday appeared before Justice Reed, insisting that upon the assessment and payment of $138,000.

He was opposed by Malcolm G. Buchanan, of Trenton, representing Henry M. Tilford.

Attorney-General Wilson said that the real insistment of the executor is that the register of the prerogative court had no jurisdiction to levy the tax, because the stock on which it was levied forms a part of the residuary estate and passes to a brother. Had there been a specific bequest of this stock to the brother, he admitted that no question could be raised as to the accuracy of the instalment. The executor, he continued, must have arranged that the stock in the New Jersey corporations should not be utilized in paying off the debts of the decedent or any of the specific legacies, for the purpose of avoiding a tax upon any part of the estate represented by the property in New Jersey.

FOUGHT BOYHOOD FOES AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS.

Paterson, Dec. 22.—Because Heller De Hamer was thrown in a pond in Holland, fifteen years ago, when he was a boy, Abram Van Winkle was so badly beaten Sunday when he met his childhood foe in Prospect Park Borough that he had to seek the aid of a physician. He caused the arrest of Heller De Hamer on a charge of assault and battery, and Abram Van Winkle, his brother, made a similar charge against Isaac De Hamer. The De Hamers were each admitted to bail Monday night by Recorder Baudstra.

The ducking incident was not forgotten when the De Hamers and Van Winkles emigrated to this country. When they chanced to meet Sunday, they engaged in a fierce battle, after a brief exchange of remarks.

THIEVES MAKE RICH HAUL.

Enter Heise Home and Get Valuable Jewelry.

The police in Elizabeth are looking for the thieves who entered the home of Louis Heise, 416 Clinton street, early Monday morning and looted the second story, getting away with $200 worth of jewelry. Peter Bickel, father of Mrs. Heise, was alone in the house at the time. He did not hear the thieves.

The front door of the house was forced, evidently with a blunt instrument. The contents of closets and bureau drawers were thrown promiscuously about the floor. The stolen articles include two watches, a gold chain and several rings.

Falling Block Killed Him.

Bridgeton, Dec. 22.—Edward E. McIntyre, superintendent of the Woodbury Glass Works, died Monday at his home in this city. A week ago Mr. McIntyre was walking along Chestnut street, Philadelphia, when a four-pound iron block fell from the fourth story of a building and crashed upon his head. Mr. McIntyre was taken to a hospital, and after being treated was sent to his home. Blood poisoning set in and death ensued. Mr. McIntyre was one of the best known glass men in South Jersey.

Want a Liberal Sunday.

Head Downward from Derrick.

Newton, Dec. 22.—It was learned here Monday that just as the last load of girders of the old railroad bridge at Baleville, which was torn down by Poolock & Son, of Pottstown, Pa., was being hoisted from their position, to be lowered in the scrap heap, Saturday, some workman made a mistake and pulled the rope governing the boom instead of the pulley. The load of iron fell with a crash to the car being loaded, narrowly missing several employes, who jumped. David Poolock, the junior member of the firm, who was in the rigging of the derrick, was caught in a loop in the rope by one leg and hung head downward, until he could be released.

Hurt When Car Struck Wagon.

Jersey City, Dec. 22.—A southbound Greenville line trolley car ran into the rear of the delivery wagon of E. R. Wessels, of 263 First street, Monday afternoon, knocking Michael Green, of 20 Erie street, and John Mahan, of 26 Oak street, from the wagon. Green and Mahan were taken to the City Hospital, where their injuries were said to be serious. Their scalps were cut and their skulls may be fractured. The motorman, James McGurr, of 94 Ocean avenue, was arrested.

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS OF PLAINFIELD:

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I have tried for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press was asked to aid in reaching the good fellow by publishing this suggestion and to receive your communication in order that you may be assured of good faith and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll od a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

The Daily Press has investigated the "good fellow" who wrote the above, has looked him in the eye and put its O. K. on the plan. The cold blooded blase reporter who saw him wrote: "He made me feel, personally, that it would be really worth while in satisfaction to carry a little happiness to some children who otherwise wouldn't get any on Christmas eve." "Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of from fifteen to twenty children a year in Plainfield. He said that last Christmas day he wished he had curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might nave had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through school teachers, investigators of various organizations who work in poverty stricken districts and others who come in contact with those whom we always have with us. Lists of worthy cases will be welcomed from such organizations as the Charity Organization Society, Salvation Army, King's Daughters, and churches of all demoninations. These lists should be verified and certified to by the officers of the organizations submitting them and should be arranged by wards and divisions of the city.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus" care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.———— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.

John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come in, good fellows.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Owners of the Steel Pier, Atlantic City, have asked for a reduction of $15,000 in its assessed valuation.

As the result of cutting his hand while husking corn, Charles Smith, of Newtown, Pa., a farmhand, died of lockjaw in St. Francis' Hospital, Trenton, Monday.

Twenty-five descendants Monday night assisted in the celebration of the eighty-fifth birthday of Mrs. Lucy Cordery, widow of Judge Enoch Cordery, of Absecon.

Howard Jamison, a laundry proprietor, at Vineland, was kicked by a horse and rendered unconscious for an hour Monday. Dr. Gray thinks he will recover, although three ribs are broken.

Captain Stille Hand, of Cape May, has been appointed harbor master by Commissioner of Inland Waterways Henry Schneider, and this includes jurisdiction over a portion of the inland waterway.

At the request of counsel for his wife, Dr. William G. Bailey's divorce suit against his wife, which had been set down to be heard in Camden on December 27, was Monday postponed until February 3.

William S. Carll, a leading business man of Bridgeton, had one of his legs amputated Monday. Last September Mr. Carll's foot was crushed in a runaway accident and the amputation became necessary to save his life.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Smith, of Holly Beach, the parents of Mayor Frank E. Smith, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Hildreth avenue, surrounded by their five sons and their families and many friends, Sunday.

An investigation of the fire that destroyed the hall of the Junior American Mechanics and the harness store of James Marshall, in Seaville, on Saturday, indicates that it was the work of incendiaries, who took that means to conceal a robbery.

Mrs. Susan Reynolds, of Thorofare, was badly burned Sunday while making a fire. She and her husband live by themselves, and both are beyond the three-score-and-ten mark, and the overseer of the poor took them to the county farm Monday.

The Camden police have been asked to locate Isaac H. Pidgon, sixty-eight years old, a produce dealer, of 115 North Ninth street, Camden, whose failure to return home on Saturday night so alarmed his family that his absence was reported to police headquarters.

Burlington City is in the anomalous position of supplying the citizens with water that looks like poorly diluted ink, while proceeding against a poor colored woman who has been selling water from her well to residents of the vicinity, not only for drinking, but for washing purposes.

One of the largest consignments of eels that has ever been carried over the West Jersey Railroad from South Jersey was shipped from Salem Monday by Charles R. Matlack. A baggage car was engaged by Mr. Matlack, and in it he packed fifteen tons of eels, all alive. They go to New York for the holiday trade.

William Johns, a negro, attempted to steal at 300-pound flywheel from a partly dismantled machine shop on the meadow side of Atlantic City. He managed to load his prize on a barrow, but gave out before he could reach a junk shop. Six big policemen were required to hoist the stolen wheel into a patrol wagon with Johns.

Pending disposition of a petition for divorce from her husband, Clarence Rapp, of Riverside, Mrs. Julia Rapp was Monday allowed $3 a week alimony and a counsel fee of $25 by Vice Chancellor Leaming in Camden. Mrs. Rapp claims that she was compelled to leave her husband because he violated his marriage vows. Rapp denies the charge.

City hall officials in Atlantic City who have been complaining of odors wafted through office windows for weeks discovered Monday a pen containing three pigs within fifty yards of the municipal building. The discovery was made by City Solicitor Wootton, whose office had been made almost untenable. Board of Health officials served notice on the owners to remove the hogs.

In a drunken brawl in the Dundee section of Passaic, Monday, John Kurlys stabbed his brother Frank, of 123 Passaic street, Passaic, on the head with a screwdriver and pliers, inflicting twelve wounds, which were attended by the doctors at the Passaic General Hospital. The assailant was arrested and comitted to jail. Later, when it was ascertained that his brother's injuries were not likely to prove fatal, the prisoner was released under $500 bail.

One of Triplets Dies.

Hackettstown, Dec. 22.—Leon Stiff, aged 25 years, one of triplets, died Monday at the home of his aunt, Mrs. William C. Merrell, in Washington street. He had been ill several months. He was unmarried. Besides Mrs. Merrell he leaves two other aunts, Mrs. Charles Bush, of Montclair, and Mrs. Theodore Menagh, of Orange, and an uncle, Charles E. Stiff, of Hackettstown. He also leaves twin brothers, Judson and Kenneth. Interment will be in Union cemetery tomorrow.

A LINEN PORTFOLIO.

Holland linen in almost any shade will work up into the most successful of covered portfolios, a delightful present for the artist, the photographer. And, indeed, who has not felt the need of just this sort of a case for sketches and prints, or even for unframed photographs and favorite pictures which accumulate?

A large square or oblong of good cardboard is covered with the linen; let us suppose it is Indian red in color. Against this is basted and overcast a facing of the same material.

The stitches are so close and fine they do not show, and they are thread, not silk, which is another reason for their being unnoticeable.

A second cover or lid of cardboard and linen is made in exact repetition of the first, and upon the edges of this there are three flaps sewn.

These flaps, which lap over the contents of the portfolio, are lined with less heavy material than the boards themselves. Cardboard is too bulky and frequently the flaps are merely interlined with crinoline, and, again, they are but two thicknesses of the linen with their edges turned towards each other and overcast.

The covers of the portfolio are held together by a hinge, which is made of a black grosgrain ribbon one inch wide, matching two strips of ribbon which pass round the case and tie it together.

Upon the front cover, up in one corner, a single black letter, the initial of the owner, should be stenciled with dye.

A most practical present, and as acceptable as useful.

A BABY GIFT.

A gift of boxes for baby. Every mother whose baby you want to remember will appreciate a set of tiny white pasteboard pin boxes, bound together with ribbon.

First get two, four or six small boxes, drawer-shaped, and piling them one upon another, tie them together with a three-inch blue or pink satin ribbon, its welltied bow finishing the top. This will leave the fronts of the drawers open to view, and over these is to be pasted (with boiled flour paste, not glue) just enough turned-in satin ribbon to cover their fronts. On each drawer is sewed a tiny bow of narrower blue satin ribbon to use as a handle.

Now, the decoration on the broad ribbon and on each drawer front is a spray of forget-me-nots, either painted on as a last touch or embroidered on with rococo ribbon just before the boxes are put together. Also there is a rich combination of gold-colored thread with light blue or yellow ribbon. Gold lace galloon has been used to bind round each edge of the wide satin ribbon after it has been bound round the boxes.

TO THE SHOPPER.

Shop early.
Don't be snappish.
Know your needs.
Others have trouble, too.
A roomy handbag is a necessity.
It is always best to have a list.
Small parcels should invariably be carried.
One must not resent sharing a saleswoman's attentions.
Only a person who decides quickly may expect exclusive attention.
One should avoid the C. O. D. process whenever possible.
In case of C. O. D. parcels invariably have right change ready.
Delaying deliverymen is unpardonable when their duties are so heavy.
One little annoyance or delay is small.

GIFTS.

Let them be suitable.
Let them express a thought.
It is not enough to expend "so much."
It is criminal to thoughtlessly give live animals.
No living creature should be given unless it is desired.
No living creature should be given unless the recipient will care for it.
Wearables should not be selected by fond relatives regardless of other items of the recipients' wardrobe.
In a word, it is "blessed to give," but it is much more blessed to give things that will confer real pleasure.

The Easiest Way.

A company of select colored artists were rendering a version of "Othello." The scene between the Moor and Desdemona had been reached, wherein Othello demands the handkerchief which he has given his wife as a wedding amulet.

"Desdemona," he cried, "fetch me dat han'kerchief!"

But the doomed lady only babbled of Cassio and her liege lord shouted again:

"I ast fo' de second time to git me dat han'kerchief!"

Still the fair one parried the issue with talk of Cassio, and the lordly Othello, now thoroughly incensed, bellowed:

"Woman, fo' de third and las' time I tell you to git me dat han'kerchief! Away!"

And as he was just about to open his mouth again, a big, leather-lunged patron in top gallery shouted down at him:

"Fo' de Lawd's sake, nigger, why doan' you wope yo' nose on yo' sleeve an let de show go on?"—Judge's Library.

BASIS FOR INDICTING CODINGTON, SAYS COURT

Supreme Court Justice Parker, in his charge to the grand jury at Somerville yesterday, took up the matter of Joel Codington, treasurer of Warren Township, charged with embezzling the funds of the township. The court laid this case before the last grand jury, which failed to indict Codington on the evidence before the court. Justice Parker, in addressing the present grand jury, reiterated his former statement that the evidence against Codington was the result of an investigation of the affairs of Warren Township, ordered by the court, and carried on by Hugh K. Gaston as special master.

The court stated that Gaston was one of the most highly respected, able and impartial members of the Somerset county bar, and the report he had laid before the court, after several months of investigation, warranted the indictment of Codington either for embezzlement, or misdemeanor, or malfeasance of office. Justice Parker warned the grand jury that it was not a petit jury, and that it had no right to try the case, but simply to decide whether there was sufficient evidence before the court to place Codington on trial.

CHILD ASTRAY, TELLS OF ODD EXPERIENCE.

Rahway, Dec. 22.—Hilda Banks, thirteen years old, claiming to be from Tennent, near Freehold, was found wandering along the railroad tracks near the Pennsylvania Railroad junction below Rahway Monday evening, cold, crying and hungry. Mrs. John Hart, living nearby, took her in and cared for her, reporting the case to Chief of Police Wright yesterday morning. To a reporter Hilda said:

"I have been visiting my brother, George Banks, in Brooklyn, since Sunday. He put me on the train Monday to send me home. The conductor told me I must change cars at Trenton. He kept my ticket. When we reached here the brakesman said I must change cars. I cannot read nor write.

"I thought this was Trenton. My father ran away six years ago, taking the silver and all our money. My mother is paralyzed on her left side. She looks for me home today."

The railroad men in the Junction section are investigating the affair. Hilda missed a flier by only a few feet Monday, as she was pulled from the tracks as she was running across them to meet Mrs. Hart.

A Case Worth Trying.

Mr. F. Philander Towersby, a most excellent citizen, though not noted for lavish prodigality, received recently a consignment of very rare Tokayer Ausbruch, says Harper's Weekly. He sent one bottle of the delicious wine to a justice of the Supreme Court, who happens to be one of the most eminent connoisseurs in America, and with the bottle sent a note asking his honor's opinion of the vintage.

Mr. Towersby receiver next day this reply:

"My Dear Sir—I beg to thank you for the confidence you repose in my judgment, as shown by asking for my opinion. But, inasmuch as I am a lawyer, many years of training and experience make it impossible for me to give an opinion on anything but a case."

Round Neck Theatre Frock.

The round neck will be seen often on the handsome theatre frock which the debutantes will wear, as it is a happy medium between the formality of the decollete evening frock and the convential high-necked gown. With these frocks the large picture hats are worn, in general, topped with plumes caught by a handsome buckle or trimmed with some of the exquisite blossoms which make of the milliner's shop an artificial conservatory of rare value. The crepe meteors, cashmere de sole and its allies, silk nets and chiffon, are all corraled for these theatre gowns, which are important additions to the wardrobe for theatre parties either with the previous dinner or the supper to follow are a favorite form of entertaining for the debutante.

Baked North Pole.

Bake a sponge cake in an oblong pan and when it is cool split it into two sheets with a sharp knife. Have a square of cylinder-shaped brick of ice cream, around which the sheets of cake are wrapped. The cake should protect beyond the brick of ice cream for an inch or so. Cover the cake with a thick meringue and pack the ends of the brick with it. Then put in a hot oven for a minute, or until the meringue is just tinged with golden brown. Brown on a board covered with white paper, and when browned slip onto a platter and serve.

One Sleeve Only.

Not the least startling of the many autumn drapery ideas is the one-sleeved coat of chiffon that slips over the left arm and hangs over the right shoulder with many graceful folds. Indeed, the wrap is extraordinary, and ranks for the moment as a novelty pure and simple. Perhaps, as the season progresses, it may find its place and be accepted with a dress of a certain type.

FUNERAL OF THE WIFE OF BISHOP SCARBOROUGH.

Trenton, Dec. 22.—The funeral services of Mrs. Catherine Scarborough, wife of Bishop John Scarborough, of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, were conducted yesterday afternoon in Christ Episcopal church. Rev. Robert W. Trenbath, rector of the church, was in charge of the services. He was assisted by Bishop Edwin S. Lines, of Newark; Bishop Frederick J. Kinsman, of Delaware; Dean Alfred B. Baker, of Princeton, and Dean Charles M. Perkins, of Vineland.

The full vested choir of the church chanted the Episcopal burial chant and sang Mrs. Scarborough's favorite hymns, "Ye Saints, Their Conflict Past," "Abide with Me" and "The Strife Is O'er, the Battle Won." Interment, which was private, was made in Riverview cemetery.

Not a "Good Mixer."

Atlantic City, Dec. 22.—John T. Irving, of Elwood, who is to retire from the Atlantic County Board of Freeholders after twenty-two years of continuous service, issued an open letter yesterday announcing that he voluntarily surrendered his seat because he was "disinclined to mix with the variety of politics now prevailing in the body." "I feel sure," the letter asserts, "that the township would have returned me indefinitely if I had been willing toserve." Mr. Irving will be succeeded by John Carver, a justice of the peace, who made a small fortune out of fees in automobile speeding cases.

Nonogenarian's Long Tramp.

Camden, Dec. 22.—Although ninety years old, Gottlob Misel walked from Medford to Camden, a distance of eighteen miles, to appear before the grand jury Monday as a witness against a man whom he accused of opening a letter and extracting twenty cents. The nonegenarian started alone 3 o'clock in the morning, reaching the courthouse before noon. In walking down the stairs he collapsed. Then the attaches took up a collection, permitting the old man to return by train and have something for Christmas besides.

Portrait Painter Sent to Prison.

New Brunswick, Dec. 22.—Julius Fureszcy, the portrait painter and wooer of Sophie Toth and Julia Barkus, was sentenced to a year in State prison yesterday by Judge Lyon. He had been convicted of obtaining $75 from Miss Toth under false pretenses. He had served three months in jail already and did not expect such a Christmas present. Julius told the girl he loved her and wanted cash to start in business. She gave him her hard earned savings.

Bogus Bill Passing Alleged.

Jersey City, Dec. 22.—Mrs. Rosie Elnoir, of 401 First street, presented a five dollar bill in exchange for a purchase of dry goods in a local store Monday and was arrested, charged with passing counterfeit money. She was released in $1,000 bail. Mrs. Elnoir is the second woman arrested on a charge of passing bad bills here since Sunday. The police suspect that some one has been unloading a stock of bogus money in the "Little Italy" section.

Miss Margaret McWilliam, of Somerville, a cousin of the bride; Miss Violet Hayn s, of Elizabeth; Miss Theora Williamson, of Clover Hill; Miss Alice Hoffman and Miss Mary Griggs, of Somerville, attended the bride. The best man was S. Judson Galpin, of Somerville. The ushers were Roy Seel, of Larchmont; Augustus Thomas, Joseph V. Wodruff and Frederick Brown, of Somerville.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Gilbert S. Cook, at Somerville, where two hundred guests were entertained. The couple left for a honeymoon trip and on their return will live in New York city, where the bridegroom is engaged in business.

Bayonne Citizens Balked.

Jersey City, Dec. 22.—Supreme Court Justice Swayze Monday denied the writ of certiorari asked for by a number of citiz ns of Bayonne to restrain the Mayor and Council from paying the claims of Contractor M. T. S. Critchfield for the paving of Broadway. The decision holds that the remedy, if there is any, must be sought in Chancery and not in a court of law. The claims amount to more than $232,000, of which over $66,000 is in excess of the original bid for the work.

Catholic Members Object.

Jersey City, Dec. 22.—The annual banquet of the Jersey City Board of Trade will be held Friday, January 14, at the Jersey City Club. The Catholic members of the board are objecting because the committee selected Friday for a banquet. They point out that they cannot eat fresh meat and the trade board may have to do what the Hudson County Bank Association did two years ago, when it made a similar break—serve a purely fish dinner to its Catholic guests.

"He hadn't any notion of dyin', this last bronichal attackt he had," said Captain Collam, sadly. "But when Jane told him she thought likely he'd only last a week, and she knew he couldn't be spared through the month, why, he—"

The four old captains shook their heads.

"He wa'n't the kind of man that could up an' say he cal'lated to live a spell longer when he knew what was expected of him," said Captain Lowe, mournfully. "He jest—stepped out, same as he always had."

Silent Departure.

Mrs. Smith was engaging a new servant and sat facing the latest applicant. "I hope," said she, "that you had no angry words with your last mistress before leaving."

"Oh, dear, no, mum; none whatever," was the reply, with a toss of her head. "While she was having her bath I just locked the bathroom door, took all my things and went away as quiet as possible."—Argonaut.

CHAPTER XIII.

ENDEAVORING to appear calm, Crawford greeted his latest caller with a civil—

"Good evening, Mrs. O'Brien."

"Good evenin', Mister Crawford," she answered.

Timid, embarrassed and in evident distress, she stood near the door.

"Come in. Won't you take a seat?" he asked.

Mrs. O'Brien seated herself diffidently on the edge of the chair nearest to her. The assurance that the ancient Paisley shawl and black silk dress had imparted to her had entirely abandoned her.

"Thank you, sor. Oi hope ye'll pardon the intrusion," she said, her voice quavering.

"Intrusion! Oh, it's no intrusion, I assure you," he said encouragingly. He felt that this time his task of getting rid of his caller would be an easy one.

"Oi'm in great trouble, Mister Crawford," she informed him.

"Yes?" he answered interrogatively.

"Oi've had a tirrible froight. I can't foind trace av me girls. We came up from Maple Grove intindin' to surproise them, an' they ain't there."

"Dear me! How's that, I wonder!"

"Oi doan't know, an' Oi doan't know phwat to do."

"Can I be of any assistance to you?"

"Yis. That is, Oi've somethin' to ask ye, Mister Crawford. Promise ye won't take offinse at an old woman, sor."

"Of course I'll not take offense. Go ahead."

He seated himself to listen.

"Do yez know ought of me Nora?"

Crawford looked puzzled.

"I don't understand," he said.

"Mallory was here jist now, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"Yez was here whin O'Brien tilliphoned?"

"Yes. He said you didn't recognize your daughters on the stage."

"Oi did not, an' for a good reason. They wasn't there. Oi was so skeered Oi couldn't wait for Danny, so O'Brien an' me found our way to the back door of the theater, thinkin' they might be in their dressin' rooms."

"And weren't they?"

"The man there wouldn't let us in, but Oi raised sich a shindy that they had to take notice av us. Somebody sent down an illigant lady, a Miss Simpson. She said they didn't know where Patsy was, but that maybe Nora had gone to—to Crawford's. She give me the address. First we wint to the place where they live. There was no one there. Thin O'Brien was for comin' here with me, but he's hasty, an' Oi thought he moight offend you, so Oi told him to wait at the theater for Danny."

"Well," said Crawford, rising to signify that the interview was at an end, "I'm sorry I am unable to give you any assistance, but if you can think of any way in which I can be of service to you, why, I shall be very glad to do what I can, Mrs. O'Brien. Good evening."

The old woman, who had also risen, hesitated.

"How comes my Nora's name to be linked with yours?" she questioned falteringly.

"Oh, that's merely chorus girls' gossip. I've tried to be nice to both of your daughters because of my friendship to you and O'Brien, and I suppose that set the others talking. You musn't take any notice of such things."

"'Tis meant koindly, sir, Oi'm sure, but it has done harm, for phwat that young lady told me made me ashamed for me darlin'. She said—she said, oh, Mister Crawford—she said, 'She's probably gone off to a spree supper with her lover an' is wurrukin' him for tips or diamonds.'"

The old woman reddened with shame and confusion.

Crawford's worst suspicions of Nora were confirmed beyond question by this remark of the Simpson woman.

"I'm very sorry, Mrs. O'Brien," he said, reddening also, but with annoyance. "I meant no harm, and it's a pretty tough thing when a gentleman can't even be polite to a girl without such things being said."

"It is, indade," she agreed. "An' it's relieved Oi am to foind she isn't here. She an' Patsy's off somewhere together most loikely."

"Quite probably," he agreed. "I think you said they didn't expect you?"

"Yis. We wanted to surproise thim. Danny sent in word at the theater, but Oi misdoubt they got it. Oi'll just be goin' along. Thank ye, Mister Crawford, for yir koindness."

He shook hands with her and was escorting her out when the valet appeared and announced that Mallory was at the door. Even as he spoke the trainer brushed past Rogers and entered the room. There was wrath in his eye and an ugly expression of determination on his face.

"I followed you, mother," he explained, addressing Mrs. O'Brien in loud tones. "O'Brien told me you'd come here to fetch Nora."

"She's not here, Danny, praise the Lord," the old woman announced.

"THAT'S WHAT I'VE PAID TO SAVE MY LITTLE SISTER FROM YOU, YOU BEAST!"

"I'm not so sure of that," said Mallory.

"Phwat d'ye mean, Danny?" she asked.

"Yes. I'd like to know what you mean by such an intimation," said Crawford, with rising choler. He did not like his partner's attitude at all.

"Miss Simpson was very positive that Nora had come to see you, and she said things about your carryin' on with her that, if I thought was true I'd"—

"You'd what? Miss Simpson had no right to make any such assertions, and if she was positive that the girl had come here, I'm just as positive that she has not."

This was said with such emphasis and apparent sincerity that Mallory cooled down, but he was not satisfied.

"Then who was the woman in that room when I was here before?" he demanded.

Crawford was astounded. How could Mallory have known that anybody was in there?

"What woman?" he asked.

"The woman you hid when I was announced—the woman who, thinkin' I was gone, came out of that room while you were at the telephone—the woman who slunk back again when she saw I was still here. I saw her hand closin' the door."

"Are yez deceivin' me, Mister Crawford?" demanded Mrs. O'Brien pitifully. "For the love av God don't tell me me Nora's there!"

"I have already told you, Mrs. O'Brien, that I know nothing about your daughter—that Nora's not here. Mr. Mallory's talking nonsense," Crawford assured her. "Besides, if I did have a lady in there, it's none of his business."

"Sure, Danny, Mister Crawford's given you his wurrud," she said, once more relieved. "Come away, bhoy."

Mallory, however, was a man who when once aroused could not be easily appeased and hesitated at nothing. What the Simpson woman had told him had stirred him to fierce anger, and he was determined to get at the truth regardless of consequences. He argued that if such things were said there must be some cause. There was no smoke without fire.

"I'll come away when I've had a look through that other room," he said doggedly.

"You'll not look through that room or any other," replied Crawford, ugly in turn. "And you'll oblige me by getting out of this house altogether, and at once."

"Yes, come away, Danny," pleaded Mrs. O'Brien.

"You can't fool me. I know what I seen, an' I'm goin' to find out if the owner of that hand's Nora if she's still there," insisted Mallory.

He walked toward the door, but Crawford intercepted him. The struggle that ensued was a brief one, briefer than the time required to recount it. Mallory flung Crawford aside and pulled open the door. Patsy had been listening with bated breath, her hand grasping the handle. His brusque, violent action jerked her into the room as the door flew outward.

Unable to credit his senses, the trainer staggered from her, white as a sheet.

Patsy hurled the door back before any one could look into the room and stood in front of it, facing him.

For a moment no one spoke, Mallory and Mrs. O'Brien trying to comprehend it. Mallory was the first to speak.

"There's the owner of the hand," he said brokenly, "and when I seen it the arm was bare!"

Mrs. O'Brien sank into a chair.

"You that Oi thought was as good as gold!" she moaned.

"I'm not what you both think," said Patsy quietly.

"Not what we think!" retorted Mallory, becoming stern. "Then what brings you here in the night to this man's room? Answer me. What brings you here?"

She returned his gaze calmly.

"I came to see Mr. Crawford on a matter of business," she told him.

The mother rose, crushed with shame and sorrow.

"Come away with us, girl," she said.

"I can't," answered Patsy.

"You can't. Why not?" Mallory demanded.

"You had better go," Crawford advised her.

Her mother urged her again:

"Come, Patsy, yir father may follow us here at anny moment."

"Yes, go, it will be better. I don't want a scene with O'Brien," declared Crawford.

Mallory, who had moved to the passage door, turned to say to him:

"O'Brien was right; he never trusted you, you blackguard—destroyin' the daughter of the man that made you welcome in his home, deceivin' him, deceivin' me that believed in you, deceivin' her, bringin' shame on her. By God, I'll"—

He rushed at Crawford. Patsy interposed.

"Don't quarrel, Dan," she implored. "I've had enough to bear. I don't want to separate you two. Think what you'll lose."

"Lose?" replied Mallory, with bitter rage. "I've lost everything losin' you. We're down an' out from now, Crawford, down an' out. You understand?"

"As you please," answered Crawford coolly. "And now that our affairs are in a measure settled"—

"Settled! We've just begun."

Mallory glared at him and set his teeth grimly.

"No, no, Dan," pleaded Patsy. "I know everything's dead against me, but you don't know—you don't know"—

"We know you've brought disgrace on me an' yir old father an' Nora," sobbed her mother. "Where is she? Phwat have ye done with me baby, you that was to watch over her?"

"I've taken care of her, all right," replied Patsy humbly.

Mallory laughed a harsh, unpleasant laugh.

"Yes, you have—by passin' her off to them girls at the theater as this man's mistress," he said.

"Who told you that?" she questioned sharply.

"A Miss Simpson. Didn't you lead 'em to think that Nora was comin' to his rooms when it was yourself? Where is she?"

"I don't know where she is—we've quarreled," she replied, passing her hand wearily over her forehead.

"About this man most likely?" sneered Mallory.

"Yes, about this man," she admitted.

Her mother looked at her with scornful anger.

"Come," she said. "It'll do no good to stay."

"Mrs. O'Brien's right," assented Crawford, whose patience was fast being strained to the breaking point. "Mallory, I advise you to go. I've had a few hard things said to me tonight, and I'm not in the humor for any more."

"You'll have a few hard things done to you before I get through with you," retorted Mallory, glaring at him.

Patsy pleaded with him again.

"Don't! Please go," she urged. "I can explain, but not now. You've got to trust me, that's all."

"I did trust you—I trusted him—an' you've both made a fool of me."

"I can make it all right with you. Take mom away now."

He turned on her savagely.

"You can make it all right with me, can you?" he cried. "I suppose you thought when you got through with him an' he cast you off you'd fall back on me, the patient, good natured fool down in the country that didn't know nothin', that wasn't wise to the kind of man he's turned out to be, nor to the sort you've proved yourself to be. He's one of the rich men you professed to be so willin' to give up for me. Well, you needn't. If money counts for more than love, you're welcome to it and to him."

The injustice of her treatment, Dan's readiness to believe ill of her without waiting to give her a chance to have a heart to heart explanation with him, stung poor Patsy to the quick.

"Love!" she cried scornfully. "A lot you know about it. Love is trust, an' you're the man I banked on, an' the first minute I puts you to the test you falls down hard. If you think I'm bad you can think it. I'm through with you."

Patsy's outburst not only carried no conviction to her fiance; it aroused the anger and resentment of Mrs. O'Brien, in whose mind there was no doubt of her daughter's guilt.

"Have ye no shame—to stand there an' brazen it out before the man that loved yez?" she said hotly. "Let us be goin', Danny. L'ave her father to settle with this man."

But Mallory was beginning to understand what it all meant to him, what he had lost, the significance of the foundering of his hopes. The pain and misery of the heart wrenching his separation from Patsy would mean were already beginning to make themselves felt. All his rage and sorrow, all his humiliation, all his jealous hate, surged within him, prompting him to kill the man who had blasted his life.

"No!" he answered. "D'you think he's goin' to wreck her life an' wreck all my hopes an' go scot free? No—he's goin' to answer to me—here—now."

Crawford on his part was beside himself with exasperation. He had had more than enough of the complicated mess his intrigue with Nora had stirred up. He was not lacking in physical courage and had no fear of Mallory, but he was afraid of the notoriety and ridicule a "row" of this kind would bring upon him if it attracted outside attention, as a scuffle inevitably would do.

"I'm not going to fight with you," he said angrily. "I'm not going to have my name mixed up in a dirty scandal with a lot of race track hangers on and chorus girls. I've had enough of this. I've had enough of the lot of you. You'll leave my house and at once, all of you—every last one of you."

He moved toward Patsy with the intention of driving Nora from the bedroom and bundling the whole family out.

Patsy divined his purpose.

"No, don't do that," she whispered quickly and despairingly, seizing his arm. "Not after all I've done. There won't be any scandal; there won't be any fight. I'll get rid of them. Leave it to me."

Crawford could not but respect her grit and devotion. He turned from the door, and Patsy advanced toward Mallory.

BESS MISSED MUCH

GREAT QUEEN HAD FEW LUXURIES OR COMFORTS.

In Her Day There Were No Chimneys, Wire Screens, Elevators, or Any of the Necessaries of the Present Day.

Our secretary of agriculture, Hon. James Wilson, recently declared: "The average laborer is now living better than did Queen Elizabeth in her time."

In many respects, yes. We have acquired a great many comforts that the good Bess never dreamed of. She had many palaces, but not one of them was fit for the modern family of moderate income to inhabit. They had big rooms and rugs, tapestries and the like, but in winter the fire places smoked and in summer flies and other pests abounded. There were no heating apparatus, no wire screens, no toilet apartments, no elevators. When the head of the state wished to take a bath a big tub was hauled in and in this she abluted.

When she set out on a voyage the vehicle, finest of its kind, was a big, springless, heavy, awkward, jolting contraption, without speed or any of the comforts. When she rode it was on a crude old forerunner of a saddle or on the pillion behind her lord treasurer or some other accommodating statesman. Shoes in those days were uncomfortable and poorly made. The postal service was poorly organized, and the telegraph and telephone were not invented. Cooking was done on a gross scale. Whole animals were roasted on spits, and great hunks were carved or torn off and set before royalty in that shape as before callers.

There was no running water in the homes, and the old oaken bucket was the medium through which thirst was quenched.

They had a sort of ale or malmsey which was good enough for the times, but as Milwaukee had not then become famous and Kentucky was an unexplored region, the very best ever never touched her royal lips nor lifted up her queenly spirits.

She missed a great deal. But withal she seems to have enjoyed life in her free and easy way. She had fawning courtiers and lovers and brilliant society. When times were dull she would give block parties, taking her friends over to the tower to witness the official elision of some former favorite's head.

There were no airships to distract her attention from her queenly duties. There were no automobiles to force her to gather up her right royal petticoats and scamper scared half to death across the streets. There were no trolley cars with straps upon which she was forced to hold when returning tired from a shopping trip. There were no trusts to fix at their sweet will the prices she must pay for what she would eat or wear. She missed the breakfast-food age. She did not have to dodge any camera fiends whenever she went out for a constitutional, nor avoid moving picture takers when on her royal trips through her dominions. There were no such things in those days as appendicitis and pellagra. The awful bacilli and microbes which the scientists find nowadays in everything, from drinking mugs to kisses, had not come to warn us of death's ceaseless lurkings.

Taken all in all, while admitting that the well-paid workingman of today has very many comforts, we must insist that Queen Elizabeth had much to be thankful for and missed some things for which she should have been thankful had she only known.

Homesick for Tobacco.

"And to you I bequeath the dog," said a New York man who was going to London to live.

The family that had been commissioned to take care of the dog liked the dog, but the dog did not like them. By and by his dissatisfaction became so pronounced that the family passed him along to another friend of the expatriate. The second family was not so fond of the dog as the first family had been, but the dog did not mind their lack of affection. Apparently he had struck a "homey" atmosphere that pleased him, so he settled down contentedly. One day the story of that dog's eccentricities was related to a man who knows all about dogs. The second family wondered why the dog had evinced such an unwelcome partiality for them.

"It isn't the people in this house that attract the pup," said the dog expert. "It's the tobacco smoke. His former master was an habitual smoker. The man, his clothes, his rooms, everything about him, smelled like one big cigar. He liked it. Nobody smoked in that house where he first lived. He missed the scent of tobacco, and wasn't satisfied till he got to another place where the air is blue with smoke."

Two Stages of Married Life.

"I have reached the 'wifeless breakfast' stage of our married life," recently remarked a husband. It was said as a joke, but the wife was quick to take up with the remark, and she asked the husband: "And do you know why, dear?"

"No," answered the husband laughingly.

"Because I first reached the 'newspaper at the breakfast-table' stage of our married life."

"Well said, dear," said the husband smilingly, and then he added seriously: "And justly, too."

And the wife-and-husband breakfasts were resumed. But the newspaper is now read on the trolley car!

TO LAY CARPET SMOOTHLY

Simple Apparatus Which Very Soon Will Be Considered Indispensable to Every Household.

The secret of the success achieved by the professional in laying a carpet consists chiefly of the use of implements which have not heretofore been altogether available for use by the amateur. This is not so any longer, for a stretcher and tackholder and carpet stretcher, which functions are combined in a single implement of such simple and inexpensive construction that it will soon take its place among the household implements which are regarded as essential.

This apparatus provides a third hand, which holds a tack in the right place for driving, while the carpet is stretched on the floor. It also obviates all danger of crushing the fingers with the hammer in the effort to drive the nail.

FOR HAM AND STEAK ROLL

Luncheon Dish That May Furnish New Idea to Some of the Readers of This Column.

One and a half pounds of bacon, one and a half pounds of steak, half a pound of bread crumbs, two eggs, salt, pepper, paprika and one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Have the bread crumbs finely made and pass them through a wire sieve.

Chop the bacon and steak and mix them with the bread crumbs and seasonings. This is best done with the hands. Beat up the eggs well and mix them with the dry ingredients, adding the Worcestershire sauce.

Have a pudding cloth wrung out of hot water and sprinkle it with flour. When the roll is tightly squeezed into shape, tie it up in the pudding cloth like a roly poly. Plunge into a saucepan full of boiling water and boil for two and a half hours. Let it cool in the water, take off the cloth, place it on a platter with a heavy weight on the top to press firmly together. This can be cut into thin slices.

Chicken or veal croquettes wrapped separately in paraffin paper will be found a good addition to the menu.

Hot Tamales.

The Mexican recipe for making hot tamales is to cook one of two chickens until tender. Remove all meat from the bone, shred it in the chopping machine and add to it the liquor in which the chicken has been cooked. This is seasoned with any desired condiments, especially red pepper, and thickened with cornmeal. The rolls are about the size of link sausage and they are wrapped in the inner husks of green corn. Tie the husks with strings at each end to secure them and boil them for three hours. It is best to taste the preparation before adding meal to note whether it is rich or needs more seasoning, allowing for the meal to be added, which will take up the sharp flavor.

Overcooked Food.

Much good, wholesome food is practically wasted by being overcooked. Overcooking is the principal objection to canned meats, because food that is otherwise excellent in quality has been spoiled in the process of cooking, and has, therefore, become practically unfit for use. Meat must be cooked to a certain point, but once that point is reached further cooking is downright waste of material, both as regards quality and quantity. Good food is often spoiled by too rapid cooking. Meat which is allowed to boil after the preliminary five minutes becomes hard, tough and tasteless, and is almost indigestible, owing to the hardening of the albumen all through the meat.

A Hint; Small, But Important.

Have you, by any chance leather chairs? And do your clothes, and the clothes of your friends, stick to them in damp weather? Well-made, expensive chairs should not do this, as it means that the varnishing has been badly done, but they occasionally do, and the cheaper variety are very likely to stick in this way. To prevent this sponge with a mixture of ether and alcohol. Follow this by wiping off with a clean flannel dampened with pure chloroform.

Coffee Cookies.

One cup each of molasses, sugar and very strong coffee, half cup melted lard, two teaspoons soda dissolved in the coffee, two teaspoons cinnamon, and, if you like, a cup of chopped raisins. Flour enough for a moderately soft dough, and roll them quite thick.

Use for Cold Cream Jars.

Small cold cream jars and the like, if scalded make excellent containers for jelly which at some time or other you will desire to place in a lunch basket.

CASE AFTER CASE.

Plenty More Like This in Plainfield.

Scores of Plainfield people can tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Many a happy citizen makes a public statement of his experience. Here is a case of it. What better proof of merit can be had than such endorsement?

Robert Love, 44 Duer street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For eight or nine years I was a victim of kidney complaint. Every cold I contracted settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. Any heavy lifting or much standing gave me additional pain. In the morning upon arising, my back was very lame and this did not disappear until I exercised for some time. I doctored and used several so-called kidney cures, but it was only a waste of money. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the newspaper, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. When I had taken about half the contents of the box my condition was greatly improved and before long the pain left me entirely. I will always stand ready to speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 26, 1909.

The great interest manifested by practically all Christians in the subject of missions today is a strong intimation that the Christian's responsibility toward the un-Christianized parts of the world is fully realized. There was a time when such responsibility or obligation to missions greatly needed to be emphasized, but today this need is not so great. Yet there are still many who do not feel any such responsibility and need to have it pressed home to their hearts. Nor is it impossible for those who are already interested in the world's salvation to become more interested by considering their responsibility to home and foreign missions. May this study, therefore, arouse interest where there is none and increase the interest to the highest possible extent where it already exists. The salvation of the world is the supreme work of the Christian church, and therefore no Christian can become too much interested in the subject of missions.

1. Christ's command places a responsibility upon us in relation to home and foreign missions. We have given ourselves to Christ. We have placed our lives under His control. As His disciples we have promised to obey His commands. One of these, and His dying command at that, is that we shall "go, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," or, as Mark records it, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Upon every Christian rests the obligation of obeying Christ's commands, and He will hold us responsible for any failure to do so. This applies to missions as well as to any other Christian duty. We may not be able to go personally and thus literally obey this command, as the first disciples did, but we can obey it in spirit and thus fulfill the responsibility that it places upon us by giving of our money to send others. If we do this freely and cheerfully and to the extent of our ability we will discharge our responsibility to missions, both home and foreign.

2. The opportunity to do something for home and foreign missions places a responsibility upon us to do so. We all have some opportunities to engage in the work, and opportunity always brings responsibility. The world today is open to missions. Were the doors of heathendom closed to missionaries we should have no responsibility except to try to open them. But today they are all wide open. Moreover, we have the gospel and the opportunity to take it or send it. The church is calling for missionaries. It is constantly appealing for offerings for the support of missions. No one can say, "I had no chance, no opportunity to be sent or to assist in sending others to mission fields." The opposite is the truth. There are constant opportunities, and every one of them places a moral obligation upon us. These facts led Paul to say, "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise, so as much as in me is I am willing to preach the gospel." The same debt for the same reason rests upon us.

3. The promise of Christ emphasizes our missionary responsibility. "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." This promise accompanies His great missionary command. Having it, we cannot shirk our duty on the ground that we may not succeed. His presence assures success and should greatly encourage us to meet our every obligation to home and foreign missions.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. ii, 1-7; Nah. i, 15; Ps. lxxii; Mark xvi, 15; Acts i, 1-8; xiii, 1-3; Rom. i, 14-17; x, 12-15; Jon. i, 1-3; iii, 1-4; Rom. ix, 1-5.

A Hearty Appreciation.

Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage, D. D., pays the following tribute to Christian Endeavor:

"I think Christian Endeavor is one of the greatest movements for evangelization in the world. It has done more to break down sectarian bigotry than any other thing since the days of Martin Luther. It has been the golden link that has bound denomination to denomination, and it has taught one great fact—the cardinal doctrine of the Bible—salvation through the atonement of the cross. The next great fact about Christian Endeavor is that it has harnessed the young people of our churches to work. The old idea of church life was like that of the United States senate—you were not supposed to speak until you had been there a long time, and so young people were supposed to say nothing in public meetings. The result was that nine-tenths of the young people kept their mouths shut, so that only a very few took part in meetings or gave testimony or carried any message of love. Now Christian Endeavor has changed all that, and the young people have their meetings and, while helping others, are helping themselves."

Endeavor Gems.

The love that is not lived soon dies.

The great chances never come by chance.

He cannot be a saint who makes the world sour.

Seeing the purpose of pain robs it of its power to hurt.

They who have time to burn never light the world on the right road.

There is always a tendency to mistake the appendix of religion for its heart.

CHRISTMAS CELEBRATIONS IN THE SCHOOLS MORE ELABORATE THIS YEAR THAN EVER

In both the public and private schools, the Christmas festival is being observed. At the city and borough schools the exercises were held this morning.

The Christmas exercises were held at the Plainfield High School at 11:30 this morning. The auditorium was crowded with former graduates, who are home from various colleges, and parents of the pupils. The exercises opened with a song by the school entitled "Bethlehem." This was followed by two other songs entitled "Gabriel" and "The Song of the Angels."

The following were presented with their insignias which they had won in athletics: Jack Ricketts, John Thompson, James Nash, Sidney Karr and James Mauger. The following received medals for winning places in the track meet: Russell Miller, Ernest VanZandt, Nelson Ramsey, Jack Todd, Tom Ricketts, Horace Earle, Andrew McDonnough, Howard Runyon, Clifford Vail, and Jack Riffert.

As is the custom every year the school was presented with a gift by the pupils. Miss Ouida Hetfield presented a set of books and Roy Titsworth received them. Another gift was a panoramic view of Cornell Campus presented by the P. H. S. Alumni at Cornell. The school next sung a song entitled "The First Christmas," the song being followed by an address by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring in which he explained the true Christmas spirit as it should be. Following his address the school sang "Ring Out Wild Bells.'"

But the real surprise of the morning was to come. As soon as the song was over, the curtains went back disclosing the interior of a hospital with doctors and nurses standing around and singing a class song to the tune of "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay." When this was over the doctors and Nurses proceeded to give the "Sick" Juniors their medicine, in the form of roasts. Jack Riffert played the part of the head doctor and made quite a hit with the nurses and audience. After a half hour of sidesplitting fun the seniors ended up by singing another class song to the tune of "My Wife's Gone to the Country," as the curtain closed on them.

At the close of the exercises the juniors gave the seniors a feast in the "gym." Miss Johnstone was toastmaster and some very clever toasts and speeches were heard. While they were busy eating, the freshmen and sophomores danced in the auditorium. At the close of the feed in the "gym," the juniors and seniors enjoyed themselves in the auditorium dancing until late in the afternoon.

Pupils of the Washington School observed Christmas by appropriate exercises this morning. The program included the rendition of Yuletide songs, recitations and dialogues, all of which were exceedingly well rendered.

The feature numbers included a recitation, "Wanted a Christmas Tree," by Grace Mercier; song, a lullaby by Frieda Mowen, Erma Mowen, Elsie Grant, Ruth Carlson, Katie Carkhuff, Sadie Sachar, Lerita Skinner, Bessie Schrager, Yetta Tenpin, Dorothy Wilkins; recitation, "Christmas Gifts," by Charles Saunders; solo and chorus, "The Angles' Song," Elnora Green.

Scarf Drill—Marion Lynn, Mae Heideloff, Grace Brown, Florence Taylor, Barbara Schlick, Madeline Pennington, Pauline Nathanson, Adlaide Nathanson, Ethel Rosenson, Edith Jeffrey; song, "The Christmas Star is Shining," Ethel Green.

Playlet, "The Real Santa Claus," United States, Marion Lynn, Clarence Skiff; England, Ethel Rosenson, Charles Corbin; Germany, Helen McAfee, Harry Coffee; Italy, Margaret Rice, David Goldberg; Holland, Esther Loizeaux, David Berse; Norway, Harriet Higgins, Thomas Mendell; Denmark, Lois Loizeaux, Albert Coffee.

Playlet, "The Real Santa Claus"—Chester Wagner, Lillian Vardon, Henry Harmmon, Harry Coffee, John Cose, A. Cullinan, Edith Mundy, Helen Weed, Louise Reed.

The season's most loved and lovable saint must have looked on with approval at the distinguished array of young talent who sang his praises in the Bryant School last night before their happy parents and friends. Little Paul Pope, "The Candy Man," made a distinct hit both by his singing and acting of the part and that dainty little miss, Mildred Clark, captivated everyone by her clever impersonation of Millie Mistletoe. This does not mean that Lucy West and Hazel Todd did not do well, for they did.

Happykin, the "God of Happiness" showed plainly that his prerogative of making people happy is sometimes accomplished under very difficult circumstances, in fact almost smothering conditions, but Willie Chamberlain was equal to every occasion.

All the choruses of the catchy music were well sung and no little of the praise for the good work was due to Miss Whitton's fine accompaniment at the piano. Taken as a whole the children did exceedingly well and taught a lesson which one should not forget. You can't buy happiness. It is obtained only by making others happy.

The school assembly hall was filled and to show their appreciation of the children's plendid interpretation of the motive of the cantata the audience wa moved to frequent applause. The principals in the cast all did well.

Several celebrations of an appropriate character marked the advent of Christmastide in the borough schools today and last night. Today the festal occasion was observed by exercises in the Somerset street school while last night the senior class made merry over a Christmas tree with a dance in Debele Hall as a climax to the festivities.

Pupils of the High School and grammar grades confined their observance of the holiday this morning to listening to an address by the Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard, pastor of Hope chapel. The exercises were also embellished by the rendition of Christmas songs by the pupils.

The primary grades also held their exercises this morning. In addition to the rendition of a Yuletide musical program recitations were given by Florence Douglass, Albert Van Denburgh, Ida Richardson, Thelma Dawson, Frank Terry, Charlotte Cox, Lester Woodruff, Ubertus Rickert. A playlet was also cleverly given by pupils of the third and Fourth B grades.

The members of the senior class had a jolly time at their celebration last night. A feature which afforded much fun was the presentation of gifts to the teachers and members from a Christmas tree by two Kris Kringles, in the persons of Harry Smith and Fred Becker. Richard McDonald, janitor of the school, was not forgotten, and he was the recipient of a handsome umbrella, being a gift from the members of the tennis club.

A play entitled "The Model Wife," was also cleverly presented by members of the class. In the cast were the Misses Marjory Hart, Edith Schenck, Helen George, Dorothy Randall, Ruth Weinberger, Henrietta Winn and Gertrude Englehart, Harry Smith, Fred Becker and Leon Zeglio. Miss Clara Smith played several selections on the piano.

During the exercises Superintendent H. C. Krebs, in behalf of the athletic association, presented monograms to the members of the 1909 football eleven and to the members of the 1908 girls' basketball team.

Following the entertainment a dance was held at Debele Hall, which was largely attended by pupils of the high school and grammar grades, members of the faculty and the alumni.

Irving school pupils gave an elaborate entertainment in observance of Christmas, last night. The chapel was filled with pupils and their parents and the program consisting of songs, recitations and dialogues were hugely enjoyed.

A special feature of the celebration was the presentation of a play, "Santa Claus' Visit of Investigation," which was cleverly portrayed by John Nicholson, James Compton, Vera Flynn, Jessica Mallery, Mabel Haring, Grecian Peterson and Robert Lee. Arthur Force was stage manager.

The address of welcome was made by Albert Martin. A recitation was given by Beatrice Overbaugh and Anna Gray rendered a vocal solo, "Little Snowflakes." Albert Rowe was violin accompanist.

To Inspect Y. M. C. A.'s.

C. William Bingeman, superintendent of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., left yesterday for his home at Buffalo, where he will spend his holiday vacation. En route back to Plainfield Mr. Bingeman will visit a number of Y. M. C. A.'s in the large cities of New York State to inspect the working of boys' departments.

Schenck Not After the Job.

John Schenck, who has been mentioned as being a possible successor to Fire Chief Howard Woolston, of the borough, informed The Daily Press today that he is not a candidate for the position.

MISS EDITH MELLICK INTRODUCED IN SOCIETY

Miss Edith Mellick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, was formally introduced to society at a reception given at the home on East Seventh street, last night. The invitations were confined almost exclusively to the younger society set and intimate friends of the young woman.

The debutante was showered with gifts of flowers. Those receiving with Miss Mellick and her mother were Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, Miss Margaret Drayton, Miss Elizabeth Tweedy, Miss Hope Ivins, of this city, and Miss Ryman, of Wilkesbarre, Pa.

A feature of the evening was dancing, music being furnished by VanBar, of New York, and during an intermission supper was served by Maresi, of New York.

Miss Mellick is a popular member of the younger set and has been prominent in numerous functions given under its auspices.

FORTY DOLLARS NEEDED FOR DINNERS FOR POOR

The Salvation Army wishes to announce that the basket dinners will be ready for distribution tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the headquarter's building, 157 East Second street. Those who have received tickets will confer a favor by not coming around during the day as every minute of time counts in this large undertaking and the baskets will not be complete before the hour mentioned. It has been found in some cases where parents have sent children to apply that they were not quite sure of their proper address so when the investigator called they were not to be found at the address given. The officers of the Army will try and remedy this so far as possible if the parents will apply in person tomorrow evening.

While the response has been very liberal to the appeal for funds the Army could use about forty dollars more towards making it the success that they desire.

YOUNG WOMEN TRUSTEES OF PHTHISIS SOCIETY

The executive committee of the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, met in the parish house of Grace church last night to receive the report of the committee on new constitution and articles of incorporation. These were accepted and the title and constitution will be adopted early in January.

Miss Georgianna Smith and Miss Mabelle Phillips were elected to the board of trustees for the coming year.

It was announced that Postmaster-General Hitchcock had sanctioned the selling of Red Cross stamps at the local postoffice. They were put on sale there today. Eighty per cent. of the money received from the sale of these stamps will go to the local work of the society.

The various committees reported a satisfactory condition at the new tuberculosis pavilion and a vote of thanks was extended to A. L. C. Marsh, architect, for his time and labor, given gratuitously in planning and superintending the construction of the pavilion and to the hospital and matron, Miss Josephine Hughes, and her assistants for the success of the work.

AT CITY MARKET

Several Tenants Begin Business Today.

Some of the tenants of the new city market on North avenue and East Second stret, will begin business without waiting for the formal opening. Among these are Messrs. Adam Heim and Walter Lane, formerly of the Endress Company on West Front street. They have taken butcher stalls and will begin doing business today. Mr. Heim has been with the Endress company for about ten years and Mr. Lane has been in the butcher business in this city for over twenty years. The market building is rapidly being completed and will be formally opened the first of January.

Equal Suffrage League to Meet.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield will meet Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. L. Riley, of Myrtle avenue. The topic will be "How a party platform is constructed," and will be in charge of Miss Mary F. Thompson.

VON MINDEN BOOMED FOR TOWNSHIP COUNSEL

Former Assemblyman Rene P. E. VonMinden, of New Market, is being boomed as the logical candidate for appointment to the office of attorney for Piscataway township. Being a prominent member and officer of the Middlesex County Grange, Mr. VonMinden has the support of the agriculturists in the township, as well as big followings at New Market and South Plainfield.

The present incumbent is Judge William A. Coddington, of this city, who has filled the office in an efficient manner for several years. The only objection to Judge Coddington's reappointment is the fact that he is not a resident of the township, while on the other hand, VonMinden resides at New Market, where he has been active in public affairs.

Another argument being used in VonMinden's behalf is that he is a Republican while Coddington is a Democrat. VonMinden, at the last election when the Democrats swept the county, was high man on the Republican ticket.

The township committee will organize at the Nelson Hotel on New Year's day and prepare its slate of appointments. Dr. F. A. Nelson is practicularly sure of being appointed as township physician.

EAST END REFORMED CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

At the Netherwood Reformed church last night the children gave a delightful presentation of "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe." A dozen of the youngsters parodied the probable actions of the happy family which was too large for the old lady to handle and they acquitted themselves splendidly.

The occasion was the first Christmas festival held in the church and it was marker by the presence of an audience which demonstrated the great interest which the little church holds for the people of that neighborhood. Rev. Mr. Stout received a ten-dollar gold piece from his congregation and all the members of the Sunday-school were remembered with suitable gifts as well as oranges and candy.

Mrs. Wood, superintendent of the primary department, received a cut glass dish from the teachers and pupils. The music of the little cantata was splendidly sung and showed careful training on the part of those who had the children in charge. The little church was filled with an appreciative audience and the children were heartily applauded for their efforts to entertain their parents.

W. C. Douglass Honored.

William Crawford Douglass, a junior at the Colorado School of Mines, Denver, Colorado, was unanimously elected captain of the football team for the season of 1910, last week, by the student body. The tribute paid him is a fitting recognition of his splendid services on the athletic field. He is a graduate of P. H. S. class '07.

Change Meeting Night.

At the last meeting of Plainfield Legion, No. 1495, N. P. L., it was voted to change the time of meeting to the fourth Tuesday of each month so that the district manager, Mrs. Anna O'Shea can attend oftener. She will be present at the next meeting, Tuesday night, December 28, at 8 o'clock in Coward Hall.

MRS. JUSTINA SCHMIDT AGED SIXTY-ONE, DEAD

Mrs. Justina Barbara Schmidt, widow of the late Fridolin Schmidt, of Summit avenue, North Plainfield, died yesterday afternoon at 3:30 from a stroke of apoplexy. She was in her sixty-second year. Notice of the funeral will be given later.

Mrs. Schmidt was first attacked by apoplexy on Monday night. She is survived by three daughters, Justina, Florence, and Mrs. William Daily, and one son, Raymond Schmidt, all of this city. A sister, Mrs. C. Stoeckle also survives her. She was a woman of fine character and had endeared herself to all who knew her through her kindly ways and the charity extended at all times to those who asked her assistance.

Mrs. Schmidt was born in Lorraine, France, and came to this country in 1866. She was a member and a regular attendant of St. Joseph's church and was highly respeteed.

CHRISTMAS DAY AS IN THE FATHERLAND

The Christmas committee of the Gesang and Turn Verein has mapped out what should be a merry-making program for the members of that organization. The hall will be open all day on Christmas when the day will be observed in an informal manner.

The children's festival will take place on Saturday afternoon. At this celebration the little folks will give an entertainment and afterward receive presents from a tree. The committee in charge is A. Wolf, Charles Stranzenbach and Charles Klotz.

The same committee is also arranging for the annual ball and entertainment for New Year's eve. In past years this even has been one of the biggest social affairs in the society, and the celebration this year promises to be no exception to the general rule.

The annual masquerade ball of the society will be held on the eve of Washington's Birthday, February 21.

SCHOOLS INSPECTED BY FIRE COMMITTEE

The inspection of the public schools of this city which was conducted yesterday by the fire and buildings committee of the Common Council with Mayor Fisk and Fire Chief Doane, revelaed the fact that all but one of the schools are in first class condition.

The exception was the Franklin School, where the cellar was found filled with rubbish consisting of old blinds, chairs and tables, stuff that is useles and should not be there. This was ordered removed. Notable improvements were found in the Bryant School, where, two years ago, new staircases and exits were suggested. The following out of the recommendations of the inspectors at that time have made this school practically safe from fire and all the danger of lack of exits has been removed. The new iron staircase which leads directly out has reduced danger of congestion in case of fire practically to nothing.

The inspectors also included the local theatres in their itinerary and here also the conditions were found to be most desirable. The special exits and the arrangements for protection in case of fire are admirably efficient, in fact there was nothing to criticize adversely.

The parochial schools will probably be inspected today.

Temple Baptists Acquire Land.

At a special meeting of the officers and members of Temple Baptist church, last night, it was decided to purchase the property in the rear of the church, extending through to East Second street, a distance of 175 feet. This property was owned by George Viebrock and the church thought it wise to acquire it and make an opening between East Third and Second streets. An attractive driveway will be made.

Library to Close.

The circulating department of the Plainfield Public Library will be closed on Christmas Day. The reading room will be open from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Bank Open Evenings.

In order to accommodate its patrons, the Borough National Bank will be open tomorrow, Christmas Eve, from 8 until 9 o'clock.

ASK TO STORE FUEL OIL

Spicer Company Applies to Common Council for Two Permits.

WAS REFERRED TO COMMITTEE.

No Action Taken On Auto Concern's Petition For a Gasolene Tank Permit—New Ordinance Likely.

Unexpectedly, the petition of the Spicer Universal Joint Company, of Madison avenue, for permission to install two tanks at its factory for the storage of fuel oil, came before the Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night. The petition was presented a few weeks ago, and the matter had been under consideration.

The company wants to place two tanks of five thousand gallons capacity each beneath the sidewalk on its property at Madison avenue and West Third street, for the storage of fuel oil used for manufacturing purposes. All of the gasolene, benezine and other dangerous products have been removed from this oil, and as explained by Mr. Spicer, of the company, it will not ignite unless heated. It is proposed to place the tanks undreground and no oil will be handled above ground, the tanks even being filled by pipe-line from the railroad siding.

Mr. Spicer was present and was given the privilege of the floor. He explained the company's plans in detail and said that he could not see the least possible danger in installing the tanks. They would be placed three feet underground and be covered with concrete.

Mr. Gloak wanted to know if the insurance rates would be affected by the installation of such tanks, and Mr. Buxton said that in his opinion they would not be, in fact, he said that by Legislative action, the fire insurance rating bureau in the State was put out of business on December 16, and no official action can be taken until other arrangements are made.

Mr. Taylor explained that the oil which the company proposes to use is a petroleum product and is not considered dangerous and he moved that the petition be granted. This brought forth opposition from Mr. Mygatt and Mr. Montgomery. The former said that it seemed to him that inasmuch as the Council is now considering this whole question, including the storage of gasolene, nothing should be done until definite conclusions are reached and thorough scientific investigation is made. Mr. Montgomery was of the same opinion.

The matter brought out so many different opinions, that it was finally voted to refer it back to the fire and building committee until the next meeting.

No action was taken at this time regarding the application of the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company for permission to install gasolene tanks. Mr. Taylor, of the fire committee, is anxious to make further investigation before recommending any action. It is likely that as suggested by Mayor Fisk, a suitable ordinance will be adopted covering the matter of handling and storing gasolene and then those wishing to engage in the business will be obliged to conform to the provisions.

Sunday School Class Social.

Sunday school class No. 5, of Hope chapel, held a pleasant social at the home of Mrs. Harry DeHarte, 907 South Second street, last night. During the evening piano selections and parlor games were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served by the committee, Mrs. Willard H. Cook, Mrs. Charles Hughes, Mrs. Alfred Aitken. The class presented its teacher, Arthur Maclay, with a handsome silver back clothes brush as a mark of appreciation.

POOR LITTLE ONES WILL ENJOY XMAS

Good Fellows Will Put Toys in Stockings of 484 Who Otherwise Would Not Know Xmas Joys.

Now old man, go out and blow in your coin and have the satisfaction of knowing that you did your part in making others happy. You've done bully. Fact is that you kept the organized aid workers busy hunting up worthy little boys and girls to be the objects of your goodness. Fact is that they've had to ask us to cut it out for every little kid, that is deserving, has been provided for. God bless you, old man, you were put together right, and if any fellow really enjoys Christmas day you will. Take it from me.

A GOOD FELLOW.

Promptly at 10 o'clock this morning, Miss Holly, of the Charity Organization Society, said that all the good little boys and girls whose names were on her carefully prepared list had been provided for. That meant that just four hundred and eighty-four little people will find something in their stockings on Christmas morn. Some had answered the call of the society before the publication of the appeal of Good Fellow aroused the public interest. So tomorrow night Santa Claus will go about distributing the toys, but he has arranged so that the little people can't see them until they wake up in the morning because they must be put to bed early.

The committee in charge of the work wishes it understood that they are not responsible for changes in addresses; that the names furnished by them were accompanied by the correct addresses at the time they were gathered and approved. They also wish it understood that to carry out the true spirit of the Good Fellow idea, the gifts must be strictly anonymous. In other words, the donor's name is not to become known to his little friend, who will be told by his mamma that Santa Claus brought the present.

All the little people at the Children's Home and the Day Nursery babies as well as the few hundreds in various parts of the city will see the joys of Christmas for all of them will get toys of some sort.

Following the ceremony the couple was tendered a reception at the home of the bride's family. Mr. and Mrs. Apgar are spending their honeymoon in Washington, D. C., and at the completion of their trip they will reside on West Seventh street.

ANOTHER'S LICENSE COSTS BENDER $8.

But Collis had already complained to the police that he wanted the license but could not find Bender. He was arrested by Patrolman George Dobson.

DUCK FOR HUSBAND, WIFE GOES HUNGRY.

Beverly, Dec. 23.—William Wald, of ths city, has duck for his dinner. His wife goes hungry. She cooks the duck and then sits down and watches him eat it. That, at least, is the story she tells. She applied for allmony and counsel fees against her husband, a merchant in this place. The Walds have been married six years and have a 4-year-old son. Wald, she said, earns $30 a week and has several thousand dollars in the bank.

According to Mrs. Wald, she and her child scarcely had enough to live on. Her husband frequently had such delicacies as roast duck, squabs, etc. She cooked them, then mother and son watched the father eat them. Recently her husband left her, saying he was going back to Germany, where he would have no one but himself to care for.

Tuesday night Mrs. Wald went to call on a neighbor. While there a boy rushed in and told her there was a big wagon in front of her house. She hurried back and there saw a van. The men told her that her husband had ordered them to take the furniture to the home of his mother in Riverside. Curtains had been ripped from their hangings. Half of the furniture was in the van, but the woman put up a fight and the men carted it back into the house.

Mrs. Wald said yesterday that her husband allowed her only $2 a week for herself and child.

CANDY IN COLLECTION BOX.

Gum Drops Clue as to Where Pennies Went.

Woodbury, Dec. 23.—When two corpulent and glistening gum drops appeared in the collection plate of the Presbyterian Sunday school last Sunday the officers repressed a smile and started an inquiry. They had had some notion that a considerable portion of the pennies that should have been dropped in the plates had found their way into the cash drawer of the candy shop next door.

They did not feel it incumbent upon them to act until the episode of the gum drops emphasized the critical situation. So one of the officers of the school dropped in the place and bought a few gum drops on his own account. This was followed by the arrest of G. W. Scheminant, proprietor of the candy shop, on the charge of Sunday selling. He was given a hearing before Mayor Ladd yesterday.

Scheminant admitted the charge and he was told that the prosecution would go no further if he agreed to close his shop and safeguard the collection pennies. He said he would, but that every other store in the city would have to close Sundays, too.

FIREMEN RESCUE BOY.

He Shinned Up Pole to Escape Being Arrested.

Jersey City, Dec. 23.—Little Sammy Sprowl, of 16 Palisade avenue, West Hoboken, gave firemen of this city a dangerous chase yesterday morning. The record of the boy is not the best. He jumped a coal car and began kicking off the coal. This is an old game among coal thieves. He was gathering his harvest when he was espied by a couple of railroad detectives of the West Shore Railroad. The chase began in Hoboken avenue. Sammy is a good climber. He shinned up a telegraph pole in Hoboken avenue and was but ten feet up when he found the officers at his heels.

When they began to climb after him he proved himself a steeplejack. One of the officers tried to reach him but Sammy went higher up. He dived among the intricate lines charged with electricity, and his pursuers did not dare follow. He was taken down by firemen. It was decided that Sammy had been punished enough, and he was allowed to go to his home.

FLEECED OUT OF $5.

Milburn Storekeeper Victim of Short-Change Artists.

Mrs. F. O. Schulze, who conducts a confectionery store in Millburn avenue, Millburn, was fleeced out of $5 by "short change" artists yesterday, who traveled in a stolen rig.

The men asked for two five-cent cigars and proferred in payment a $10 bill. Mrs. Schulze gave them change in one $5 note, four ones and ninety cents in coin. One of them remarked that it was too bad they had to take her change and handed the bills and coin back, saying he had a dime. Then they discovered a dime. Then they disappeared. Mrs. Schulze discovered later that she was a $5 bill short.

The rig in which the men traveled was later found deserted in front of the Springfield Hotel, and was found to be the property of Matthew Flood, a liveryman, of Summit. Constable Michael J. Whalen is working on the case.

Big Verdicts Awarded.

New Brunswick, Dec. 23.—Two big verdicts were awarded by a jury here Tuesday. In the suit of John Ramsey, of Perth Amboy, against the Raritan Copper Works, a verdict for $5,124 for the plaintiff was returned. In the suit of Samuel A. Ross against Dr. John Martin Craig a verdict of $1,590 was awarded the plaintiff.

Xmas Candies

PURITY CANDIES rank with the very best. We are sure of this, because we make the most of them right here in our own Candy Kitchen, using the best of materials and making them under the most sanitary conditions.

Children can eat "Purity Candies" without stint, without suffering any harmful effects such as might be the case from candies so largely composed of glucose, tons and tons of which are put upon the market at this season of the year.

Sunday-schools should be very particular about the kind of candies they give to children, and they should not be led by lower prices than we can quote to give inferior candies.

Our 20c Candies are simply unsurpassed.

GOLF.

The Montclair Golf Club held its annual meeting at the clubhouse on Monday, when the treasurer reported a satisfactory financial condition.

Ninety-seven new members were elected during the year, and the limit of membership of 250 resident and 100 non-resident was reached. By a unanimous vote the bylaws were amended to make the resident and non-resident membership one class, with a limit of 350, the initiation fee to be $50 and the annual dues $50.

During the year many permanent improvements were made on the course, while additional improvements are projected and will be carried out during the coming year, chief among which will be the reconstruction of the seventh and seventeenth greens.

The last year was the most active in the club's history. The New Jersey State Golf Association held its annual tournament on the links in June; two invitation touranments were held in October, one for men and one for women, while the annual club tournament was held, as usual, in October. Prizes exceeding $1,000 in value were competed for during the year, many of these prizes being presented by the members. Officers were elected and committees appointed as follows:

President, H. H. Spies; vice-president, T. H. Stephens; secretary-treasurer, Walter Brown; captain, Jason Rogers.

Board of directors, H. H. Spies, C. F. Droste, T. W. Stephens, W. B. Perley, Jason Rogers, C. D. Backus, J. A. Kelsey, A. L. Peirson and Walter Brown.

Greens committee, C. F. Droste, chairman; Jason Rogers and J. A. Kelsey.

House committee, Walter Brown, chairman; W. B. Perley and A. L. Peirson.

Membership committee, C. D. Backus, chairman; T. W. Stephens and J. A. Kelsey.

Tournament committee, Jason Rogers, chairman; W. B. Perley and A. L. Peirson.

Lawn tennis committee, Hiland Porter, chairman; Eads Johnston and Jason Rogers.

MURDERS AUTOIST WITH A LANTERN.

Paterson, Dec. 23.—Benjamin Newsome, employed as a chauffeur by Henry F. Bell, president of the Citizens' Trust Company, died late yesterday in the General Hospital from the effects of a blow he received Monday night while working in the rear of the Bell home.

Newsome believed that he had been struck by some blunt instrument that had been tossed by small boys, but the police last night arrested Arthur Veneman, of 116 East Hall street. He confessed that he struck Newsome with a lantern.

"We had an argument earlier in the day," he said, "because Newsome would not get out of my way when I was driving up the road. I told him I would see him later, and I kept my word."

Veneman, who is 22 years old, was locked up on a charge of murder.

SEES MYSTERY IN DEATH OF KELLEY.

Rahway, Dec. 23.—Sylvester Joseph Kelly, formerly of Orange Valley, 43 years old, died Tuesday in the Alexian Brothers' Hospital from, it is alleged, injuries received at the Royal Manufacturing Company, this city, four weeks ago. He died two hours after entering the hospital. His skull was fractured and a clot of blood on the brain caused death.

All information is refused at the works regarding the accident. The hospital authorities forbid burial until an autopsy has been performed. Within a few hours after Mr. Kelly's death his wife gave birth to a little daughter and was not told the news of her husband's death until last night.

BOY MEETS BURGLAR.

Enters Room and Youngster Talks With Him.

Passaic, Dec. 23.—Left alone, Kenneth, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Larison, Tuesday night lay in bed and talked with a burglar. When the man, who was well-dressed, reached the foot of the bed Kenneth asked: "Who's that?"

"Oh, I'm Mr. McCritchie. I have to go downstairs; wait, I'll be back in a minute."

Frightened, Kenneth waited. Five minutes later his parents returned. The stranger apparently made his escape when he was interrupted by the boy. Nothing was missing.

Fire Destroys Store.

Long Branch, Dec. 23.—The Robert Rosen grocery store, in South Broadway, was damaged by fire Tuesday evening and the entire stock destroyed. When discovered the store was a mass of flames, caused by the exploding of a fifty-gallon tank of kerosene. The building is owned by Morris Goles.

CARDINAL SENDS GREETINGS.

Remembers Small Boy Whom He Met In Baltimore.

Passaic, Dec. 23.—Eleven-year-old Leo F. Wynne, of 208 Bloomfield avenue, is the recipient of Christmas greetings by mail from Cardinal Gibbons. Leo prizes the cardinal's autograph highly.

The greeting was written on appropriate note paper and was signed by the cardinal. It reads: "I send you many Christmas greetings with my blessings and pray that God may always keep you in His holy keeping."

The cardinal met Leo in Baltimore on several occasions.

Frederick N. Voorhees.

Somerville, Dec. 23.—The funeral of Frederick N. Voorhees, 46 years old was held at the parsonage of the First Reformed church yesterday. The Rev. Dr. William S. Cranmer officiated. Burial was in the new cemetery in this city. Mr. Voorhees was a son of the late J. Fred Voorhees and was a member of one of the oldest families in Somerset County. He died suddenly in a New York hospital.

TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.

Editor, The Daily Press:

It seems to me that the city authorities should regulate the congestion of cabs, carriages and automobiles at the station between five o'clock and half past six in the evening. At present public hacks are required to stand clear of the curb, but there is no such restriction on private vehicles. The result is that a few carriages and automobiles occupy the curb to the exclusion of everyone else, and if their passengers do not come one one train they may stay there until the next one, inconveniencing everybody else and without benefit to themselves.

Every afternoon you will find six or eight of them standing in front of the station and blocking all access to the curb. Under these circumstances people who wish to take cabs, or whose own carriages are not at the curb, can only reach them by dodging under the horses' heads and going out into the filth and wet in the street. On Monday night for instance at 6 o'clock five large carriages and two small ones filled the entire front of the station. So far as I could see no one got into them and they remained there, presumably for the next train. The drivers refused to move and everyone who wished to reach a cab had to dodge under the horses' heads and reach it as best they could. A similar state of affairs can be seen there almost any afternoon, especially in bad weather.

Now this favoritism is all wrong. The people who patronize the cabs should be treated just as the private owners. Neither should be allowed to play the dog in the manger and monopolize the curb to the exclusion of the other. I suggest as a remedy that for a space of two hundred feet in front of the station no vehicle of anykind should be allowed to stand at the curb except while receiving or discharging a passenger. This will be fair to all persons, and will greatly facilitate the rapid movement of all vehicles. The congestion of traffic has greatly increased in the last few years and it will get worse as the city grows. The city authorities owe it to the public to put a stop to the present discreditable condition.

ALBERT H. ATTERBURY.

Tickets for Benefit.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In the matter of "Confusion" over tickets "for the Charity Ball," I have nothing to say beyond a positive denial that favoritism was shown to any one. My personal friends were as resolutely refused favor as were many others who besieged my office for days ahead. The exchange was absolutely fair, and impartial and under supervision of the committee, those who failed to secure the best seats have only their tardiness to blame. The management of the Plainfield theatre is here to serve the public, and cannot nor will not stoop to unfair practice at any time.

At Proctor's.

George Beban's associate players are a big hit at Proctor's this week in the sketch, "The Sign of the Rose." The story deals with the Black Hand and holds ones attention from start to finish, and is a sketch in a thousand. "Thoma" and her famous horse, "Indian Chief," given to her by Geronimo, the old Sioux chief, who caused so much trouble for Uncle Sam, this act is appreciated by the audience. Sola and Alice Rogers, in their "Rube" sketch, have some clever songs and classy dancing. Marie Bergere, the famous French artist will interest all with her impersonations. The films d'art improve each day, and are one of the big features.

FRELINGHUYSEN LEASES THE "HOUSE OF LORDS"

Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen has leased the Stewart house, in West State street, Trenton, for the coming session of the Legislature, and the "House of Lords," which had a prominent part in the deliberations of the last Senate, will again be a fixture next year. The "House of Lords" was a nickname given to the house in which Senators Frelinghuysen, Wakelee, Ackerman, Brown, Minch and Hillery lived during the last session.

There will be one absentee next year, however, for Mr. Hillery is no longer a member of the Senate, having been appointed by Governor Fort a member of the Railroad Commission. The five other Senators, however, will live together as they did last year.

HIGH PRAISE FOR REFORMATORY HEAD

That the Rev. Dr. Frank Moore, a Methodist clergyman, well known throughout the State and formerly president of the Pennington Theological Seminary, is the right man in the right place as superintendent of the New Jersey Reformatory at Rahway is the view of the Board of Managers of the institution, who filed their annual report with Governor Fort yesterday.

The Board declares there has been marked improvement in the discipline of the institution since Mr. Moore assumed charge, and points out that there is still room for improvement, which, it is expected, will be accomplished when Mr. Moore has put all his plans in operation.

The managers complain of inability to provide proper teachers, asserting that while many of the men are excellent guards, they fall short in the matter of imparting instruction to the boys. There is only one professional teacher in the institution. The managers ask that they be provided with means to give boys proper instruction. The managers also ask for an increased appropriation for use in the trades schools.

In his report to the managers Superintendent Moore discusses the importance of having men of high moral principles in charge of the boys. At Mr. Moore's suggestion the good conduct limit of the reformatory has been extended to fifteen months, and the plan has been found to work successfully.

The total expenses of the reformatory for the year were $168,002. The receipts for labor and materials sold amounted to $23,853. The managers will ask for an appropriation of $20,000 for an enclosing wall for the institution, $10,000 for water supply, $5,000 for tuberculosis pavilion, $20,000 for trades school building, and $25,000 to buy additional farm land.

LAWMAKERS TO DINE AS MR. FORT'S GUESTS.

Scenes of activity in preparation for the coming session of the Legislature are already being witnessed. Governor Fort's dinner to the members of both branches, at Lakewood, January 6, which he announced yesterday, presages, say the leaders, early planning for a serious lawmaking program. There is to be a general discussion of the legislative outlook, and it is expected that something tangible in the way of an outline will be afforded for the guidance of the members when the Legislature opens the following week.

The Governor's dinner at Lakewood will be at Laurel in the Pines, and all the legislators will attend.

CHILD STOPS DOG SLAUGHTER.

Mayor of Montclair Revokes Order for Wholesale Killing.

Mayor Crawford, of Montclair yesterday gave heed to the appeals of scores of women and children and revoked the order which has resulted in the slaughter of nearly two hundred dogs in the last several weeks. Following a scare occasioned by the presence of two or three mad dogs in the streets, Mayor Crawford issued a proclamation to the effect that all dogs found on the public highways without muzzles should be killed.

One of the dogs killed happened to be a small dog belonging to a little girl, whose grief over the fate of her pet, which was shot down in her presence, was so great that it became a subject for popular discussion. Hereafter all unmuzzled dogs will be taken to the pound.

ROUTINE TRANSACTIONS OF THE CITY FATHERS

C. L. Campbell, of 1001 Central avenue, the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company, John H. Reid and others communicated with the Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night asking for a revision or cancellation of sewer assessments. These matters were of long standing in some instances, and had been considered by the finance committee. Mr. Buxton, the chairman, later presented an opinion from Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh bearing on the subject.

According to Mr. Marsh, the assessments were levied according to law, the usual public hearings were granted and the assessments were confirmed by the Common Council. Mr. Marsh said that the property-owners had their right of appeal to the Supreme Court within sixty days of the time of making the assessment. This had not been done. In consequence he advised that the petitions be denied. This was done and in all cases except that of the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company, which required further investigation, the petitions were ordered returned.

Among these petitions returned were those of Michael Harrington, DeWitt C. Ivins, J. F. Reid, L. V. F. Randolph, C. L. Campbell, Miss C. Brokaw and Reed & Coddington. Mr. Marsh's opinion was filed.

Regarding the communication of Clara A. Stelle, of Union street, in which she called attention to the fact that the city agreed to remit a sewer assessment in return for dedicating an extension of Stelle avenue as a public street, the request was granted in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted.

George Wiegand, of Summer avenue, petitioned the Common Council for permission to build a sanitary sewer 600 feet long, to connect with one installed by Elston M. French which connects with the city sewer. It was referred to the street and sewer committee and later was granted. Mr. Wiegand will build the sewer at his expense.

City Treasurer W. F. Arnold reported the sale of the school bonds and upon advice of Corporation Counsel Marsh asked for instructions. Later Mr. Buxton offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the transfer of $55,019.25, from the sale of bonds to the custodian of school moneys, Mr. Arnold, so that the Board of Education may have access to the fund.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of ten sewer permits during the past month. Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported outside expenses to be $1,974.71 and almshouse expenses of $71.97.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Taylor, chairman of the fire and building committee, and adopted, permitting the organization of another fire company for the new east end fire house to be known as Company No. 4. This is done so that six call men can be appointed to do fire duty in that part of the city. Mayor Fisk will make the appointments soon upon the recommendation of the fire committee.

Mr. Buxton moved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet on Thursday night, December 30, when all business for the year will be closed up prior to the re-organization of the Council on New Year's Day.

BAXTER INTERPRETS TENURE OFFICE ACT

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles J. Baxter has given an opinion to the effect that any teacher, principal or supervising principal who has been employed in the same district for three consecutive years next preceding September 1, 1909, and is employed for the current school year brings him under the protection of the teachers' tenure of office act, and secures him permanency of position in said district during good behavior and efficiency.

The superintendent has been asked this question so often recently and has answered it individually so many times that he felt constrained to make public an opinion which might read all who would inquire.

In speaking of the matter yesterday, Mr. Baxter said that the law seems to be entirely clear. It fixes a probationary period of three years, and after that it shall be during good behavior and efficiency. After this dismissal or reduction of salary is prohibited. Unless a teacher shall be given a contract extending beyond the probationary period, or shall be remployed after the expiration of the three years, he does not come under the protection of the act in question.

J. F. Clark for Judgeship.

James F. Clark, grand jury clerk in Hudson County, will be appointed by Governor Fort to be judge of the district court to be established in North Hudson, according to report.

William E. VanCourt will have a Christmas family gathering on Saturday. There will be about thirty relatives present to spend the entire day.

Sues for $10,000, Gets $350.

Miss Rose Mandeville, of Arlington, who sued the Public Service Railway for $10,000 damages, received a verdict of $350 yesterday from a jury in Jersey City. The plaintiff declared that while returning to her home from the Jersey City High School, on September 25, 1908, a trolley car, from which she was alighting at Fourth street, Harrison, started suddenly, and she was thrown to the pavement. Miss Mandeville testified that her spine was injured and that she was confined to her home nine weeks.

Brocade Hats.

Brocade is much favored for bridesmaids' hats. Perhaps it solves the color problem as well, for it is always possible to secure just the right shade of blue or pink at the silk counter when the felt hats offer no assistance to eager buyers. Large shapes are popular, and plumes of the same color or contrasting tones are used. The design of the brocade seems especially ornamental and suitable for festive occasions. After the great event, these silk hats are lovely for evening wear.

HOLDS LID FIRMLY IN PLACE

If This Device Is Used There Is No Danger of Its Rolling Off Saucepan to Stove or Floor.

Cooks will vouch for the annoyance to which they are subjected by the lids of pots and pans falling off those receptacles to the stove or floor. To correct this an Ohio man has invented a lid holder for cooking vessels which insures the lid staying in position. In the first place, the lid in his design is hinged and does not set on losely. In addition to this it has a handle, independent of the pot handle. If it is desired to lift the lid all that need be done is to depress this handle, which is shown in the cut below the handle of the pot. Let go and the lid drops back into place. When the contents of a stewpan or boiler are cooking busily, it is no joke to lift the lid off and set it properly in place again with the steam arising against the hand. Consequently, an attachment which permits the cook to stand at a safe distance and open the pot is a welcome one. The handle is of open twisted wire and does not heat up like a solid piece of metal would.

The Home.

If any one has trouble with custards wheying add a pinch of soda before pouring into the cups.

Then have in the closet a can of plum pudding that can be quickly heated and a hot sauce made in a few minutes.

It is a great comfort to always keep in the house a dark fruit cake, wrapped in a wax paper and hidden away from the children, to be relied upon in case of the unexpected guest.

When planning for the elderdown carriage robe buy a half yard extra and turn it up and bind it like a pocket to slip the baby's feet in, and thus keep out the wind on all sides.

A sprinkling of salt along the slats of all wooden beds and a layer of yellow soap rubbed across the slats and on ends of the side pieces will keep all wandering life from coming near.

Those who live in the country can often earn quite a little by gathering the more delicate Christmas greens and vines and berries and sending them to be sold at the nearest town.

There is a present fad for using handmade frames of wood, both in square and oval pieces, which are finished with sandpaper and wood filler to make them natural in wood effect. They bring out the delicate tints of some pictures to much better advantage than gold or highly ornamental frames.

Fruit and Nut Rolls.

Sift three times three cups flour, six level teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Rub in one-third cupful of butter, and add, gradually, one cupful of milk, cutting in with a knife to a soft dough. Turn out on the floured board and roll into a rectangular sheet one-third inch thick. Brush with soft butter and dredge with two tablespoons sugar mixed with one-half teaspoon cinnamon. Then sprinkle with chopped filberts and raisins. Roll up like a jelly cake, then cut across it in inch slices. Set these on end in a buttered pan close together and bake 20 minutes.

Lemon Marmalade.

To six pounds lemons take nine pounds sugar. Peel the lemons, then cover the yellow parings with water and boil until tender. Drain and let cool, then shred the parings fine. Meantime halve the peeled fruit crosswise and press out juice and soft pulp. Cover the shells of white pulp remaining with three pints cold water and boil one-half hour. Strain off this liquor and add it to the juice and soft pulp with the yellow rinds. Boil all together, then add the heated sugar. Boil down to the consistency required, and place while boiling hot in small jars or marmalade pots.

Boil Starch.

Boil starch well to avoid sticking when ironing thin dresses and shirt waists. Have a yard of cheesecloth well wet and dampen article as required; it will save both time and patience and assure good work. A good sleeve board can be made by smoothing off a piece of board and pad and cover; screw to under part of ironing board, where it will be ready for use.

Rice Pudding.

One pint milk, two tablespoons of rice. Let them come to a boil, stir in two tablespoons of sugar, half a cup of seeded raisins, a lump of butter. Flavor with cinnamon and bake till thick.

Roasted Potatoes.

Pare and wash, and an hour before taking out the roast, place the potatoes in the pan. After half an hour turn them and when done they will be a lovely golden brown and sweet as a nut.

Buying and selling furniture has taught us countless things that are of inestimable value to not only ourselves, but to those who buy furniture from us. There is the good and the bad in every kind of merchandise. The shoddy can't always be told from the genuine cloth, unless experience, study and watchfulness are employed to detect it.

Our experience has been gained in "stocking" our store each season by "shopping." During our near-twenty-five years specializing the furniture business we too have been "shoppers." We have gone from manufacturer to manufacturer, until we found the reliable ones—makers of the best goods that can be turned out for the price—goods that represent true, honest values.

This great care has enabled us to grow each year and to build up a clientele of pleased customers. They know that what they buy from us is correct and will give satisfaction. They will take no risk. There is no inducement that will influence them to "try somewhere else."

Our three large, well-stocked floors bear silent testimony to the study we give to latest designed and most modernly finished goods. We have an extensive variety of all the fashionable modes for home ornamentation and household usefulness. We invite a most careful inspection, believing you can find somewhere within our stock what you want at the price you want to pay.

Our assortments are large and complete. Opportunities have never been greater to buy furniture of the right, serviceable kind, at the right price, than they are now.

There are many novelties that are brought out from time to time that go a long way toward beautifying the home, a large stock of which we carry and add to the list the new things as to be had. Some of these may be just what you have been looking for. Just take a little saunter through our store at your earliest opportunity and see if they are here.

GROWING OLD.

A little more tired at close of day;
A little less anxious to have our way;
A little less ready to scold and blame,
A little more care for a brother's name;
And so we are nearing the journey's end
Where time and eternity meet and blend.

A little less care for bonds and gold,
A little more zest in the days of old;
A broader view and a saner mind,
And a little more love for all mankind;
And so we are faring a-down the way.

A little more love for the friends of youth,
A little less zeal for established truth;
A little more charity in our views,
A little less thirst for the daily news;
And so we are folding our tents away
And passing in silence at close of day.

A little more leisure to sit and dream,
A little more real the things unseen;
A little nearer to those ahead,
With visions of those long-loved and dead;
And so we are going to where all must go,
To the place the living may never know.

A little more laughter, a little more tears,
And we shall have told our increasing years;
The book is closed, and the prayers are said,
And we are a part of the countless dead.
Thrice happy, then, if some soul can say:
"I live because he has passed my way." —New York Times.

Sensible or Silly?

It is a little difficult to answer the query that has come to us but lately, "Are we sensible or are we silly?"—"we" meaning women, for it was spoken in connection with the styles. We see ourselves, perhaps, in a most serious shirtwaist, but we aren't "the whole show" by any means, and we observe the passing pageant in its hat, any hat, every hat, from last season's peachbasket onward to the tricorne, but our lips are sealed; we can't reply, but we'll try to get up a pleasing answer a little later, when the winter hat is perched on every feminine pompadour and when the silliest or the "sensible-est" has been adopted.

Is there a Santa Claus?

CERTAINLY THERE IS! We saw Santa himself the other day. He was busy telephoning, and he told us that he had a list of the names and addresses of all the little girls and boys in the world.

"This is a tremendously busy season for me," said Santa Claus, "and if it wasn't for my telephone, I don't see how I ever could attend to everybody. "You see, most every home has one of your telephones now, and I can talk with the papas and mamas and find out——"

"No," said Santa, divining my question, "the children cannot telephone me; that would never do—they might find out something," and his eyes twinkled merrily.

"And the children where there are no telephones?"

"Oh, I am not forgetting them. I still have my reindeer team."

(We assured Santa that in a few years we hoped to have a telephone in every home in the land. "That will be fine," said Santa, "then I can do all my business by telephone and send my reindeer up to the Zoo in the park.")

By the way, have you a telephone?

FOR THE DESSERT

LONG LIST OF MOST APPETIZING DAINTIES.

Suitable for Grownups and Children Alike—Gingered Pears Among the Best—Approved Method of Making Apple Pedding.

Fig Puffs.—One and one-half cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half teasponoful salt, one tablespoonful butter, 1½ cups milk, one egg, thoroughly beaten, two-thirds cup figs, chopped and dredged with flour. Bake in a moderate oven.

Brownies—One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, two-thirds cup flour, two squares Baker's chocolate, two eggs, one-half cup chopped nut meats, one teasponful vanilla. Melt chocolate and butter together, add sugar and eggs, then flour, nuts and vanilla. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes in medium oven. Don't bake too long, but when they feel a little firm on top take out. Cut when first taken from oven, while in pan, in squares.

Sponge Cake.—Three eggs, beaten light, 1½ cups sugar (sifted), one cup flour, with one teaspoonful baking powder, one-half cup cold water, one cup flour, flavored with lemon. Beat all together with egg beater, which you can do until last cup of flour is added. Bake in moderately hot oven.

Five-Minute Cake.—Sift into dish as follows: One and one-half cups flour, one cup granulated sugar, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, salt and flavoring. Put in large coffee cup three tablespoonfuls melted butter, two eggs and fill with milk. Add to flour mixture and beat five minutes.

Spice Cake.—One and one-half cups sugar, one cup butter, three cups flour, two eggs, one cup milk, one teaspoonful soda, about one pound raisins or currants and sliced citron, one teaspoonful allspice and a little salt.

Apple Pudding—Slice four large apples very thin. Beat one-half cup of sugar and one scant half-cup of butter together, until creamy. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs. Mix with the sliced apples and bake until the apples are softened, then add the beaten whites of the eggs with two tablespoons of sugar beaten with them. Return to the oven and brown slowly. Very nice.

Gingered Pear—Pare and core hard pears sufficient to weigh eight pounds. Chop in the chopping tray until they are coarse, about the size of dice. To eight pounds fruit add six pounds sugar. Put in a preserving bottle and let stand over night. In the morning quite a sirup will have formed. Place over the fire, and add three-quarters of a pound of dry preserved ginger. The square cut ginger is usually the cheapest and is good. If the larger pieces are used it should be cut fine. Cook slowly several hours. When fairly cooked add the juice of three lemons, and a little of the thinly pared yellow rind. Cook until the sirup is thick and of a dark amber color. When cold seal in small glass jars or jelly tumblers. Remove the juices of lemon rind. The late hard pears make the best preserves. This must be stirred often in cooking, as it scorches readily.

HOW TO CLEAN WICKERWORK

Avoid Soap, and Scrub with an Extra Strong Solution of Salt Water—Dry in Sun.

Do not scrub your unpainted wicker furniture with soap and water, as it will turn it yellow and ruin its looks. Instead try scrubbing it with a strong solution of salt water.

If you have pieces that are so shabby that they must either be painted or thrown away, try the salt water treatment first. Scrub well and put in the sun and air to dry quickly.

If you must paint wicker furniture, see that you buy a paint that is well mixed and thinned to the proper consistency. If too thick it gets lumpy and the paint is apt to rub off on clothes. Porch chairs that are exposed to weather should be finished with a coat of enamel to make them last longer. The coat of enamel is also more easily dusted.

Irish Stew.

Buy three pounds of boiling beef. Cut in small pieces and with this three whole onions. Place in cooking vessel with two quarts of water. When meat is tender and onions well broken add twelve or fifteen small potatoes, a piece of butter as large as a walnut, salt, and pepper. This is a substantial and economical lunch for hungry school children, and, in my estimation, better than salads and fancy pastry.

Baked Bananas.

Fill a baking dish with bananas, which have been peeled, cut in halves, lengthwise and crosswise. To one banana allow two tablespoons of water, one of sugar, one teaspoon of melted butter, one of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Baste often and cook slowly a half an hour, or till the bananas are red and sirup thick. Serve very hot.

Chopped Relish.

One can use the coarsest pieces of a bunch of celery in the relish.

Chop about one bunch of celery in small piecs (not too small), one rounding teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons (heaped) of white sugar, one-half teaspoon mustard, and cold vinegar enough to wet it well. This is real tasty with baked beans.

Chocolate Sandwiches.

Melt chocolate creams and spread between butter thins. Good for picnic sandwiches.

In a Fraternal Tourney series at Campbell's alleys, last night, the Westfield team got away with two games from the Ponies.

CAMPBELL HUMBLES DETROIT'S CHAMPION

Local enthuslasts who gathered at Campbell's alleys last night were treated to a pretty contest, in which Johnny Campbell and "Chick" Thompson, of Detroit, were the contestants.

Thompson is looked upon as Detroits champion, having captured the individual championship of the Michigan State Tourney last season and is traveling in the East to work up interest in the A. B. C. tourney, to be held in Detroit, in February.

Thompson though rolling on strange alleys made a splendid showing against the local "champer" averaging 206.4 for six games, while Campbell averaged 208.3.

Thompson is endeavoring to arrange his itinerary so as to be in Plainfield on next Thursday, and if he can do so will roll a match with Campbell, best six out of eleven games on Thursday night. The scores:

Campbell	218	192	212	180	215	234
Thompson	197	206	202	227	194	214

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Last season Annie Russell proved women "the stronger sex," at least, during the run of her very interesting play. A character in A. H. Woods' production of "The Working Man's Wife," which comes to the Plainfield theatre, Christmas, matinee and night, exemplifies the precise same idea. Martha Moore, with her six feet and two hundred pounds of good "ould country braun," in the handling of her husband-to-be, Bob Sullivan (a nephew of John L.), who is scarcely over four and a half feet high. Martha isn't much on argument except with her muscle. She appears to very good advantage toward the close of the play. If she had appeared in the first act at the right time, there would have been no occasion for the play, as Mary Bradley wouldn't have gone wrong. If there were more strong women to protect the weak, there would be fewer Mary Bradleys. The whole story will be told at Manager Sanderson's popular theatre. You should secure seats in advance, as the enviable reputation of this production has preceded its appearance here and there is a great demand for seats.

DROWNED AT LAKEWOOD.

Man Crossing On New Ice Was Blown Into An Air Hole.

Louis Gommer, of New York, attempted between 11 o'clock and noon yesterday to walk across Lake Carasaljo, at Lakewood, on the new ice. The wind was blowing strong and swept young Gommer into an air hole, and before aid could be obtained he drowned. His body was quickly recovered and rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, in Lakewood, where physicians worked over him for several hours without avail.

He was about twenty-one years of age. His mather and sister, who are at Lakewood, are prostrated. His body will be taken to New York for interment.

To Rebuild Station in Jersey City.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey will rebuild its station at Jackson avenue, Jersey City, before the middle of next summer. This news was confirmed yesterday by W. G. Besler, vice president and general manager. Larger waiting rooms and larger platforms will be erected for both east and west bound trains.

WILL RECOMMEND 800 MILES OF GOOD ROADS

The State Highway Commission, appointed under authority of the last Legislature for the primary purpose of furthering the project of an ocean boulevard from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, agreed yesterday at Trenton to recommend to the next Legislature the construction of approximately eight hundred miles of strictly State roads. The commission is composed of Governor Fort, President Frelinguhysen of the Senate, Senator-elect Prince and Road Commissioner Gilkyson.

Roughly, the plan is to devote the moneys received through the State automobile department to the construction and maintenance of roads over which the State shall have absolute control. As a first step in this direction it is proposed to connect by the most improved type of roads the various county seats throughout the State. These would form main arteries of travel by which automobilists could get to any point in the State upon roads equal or superior to any of which New Jersey now boasts.

By this means an object lesson in road construction would be given to every county, and it is the belief of the commission that it would increase the local incentive for building good roads.

CAUGHT WITH BURGLARS' TOOLS

Men Held in Newark Alleged to Have Prison Records.

Joseph Burns, alias "Joe Edwards," alias "Bill Travis," of Brooklyn, and Ralph Rubens, alias "George Moore," of New York, were committed to jail in default of $5,000 bail each by Judge Hahn yesterday at Newark on a charge of carrying burglars' tools.

The men were also alleged to have had skeleton keys and a quantity of cyanide of potassium in their possession. John E. Howard, who was found in a room with Rubens when he was arrested, was discharged. It is said that Burns is wanted by the Sing Sing prison authorities for having broken his parole. Rubens is said to have served four years in Sing Sing for burglary.

Wanted to Be "Barley King."

It was his ambition to be "barley king" of Germary that induced Fritz Marx to resort to swindling to acquire the capital. That is the confession Marx has made to Judge Carey, of the Hudson county court, who sentenced him to seven years in the New Jersey penitentiary a few days ago for swindling Steneck & Co., the Hoboken bankers, out of $44,250 by bogus letters of credit.

BOY POLICEMAN TRIES TO DIE.

Youngest Member of the Atlantic City Force Shoots Himself.

Lawrence Wood, the yongest man on the police force at Atlantic City, and known to thousands of visitors as the "boy policeman," shot himself at his home yesterday morning. To his wife, who ran to his aid, he said: "Don't bother with a doctor for I want to die!"

Wood was known as the "happy boy" of the force. He was in good health, had an apparently perfectly happy home life with his wife and little daughter, and had never made any mention of financial troubles. He has a slight chance of recovery.

Living Cost Squeezes Police.

Asserting that the cost of living had increased to such an extent that they could not exist on $60 a month, at Belleville, the members of the police force at that place petitioned the aldermen last night for an increase in salary. Butter is 40 cents a pound, turkey 32 cents a pound and eggs 45 cents a dozen.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Novelized From Forbes' Play of the Same Name by JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1905, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"Why don't you leave us?" she demanded coldly. "What do you want me to do? What more do you want me to say? I love this man. He's everything to me and you're nothin' to me."

Mallory and her mother gazed at her, stunned, shocked, by this declaration.

"Don't stand lookin' at me like that—go—go!" she ordered impatiently.

Slowly Mallory and Mrs. O'Brien went out.

Patsy and Crawford stood gazing after them until the sound of the shutting of the front door by Rogers apprised them that they had really gone. Then Patsy's tortured heart could bear no more and she burst into tears. A long drawn "Oh-o-o!" escaped through her quivering lips, and she stiffened and twisted her arms in her suffering.

Crawford was moved by the sight to a semblance of generosity.

"You needn't mind about that money—you needn't pay," he said patronizingly, taking a seat by the table.

The man's cynical assumption that to a woman in her station of life money was a salve the application of which would there and then heal all heart wounds, dry all tears, make wrong right, was too much for the girl, already goaded to the verge of distraction. She dashed the tear from her eyes with her hand and turned upon him passionately.

"Needn't pay! I needn't pay!" she ejaculated. "I have paid—paid with my good name, with my mother's trust, with the love of the man I've loved all my life. That's what I've paid to save my little sister from you—you beast! You pay? No! It's the woman that pays—and pays—and pays!"

She walked to the bedroom door and flung it open.

"Come, Nora!" she commanded. "You're safe now."

Nora came forth, and without another word the two girls left.

Crawford, who had listened to Patsy's scathing rebuke shamefacedly, bent forward, with his arms on his knees, did not even look up as they passed him on their way to the street.

CHAPTER XIV.

FOR a time after Mallory had left him O'Brien "consumed himself with patience," but the minutes, that seemed to have lengthened into a thousand seconds each, accumulated until his absence, which was to have lasted half an hour, just the time to bring Mrs. O'Brien back, had extended considerably over an hour. The old man could contain himself no longer and started after Mallory and his wife.

Meanwhile Crawford had been reviewing the exciting events that had succeeded each other so quickly that night and almost had culminated in a disgraceful fight. First there was Nora, with her role of innocence so cleverly played, who had been getting money and presents out of him and fooling him. He was entirely cured of any infatuation he had felt for her. Then there was Patsy, who for the second time had dressed him down, sat upon him and rubbed it in by putting him through the disagreeable process of being shown up to himself. Finally there was the low stableman with whom he had associated, who had bullied him and threatened him with personal violence. With Mallory at least he would get even, and at once, by immediate dissolution of partnership and pressure for settlement of their affairs. This, he knew, would put Mallory to sore straits, owing to his lack of ready money and the onerous conditions of their contract. Mallory, in fact, would be placed in such a position that he would not be able to carry on the stable. Practically it would mean ruin for him and, therefore, for the whole O'Brien family. From this prospect Crawford derived some consolation for his wounded feelings and ruffled temper.

"I'll teach the whole dirty crowd that they bucked up against the wrong man," he muttered. "I'll have those girls fired from the Long Acre not later than tomorrow, and it won't be my fault if they succeed in getting, or at least in keeping, another engagement in little old New York."

He was pacing up and down, savoring in advance the fruit of revenge, when Rogers announced that O'Brien wished to see him.

"Tell O'Brien to go to hades and throw him down the elevator shaft if he gives you any back talk," he ordered.

"Very good, sir," said the valet.

"No; let him come in," called Crawford, suddenly changing his mind.

O'Brien, hat in hand, was ushered in. Crawford received him defiantly.

"What do you want?" he demanded shortly.

"Oi came after me wolfe, who came to fetch Nora," replied the old man, his blue eyes fixing him fearlessly.

"Your wife went away from here with Mallory some time ago," said Crawford. "The whole family appears to be coming here one after the other."

"God knows Oi doan't want to trouble ye anny, an' Oi didn't come here to pay no social call," retorted the old man, "but Oi've a roight to fetch me own wolfe an' a roight to know if it's true that Nora comes here."

"Ask your wife, ask Mallory. I've told them all I intend to say. I'm tired of answering to one set of fools a pack of lies told by other fools, and I'm through with the whole gang. All I get for taking an interest in your precious girls and being kind to them is ingratitude and abuse. Here's a note for $300 I lent them to get them out of a hole. It's signed with your name, as you can see. Here, take it and give it to them as a souvenir if they or you haven't the decency to make good."

He handed the note to the old man, who gazed alternately at him and the paper, too bewildered to comprehend it for a moment.

"D'ye mean to say me girls borrowed $300 av ye in my name?" he asked.

"That's what they did," affirmed Crawford. "And it's up to you to pay."

"Oi can't pay!" said the old man, aghast. "Oi haven't got $300 in the world, leave alone in me pocketbook."

Crawford shrugged his shoulders and, refusing the paper O'Brien held out to him, turned on his heels.

"Well, being swindled out of $300 more or less won't ruin me," he said. "I suppose it was only what I ought to have expected, seeing the class of people I have been fool enough to deal with."

The old man put his hand on the fellow's shoulder and swung him around.

"See here, Mister Crawford," he said calmly, but with a hard glitter in his eyes. "Oi'm no swindler an' no fool, but an honest man, Oi'd have ye understand. Oi can hold up me head before me Maker an' say that no one in the world or out of it iver lost a penny owed by me or suffered anny wrong done by me. Oi doan't know phwat this means. Oi doan't know yit the meanin' av annything Oi've heered this night. But Oi will know, an' that mighty soon, an' those that disarve it will git all that's comin' to them, whoever they may be, ye can bank on that."

The old man went out without saying good night and started downtown, grimly determined to get at the bottom of this matter of the note, of the disappearance of his daughters and of all that he had heard. In presence of Crawford, to whom he had gone with the idea of finding out what there was to the stories that linked Nora's name with his and of "skinning him alive," as he had mentally expressed it, if he found even the remotest justification for the suspicion that Crawford had been trying to lead her astray, he had stood confounded by the evidence of the debt contracted. For what possible purpose could the girls have needed $300? For furnishing their flat? No; this, they had told him, had been done on the installment plan, and everything had been paid up. Then for what? And how had they dared to sign his name to this promise of payment?

In his bewilderment he did not take notice of where he was going and, getting on the wrong side of the street, boarded an uptown car. He did not discover his error until the car came to a stop at the extremity of the line. By the time he reached the hotel where Mallory had instructed him to wait it was nearly 1 o'clock in the morning. There Mallory had left word for him to join them at the home of the girls.

It was Rochefoucauld who remarked that our virtues disappear when put in competition with our interests, as rivers lose themselves in the ocean. This observation applied in a measure to Nora O'Brien. Self abnegation, "that rare virtue that good men preach and good women practice" and which entered so largely into Patsy's moral makeup, was wholly lacking in that of her younger sister. Nora had been unable to bear all of the conversation that followed Patsy's egress from the bedroom, but she had been able to catch enough from Mallory's loud tones to understand what was happening. Very soon it had become clear to her that the entire opprobrium of the situation brought about by her own foolishness and the efforts of her sister to save her was being borne by Patsy. She had heard the voice of her mother raised in denunciation of the girl and Mallory's bitter taunt, indicating that all between them was over, but she had not had the courage to go out and face her share of the "music" to clear Patsy by telling the truth. Crawford's outburst had frightened her, and she had remained trembling, fearful of the outcome, and allowed her sister to sacrifice herself. Nor had she breathed easily until Patsy had called her forth with the assurance that there was no further danger.

Increases Employes' Wages.

Elizabeth, Dec. 23.—More than 100 of the employes of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company were elated yesterday because the company has given them an increase in wages. The top men will receive 20 cents an hour instead of 18 cents an hour, and the trimmers will be advanced 2 cents an hour. The present scale is 28 cents an hour. The men made the demand on B. H. Williams, the shipper, who immediately granted their request.

Won't Provide Gym.

The Westfield Board of Education has decided that it cannot take advantage of the offer of the Woman's Club to install shower baths, lockers and paraphernalia for a gymnasium in Washington School. There is need of a new school and the maintenance of this department would increase the tax budget $1,400.

"LITTLE TIM" DIES; THE BOWERY MOURNS

New York, Dec. 23.—Alderman Timothy P. Sullivan ("Little Tim"), died at 6:30 o'clock last night in his home, 212 East Twelfth street, and all the Bowery mourns. He had been unconscious most of the day. During the brief periods when he came out of the coma, his mind was very clear. For about an hour just preceding his death he was conscious and keenly sensitive to what was going on around him. He knew he was going to die. Dr. Joseph M. Creamer, his family physician, gave the indirect cause of death as Bright's disease and the immediate cause as endocarditis.

Mr. Sullivan was born in New York nearly fifty years ago and at an early age went to Boston. He did not stay there long and when he came back here he was dubbed "Boston" and was known as such for a long time. He did not have much of the schoolroom training, but the education of the streets brought him up, and he learned much that was wisdom and valuable knowledge. He was a close student, although he did not call himself a "student."

For a while he was a messenger around the old Tombs prison and used to "run copy" for the newspaper men in the days when telephones were not so conspicuous as now. His fortunes developed with those of "Big Tim" Sullivan, his cousin. The "Big Fellow" took "Little Tim" up to Albany as his secretary, and for a while "Little Tim" served in the Legislature. But that was not what he cared for He went into the Board of Aldermen and was Democratic leader of that body when he died. At one time he was ex-officio acting Mayor.

Always careful and perhaps finicky in the matter of dress, "Little Tim" was ever the dandy. He was choice in his speech. He had accumulated a nice vocabulary, because he had read much and had listened.

In manner, speech and appearance then he did not look the typical Bowery leader. But he knew life. He knew New York. He knew the people of the Bowery. He played politics and he played the game to win, and he never drank or smoked. He bought wine, but he never drank it. He said that no man in politics could afford to drink.

"Little Tim" and "Big Tim" had been partners, one might say, from the beginning. He left a large fortune. A widow and a son 12 years of age survive him.

MURDERS HIS WIFE; HE GETS FIFTEEN YEARS.

Teaneck, Dec. 23.—In the Supreme Court here yesterday William E. Westervelt, a wealthy contractor, was sentenced to fifteen years in State prison for the murder of his wife in June last. Westervelt changed his plea of not guilty to non vult. He was sentenced by Justice Charles W. Parker.

Since his arrest Westervelt has been continually crying and moaning in his cell, and it was thought that a defense based on the ground of insanity would be made in his behalf.

Yesterday in court he kept up the crying, and after sentence had been pronounced he had to be helped out of the courtroom by constables.

The prosecutor said that it would be impossible to establish a charge of murder in the first degree against the prisoner, as there was no apparent motive for the murder and neither were there any eyewitnesses to the crime. He had, therefore, decided to accept a plea of non vult to a charge of murder in the second degree.

Both Westervelt and his wife belonged to well-known families in Teaneck. At midnight on June 16 Westervelt was found wandering along the Queen Anne road shouting, "I've shot Irene." Two neighbors accompanied him to his house and there found Mrs. Westervelt dead.

DELAWARE IS ICE BOUND.

All River Traffic is Suspended Above Bordentown.

Trenton, Dec. 23.—The upper Delaware River Navigation Company was compelled to suspend navigation Tuesday between Trenton and Bordentown, the river from shore to shore being covered with ice nearly two inches thick.

One of the company's boats made the trip to Trenton Monday, and on the return it was necessary to get out tugs to break the ice. Several sand dredges have been frozen in near Bordentown and tugs have been sent out to cut them out and tow them back to Philadelphia.

Baskets Full of Checks.

Elizabeth, Dec. 23.—It required three big baskets to hold all the letters received in the tax office here yesterday. The letters contained checks in payment of taxes. As a result the employes in the office will have to work day and night. It is believed that the number of delinquents this year will be smaller than previously.

—Harry Foulks, nephew of H. S. Sanderson, has resigned his position at Proctor's theatre, Perth Amboy, and taken a position in New York city.

U. S. SENATOR FALLS DEAD FROM CHAIR.

Brandon, Miss., Dec. 23.—While seated in an easy chair in front of the fireplace in his library, in his home here, United States Senator A. J. McLaurin, late yesterday after noon, suddenly fell forward and died as members of his family hurried to his assistance. Just before he was stricken Senator McLaurin remarked that he was feeling better and would be able to resume his place in the Senate after Christmas. Physicians say death was due to heart disease.

Senator McLaurin had been ill for two weeks as a result of eating fried oysters for breakfast, which brought on ptomaine poisoning. At first his condition was critical, but he improved and the physicians thought danger was past.

It is not believed that Governor Noel will appoint a successor, but will leave the choice to the Legislature, which meets next month. It is certain that former Governor Vardaman, who was defeated for the Senate by John Sharp Williams, will be a candidate to succeed McLaurin.

TO THE "GOOD FELLOWS" OF PLAINFIELD

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS OF PLAINFIELD:

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I have tried for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press was asked to aid in reaching the good fellow by publishing this suggestion and to receive your communication in order that you may be assured of good faith and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll od a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

The Daily Press has investigated the "good fellow" who wrote the above, has looked him in the eye and put its O. K. on the plan. The cold blooded blase reporter who saw him wrote: "He made me feel, personally, that it would be really worth while in satisfaction to carry a little happiness to some children who otherwise wouldn't get any on Christmas eve." "Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of from fifteen to twenty children a year in Plainfield. He said that last Christmas day he wished he had curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might nave had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through school teachers, investigators of various organizations who work in poverty stricken districts and others who come in contact with those whom we always have with us. Lists of worthy cases will be welcomed from such organizations as the Charity Organization Society, Salvation Army, King's Daughters, and churches of all demoninations. These lists should be verified and certified to by the officers of the organizations submitting them and should be arranged by wards and divisions of the city.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus" care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.———— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.
John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come in, good fellows.

XMAS DAY CELEBRATIONS

Orders of Service in Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal Churches.

MUSIC IS TO BE ELABORATE.

Hours for Communion and for Masses Announced by the Rectors in City and Borough.

Christmas services in the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches in this city and North Plainfield tomorrow, Christmas day, will be of unusual interest, including the attractive musical programs which always accompany them.

One of the features of the Church of the Holy Cross, Episcopal, in North Plainfield is the magnificent decorations. The whole church interior looks like and gives one the feeling of a huge Christmas tree. There are about fifty trees arranged within this Gothic structure and festoons of Christmas greens are tastefully arranged among the arches.

There will be three services at Holy Cross tomorrow morning, one at 6, one at 8 and the final one at 11 o'clock. At each of these services Holy Communion will be observed and at the 11 o'clock service there will be morning prayer with sermon and communion. At Grace P. E. there will be three similar services, the hours being 7, 8 and 11 o'clock.

In the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Episcopal, the hours of service will be the same as at Grace. This church will have an augmented choir for the occasion and special music will be sung. The Christmas services for the entertainment of the children will be held on Tuesday evening in the parish house. The music sung tomorrow will be repeated on Sunday morning.

Following are the programs of music at the various churches of this denomination:

Holy Cross—At the 11 o'clock service—Processional hymn, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," Mendelssohn; Venite, chant, Gilbert; Te Deum in F, Steane; Jubilate, chant; Introit, Angels from the Realms of Glory, Smart; Kyrie in F, Tours; Gloria Tibi in F, Tours; Credo in C, Tours; hymn, "Come Hither Ye Faithful," Reading; offertory anthem, There Were Shepherds, Vincent; Sanctus in F, Tours; Agnus Dei in F,Tours; Gloria in Excelsis in C, Tours; Nunc Dimitus, Barnby and recessional, O Little Town of Bethlehem, Reading.

The music to be rendered in Grace Episcopal church will be as follows:

Processional, hymn 49, Mendelssohn; Venite Tone V, Gregorian; Te Deum in B flat, Stainer; Jubilate in C, Jordan; introit, hymn 539; communion service in C, Hall; hymn 539; offertory anthem; Nunc Dimittis, Tonus Regius, Gregorian; recessional, hymn 51.

At St. Stephen's church there will be two services, one at 7:30 and the other at 10 o'clock. The service at 7:30 will be the regular communion service and at 10 o'clock there will be morning prayer and communion. At the latter Hatton's "Hosanna to the Son of David" and Staines' "O Zion That Bringest Good Tidings" will be sung.

On Sunday, which is St. Stephen's day, there will be two services at the same hour as on Saturday, 7:30 and at 11 o'clock, at which special music will be sung. H. Raymond Loder will be the soloist and the sermon will be preached by Rev. Henry A. Dexter. A cordial welcome will be extended to all who attend these services.

St. Peter's Lutheran church will hold a service tomorrow morning at 10:30, at which there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion.

First Candidate to Preach.

Rev. Herbert B. Hutchins, of Lewiston, Maine, will preach at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning and night. Mr. Hutchins comes here as the first candidate to be invited by the pulpit committee and will doubtless be listened to with much interest.

Elks to Provide Cheer.

District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler W. Atwood, of Hackensack, visited Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., Wednesday night. The Elks following the annual custom will provide good cheer for needy persons.

Worship On Christmas Day.

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock there will be an hour's service at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The full choir will be present and there will be a brief sermon by the pastor.

Children's Home Festival.

The Children's Home will hold its Christmas entertainment on Thursday afternoon, December 30. All donations will be most gratefully received.

JUSTICE ROGERS HAS A HARD LUCK TALE

Justice Clark T. Rogers, of New Market, the prize hog raiser of this vicinity, bumped into "Old Hard Luck" twice during the past two weeks. The two collisions resulted in a loss of $163 in cold cash to the New Market dispenser of justice, quite a jolt when the holiday season is taken into consideration.

About two weeks ago Mr. Rogers took a trip to this city with two fifty dollar yellowbacks in his wallet. While on his journey the wallet and contents slipped from his coat pocket, and nothing was heard of the money.

The second loss occurred yesterday, when a thief entered his mill at New Market, "lifted" $63, and decamped without leaving his identity. Charles Randolph, of this city, who is Mr. Rogers' miller, after making up his accounts, left the money and papers on a desk and stepped outside of the mill for a few moments. When Randolph returned the money and papers were missing.

SPANISH SWINDLER IS CAUGHT AT LAST

Through the efforts of Counselor Welcome W. Bender, of Elizabeth, connected with the law firm of Keasby & Keasby, Newark, a worker of the "Spanish swindle" has been arrested. Central Office detectives, working with postoffice inspectors under the direction of Mr. Bender, yesterday arrested in the Grand Central Hotel, New York, Charles W. Adams, said to be the oldest confidence man in the country.

The attention of Keasby & Keasby was called to the swindle with the result that Mr. Bender was put to work on the case. He worked out the trap by which the detectives were able to get the man, who, under the name of James T. Southwick, had been receiving his mail at the Bayonne postoffice and making his headquarters at the various New York hotels.

The plan that Adams has been working is very simple. It consists in addressing letters to foreigners who are known to have recently died or their heirs, notifying them that they have been left a large interest in a valuable mining property in some out-of-the-way locality. The writer asks that a representative be sent over to negotiate the purchase of property adjoining the supposed mines.

Sometimes the writer explains that at some date long past he was aided by the deceased in buying a gold or a coal mine. The investment having paid handsomely, the writer, in gratitude, desires to have a reckoning and to pay back to the estate or to the dead man's kinsmen a substantial amount. This is supposed to be attractive enough to lure someone across the sea. Once here the victim is induced to put up a certain sum of money to defray the expenses incidental to the transfer of the property.

Originally the bait held out was a deposit of gold or jewels by some forgotten relative, who died in a Spanish prison after a life of adventure. That was the device which gave the swindle its name. Every once in a while in the last thirty years this famous old fraud bobs up. The last conviction for operating it of which the postoffice inspectors here have record was in Philadelphia in 1906.

According to the police, Southwick, or Adams, and his associates have picked up from $25,000 to $50,000 lately by working the ancient swindle. A William Lea, presumably of England, is said to have been a recent victim to the extent of $23,000. Until lately the swindlers have been using the Bayonne postoffice exclusively. Then they began using New York hotels.

An attempt was made three years ago to work the game on a well-known Elizabethan, the letter coming from across the water. The letter read like a page from a popular novel. There was a Dolores, ravishingly beautiful, who was a 'steenth cousin of the Elizabethan, and in order that she might get possession of certain treasure, it would be necessary to go through legal formalities. Then a half and half division would be made of the wealth, and it was even hinted that the Elizabethan might prevail upon the wonderful Dolores to give him her hand in marriage. But—those legal formalities; it would cost just—etc. It is needless to say that the Elizabethan did not fall, for he had heard of the game before.

FRUIT GROWERS CHEER JOS. S. FRELINGHUYSEN

Standing in the place usually occupied by the clerk of the house of assembly in session of the Legislature, President Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of the New Jersey Senate, told the horticulturists yesterday at Trenton that he never saw better evidences of the prosperity of the fruit-growing which on all sides surrounded him, and made the members of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society come to their feet with a vote of thanks when he told them in a gem of a speech that prosperity can come to New Jersey only through the farmer and the fruit grower.

Senator Frelinghuysen was a distinguished guest of the society for the afternoon. His presence in the State House was discovered and he was immediately invited to address the society. He told them that while the chartering of corporations paid large sums into the State treasury for the running of the State government, this was not a gauge of the prosperity of the people, and nothing was the gauge besides the prosperity of the man who made things grow out of the earth.

Senator Frelinghuysen told the fruit growers that their work was known the length and breadth of the land, that the Jersey fruit grower was recognized as a scientist, and that he would stand by the agricultural interests in his legislative work. He was warmly applauded for his fine speech.

The session yesterday was replete with technical information. Officers will be elected today and the society adjourn finally.

MEN'S CLUB OF CHURCH OF HEAVENLY REST MEETS.

The men's club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest held their regular meeting last night and reports were received from the various committees. Great preparations are in progress for the entertainment to be given on January 12. The membership committee reported favorably on the application of John D. Doerg, who will probably be admitted at the next meeting.

There will be a special meeting of the club on December 30 for the distribution of the tickets for the entertainment. The president desires a large attendance at the next business meeting on January 27 as matters of considerable importance will come up.

Another matter which the club thinks deserves the attention of the Board of Health and the Street Commissioner was brought up and the secretary instructed to call to the attention of these bodies the condition of Clinton avenue and West Front street. Joel Pennington was appointed a member of the press committee after which the meeting was thrown open for social enjoyment.

To Hold Second Reunion.

The second annual reunion and dance of the class of 1908 of the City High School will be held in the Fanwood fire house on the night of Thursday, December 30. The members of the class who have moved out of town since graduation and those who have been studying at college will return for the reunion. The details for the affair, including several novel features, have been finished, and a complete success is assured.

T. Y. Bainbridge Visiting Here.

T. Y. Bainbridge, formerly of this city, but now of East Marinette, Wis., is visiting his sister, Miss Bainbridge, of this city. Mr. Bainbridge was the first secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. This is his first visit here in many years and his sister had changed so that he scarcely recognized her when the two met. Mr. Bainbridge is engaged in the wholesale fish business at East Marinette.

Wedded Nine Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McVoy, of West Fourth street, observed the ninth anniversary of their wedding last night by entertaining a number of their friends at a "euchre." It was a delightful affair and Mr. and Mrs. McVoy were the recipients of many congratulations and well wishes for many more years of wedded bliss.

Salvation Army Xmas.

The local corps of the Salvation Army will distribute Xmas dinners to 500 poor families tonight. The baskets will contain chicken, potatoes, butter, coffee, sugar, bread and oranges. On Thursday night 200 children will be made happy at a Christmas entertainment.

Mrs. I. C. Davis to Speak.

Mrs. Isabella C. Davis, of this city, prominent in the King's Daughters, will deliver a special address at the Salvation Army headquarters Sunday night at 8 o'clock. There will be a holiness meeting at 11 o'clock in the morning and Sunday school at 2:30 o'clock.

IT BEATS ALL CREATION

How Santa Claus Makes the Postoffice "Hurry-up" Squad Work.

POSTMASTER IS NOT FEAZED.

Additional Force Necessary to Handle Biggest Business in Local History.

Postmaster E. H. Bird and his large corps of assistants, carriers, clerks and helpers, are now experiencing the biggest rush in the history of the local postoffice. The busy time began about two weeks ago and since then it has been increasing rapidly. Through the courtesy of the postmaster, a reporter for The Daily Press was allowed to take a look at the "inside" of the office this morning.

To the inexperienced, it would seem impossible to clear the office of mail within a couple of weeks, but Mr. Bird assured the reporter that if all goes well, it will be delivered tomorrow. There may be some delay regarding the postal cards, for at 8:30 o'clock this morning there was approximately 30,000 of them at the office and more than a quarter of that number came in this morning.

Every available bit of space in the office is being used for mail and the full force is hard at work clearing up as fast as possible. One can judge of the amount of work to be done, when it is known that fully seventy-five sacks of mail went out at 1:28 last night, and almost an equal number at 9:40. To offset this practically as many sacks of incoming mail have been received. It includes everything from postal cards to the largest size packages allowed to pass through the mail.

"Uncle Sam" will not allow his postal employes to work but eight hours a day, but at such a time as this it is impossible to strictly adhere to that rule. Under present conditions it would not be surprising if the men should go over the allotted time.

The Government makes a certain allowance for helpers at this time, and nearly every carrier and clerk has his assistant. Horses and wagone will be pressed into service tomorrow to get the mail out. But one delivery will be possible in the outskirts of the city, while Mr. Bird hopes to maintain the four deliveries in the business section.

With such a rush of business there are many amusing incidents and it affords an excellent opportunity to see how careles some people can be. Mr. Bird has in his office a small package bearing no address and only a ten cent stamp. Inside is written "From Laura to Lucy," and "Card from Ma." The package contains some expensive embroidery, but unless Mr. Bird gets the address it will never reach its destination in time for Christmas.

Another thing that has caused much confusion is the sale of Red Cross stamps in the lobby of the office. Many persons have purchased these stamps, placed them on letters or packages and expect they will be delivered. A large amount of mail was found at the office this morning held for want of proper postage.

Other people have purchased expensive postal cards, put stamps on them and then placed them inside of waxed paper envelopes. This is an infraction of the rules and such mail cannot be forwarded, neither can the kind where a hole is cut about the place left for the stamp. Hundreds of such postals are held at the office because the government will not allow them to be forwarded.

In addition to the regular staff of employes at the office, a number of boys have been engaged as helpers. All during the day the mail appeared to come in much faster than it could be delivered. Every employe is rushed to the limit of his capacity, carriers, clerks and while Mr. Bird and his assistant, James Martin, are doing their share of the work. A. E. LaPorte, who has charge of the incoming and outgoing mail, is fairly swamped with work, but he and all the rest of the employes are as happy as can be and are only too anxious to get rid of the mail.

The full force will work late tonight and tomorrow, when it is hoped that practically all of the mail will be cleaned up and delivered. Mr. Bird says that according to the records this year's business will far surpass any in the history of the office.

Fined for Stealing Coal.

Six women and one man, all residents of Dunellen, were arrested for stealing coal off of cars by Jersey Central detectives this morning. All were arraigned before Recorder Campbell and each fined two dollars.

—There will be no issue of this paper tomorrow.

540 POOR LITTLE ONES WILL KNOW XMAS JOYS

To the Good Fellows:

It was of no use for Miss Holly, of the Charity Organization Society, to tell you Good Fellows to "cut it out" when 484 had been assured a merry Christmas. She told me today that 530 poor little people have been provided for and that that number will have toys, games, etc. This would have been impossible had it not been for a bunch of big hearted and red blooded fellows to whom fortune has been kinder. More responses have come in since and the probability is that the total number of good little girls and boys to be given Christmas cheer will be 540.

Yes, some mistakes have been made in addresses. But that's not the fault of the committee. These good people gave to the Santa Claus, in each instance, the addresses furnished, and, maybe, there have been some changes in residence since then.

Through the generous offer of the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company, an automobile has been placed at the disposal of Rev. George A. Warner for the afternoon. The clergyman is acting as proxy for many who cannot find time to act as Santa Claus themselves. The Martin car is piled high with gifts for the poor little youngsters. Tonight, through the kindness of E. M. Van Buren, Rev. Mr. Warner will continue his tour as a proxy Santa Claus.

Most of the Good Fellows will distribute their gifts tonight. I know of one man who is going to dress himself as Santa and go in his auto to the homes of the poor. Again I say, God Bless You.

A GOOD FELLOW.

CHRISTMAS EXERCISES AT CLINTON AVENUE SCHOOL.

The exercises of the pupils of the Clinton avenue school took place yesterday afternoon at 1:30 before a large audience of parents. One of the pleasing features of the day was the two large Christmas trees adorned with the work of the pupils of the school. Some of the artistry displayed amazed the visitors. But one thing was proved and that is the fact that the little pupils of this school are learning how to make their hands accomplish the things which they were intended for. Some of the articles shown on the tree displayed a sense of art rarely discernible in the young.

A Stocking Brigade and other exercises were beautifully executed by the youngsters and the pride of the parents was plainly visible in their faces. Recitations and songs concluded a pleasing program in which "The Arrival of Santa" was a conspicuous figure.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

An early decision is expected with regard to the selecting of a course for the next amateur championship tournament of the Metropolitan Golf Association. In discussing the subject Wednesday night W. D. Vanderpool, the secretary, stated that it would be unfair to the clubs to defer action until spring if for no other reason than that it would not give the successful applicant sufficient time to make such improvements and changes as might be deemed advisable.

It will be remembered that at the annual meeting of the metropolitan body last week no fewer than four applications were received for the tournament. Delegates from the Morris County, Midland, Fox Hills and Montclair clubs asked for the privilege, and incidentally confronted the executive committee with an unusual situation. Heretofore this attraction has gone begging. The only one of the four that has had this championship is Fox Hills. The national amateur championship tournament was held at Morris County in 1898, and a few years ago Archie Graham won the New Jersey title there. Montclair was the scene of the New Jersey tournament last summer, but thus far no important competition has been decided over the Salisbury links, where the Midland club has its headquarters.

It is the intention of Mr. Vanderpool to make the year book of the Metropolitan Golf Association more complete and attractive. He is about to undertake the task of compiling a summary of the annual championship tournaments since they began in 1899. Thus far no application has been received for the metropolitan open.

FARMER ENDS LIFE.

Family with Presents for Him Find Man Dead.

Pitman, Dec. 24.—John Friant, 42 years old, a prosperous farmer of Ewan, six miles from here, committed suicide by hanging Wednesday. Mrs. Friant and her adopted daughter were Christmas shopping here when the tragedy occurred. Each had bought presents for him. During their absence Friant had gone to the hayloft, and, after adjusting the rope to a rafter, had swung off, dropping twenty feet, breaking his neck. John Scott, Mrs. Friant's father, accompanied his daughter home from Pitman, and while putting the horse away discovered the suicide.

No reason can be given for the act except that Friant had brooded considerably over the sale of his farm some time ago. A man from Pennsylvania was in the neighborhood looking over the good farms. Friant gave him a price, and the man pulled out a roll of money and bought it on the spot.

KIDDO CALENDAR IN SUNDAY PAPER.

The North American will issue with its edition for Sunday, December 26, a most attractive calendar for 1910, an appropriate supplement for the season.

The calendar is reproduced by the photogravure process, the most artistic known to modern printing. The central figure of the design is "Kaptin Kiddo," the youngster that has been made so popular a feature of the comic section of The North American. This special portrait of the "Kaptin" is by Grace G. Wiederseim, his regular delineator. His New Year's address to the public has been penned for him by Margaret G. Hays, who writes his terrible tales every Sunday.

Those who are not North American readers, and who want the most attractive calendar of the season, should order Sunday's North American.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

None of the old familiar stage tricks are used in "The Climax" by Edward Locke, which is the new dramatic sensation that Joe Weber will offer local theatre-goers at the Plainfield theatre, December 31. It is a natural strong story, straight from the shoulder and convincing. It grips you every minute. Underneath it all is the accompaniment of most exquisite music from the inventive brain of Joseph Carl Breil.

A new and original drama, "The Call," will be presented by L. S. Sire on December 30 at the Plainfield theatre. The play is from the pen of Joseph Byron Totten. The scenes are laid in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains in Mexico. It tells the story of the love and hatred of a beautiful Spanish half-breed, a handsome Spanish bandit and a young American mining engineer, who is captured by the bandits and held for a ransom; of his escape and how in the end the beautiful Spanish girl loses her life all for her great love for the American. The production is complete in every detail and elaborately mounted.

"The best act on the vaudeville stage today," was what one heard as the audience passed out of Proctor's last night after witnessing "The Sign of the Rose." The story deals with the Black Hand and the horror it causes. The stage setting is a work of art, showing the interior of a florist's shop. Don't be one of those who regretted that they did not see it. Sola and Alice Rogers, in their "Rube" skit, are full of fun, songs and dances. Marie Bergere, known as Eva Tanguay, Jr., is a clever impersonator and the boys will enjoy hearing her sing "I Don't Care." "Thoma" and her wonderful horse Indian Chief is a beautiful act, and will be enjoyed by all lovers of horses.

Proctor & Sanderson have outdone themselves by presenting this fine Christmas offering. Don't miss seeing it.

She Gets a Divorce.

A divorce case which has been pending for a long time has just been brought to a successful conclusion by Counsellor George Ball, the solicitor for the petitioner. The case was one brought by Anna C. Farrell, formerly of this city, but now of Newark, for divorce from her husband, John P. Farrell, who at the time of the marriage was an employe of a Newark hospital. The cause alleged was desertion, the couple having lived together but a week. There was difficulty in getting service of process on the defendant, and it was hard to get the proper proof owing to the witnesses having moved to England. The testimony was taken last summer, and the Chancellor has just approved the findings and granted a decree.

At Proctor's.

George Beban and the associated actors will produce the "Sign of the Rose" tomorrow four times. This is one of the finest acts ever brought to this city. The theatre will open its doors tomorrow at 12 and there will be a continuous performance until midnight.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Santa Claus paid his annual visit last night to the Baptist Sunday school; the members and their friends were out in force to welcome the old fellow. The church was prettily trimmed in holiday attire in honor of the event. A pleasing program of carols and stereopticon views were enjoyed, after which Santa Claus made his appearance and helped in the distribution of gifts. Everyone received some pleasant reminder of Yuletide. The pastor, Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, was remembered in a substantial way, receiving a purse of money.

Tomorrow being Christmas day, the town in general will enjoy a holiday. The residents in general have had a prosperous year and the day should be a happy one. No special program has been arranged, but a number of family reunions will be held as in the past.

Miss Catherine Saunders, who is taking a course of study in one of the Canadian schools, is spending her holidays with her parents, Captain and Mrs. H. B. Saunders, of Washington Valley.

Santa Claus will pay his annual visit to the Methodist Sunday school tonight. Everyone is invited to be present and enjoy the good time which has been arranged.

Mrs. George Alberts is recovering from a severe attack of lumbago, which has detained her at home for several days.

Lynus Walpole has returned to his position with the Rushmore Dyamo Company, after a week's vacation.

Miss Caroline Lent, of the corps of teachers is spending Christmas week at her home at Palmyra, N. Y.

Mrs. George McVoy, of Plainfield, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. John H. Coles, of Park avenue.

MYSTERY IN CAUSE OF INJURED MAN'S DEATH.

Unable or unwilling to tell how he was injured, Anthony Peterson, twenty-nine years old, died in St. Barnabas' Hospital, Newark, Wednesday night from what the physicians think was a broken neck. Until County Physician McKenzie performs an autopsy today, the exact cause of Peterson's death will be unknown.

An unidentified person called up the First Precinct Police Station at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and told the desk sergeant that a man was lying, apparently badly hurt, in Frelinghuysen avenue, near Bigelow street. The ambulance was sent for the man, and he was taken to the hospital. His neck and back were so badly swollen that it could not be ascertained, until this was reduced, whether the neck was broken or whether Peterson was suffering from concussion of the spine.

MRS. LOUISE E. GUION GOES TO HER REWARD.

Mrs. Louise Esther Guion, widow of S. Seabury Guion, died this morning at her home on Crescent avenue. She had been an invalid for about a year, her death being due to diabetes. She had been a resident of Plainfield for a quarter of a century. At one time she was very active in the work of St. Stephen's church parish and during recent years equally so in Grace church parish, where she was greatly interested in all departments of work. Her husband, who died about fifteen years ago, was an appraiser in the Custom House, New York. The funeral service will be held at Grace church, Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock.

—Christmas Day will be observed by this paper. There will be no issue tomorrow.

Dredging Machine Breaks.

Elizabeth, Dec. 24.—The Federal government, as far as the dredging of a new channel in Staten Island Sound is concerned, was completely tied up Wednesday, when a chain of twenty-nine dredging buckets snapped and sank to the bottom. Owing to the weight of the buckets it will be necessary to secure a large derrick to raise them.

Delightful Action of Home Made Fat Reducer

Taking a teaspoonful three times a day after meals and at bedtime of this mixture—½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ oz. Peppermint Water, a simple mixture any druggist can supply— causes a delightfully easy and even sliding off of the fat. The first parts of the body to show its effect are usually those that are particularly objectionable, when overfat—viz., the double chin, hips, and fat-loaded abdomen. When these begin to decline the remedy seems to take notice of other over-fat parts, such as the shoulder blades, on which gathered fat causes round shoulders, and at the bust and ankles, where too much fat ruins many a fine woman's otherwise [illegible] to beauty.

The loss of fat is often as much as 14 ounces a day, but no ill effects or wrinkles are observed, because the receipt is perfectly natural in action. It causes the stomach to use up the excess fat in the food, and then the blood quickly burns up that already formed on the body.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The Trenton Lodge of Moose initiated over 200 candidates Wednesday night.

Mayor Ladd, of Woodbury, has a woman's hat which was found Monday night by a policeman. It is of superior quality, with an immense plume.

The Woodbury Board of Trade has taken a new lease on life, and after the annual meeting next month there promises to be something doing.

Atlantic City school officials provided teachers with Christmas money by handing in pay warrants in advance of the regular pay day, which falls on the end of the month.

Three hundred barrels of sweet potatoes were roasted on the farm of M. Zamovich when the storage house was consumed by fire. A bucket brigade saved the dwelling-house.

Members of the councils of Ventnor and Margate City, accompanied by other officials, inspected the new sewage-disposal plant in Asbury Park, with the view to installing a similar plant.

At an operation for appendicitis performed at the Physicians' Hospital, Vineland, two shot were found in the vermiform appendix, swallowed, it is believed, while the patient was eating rabbit.

Jorgen Moe, of Savannah, a representative business man of Georgia, is at Merchantville conferring with his brother, Christian Moe, relative to the introduction of New Jersey products in the South.

Dog Warden Leonard Groh makes complaint to the Mayor of Vineland that his Christmas money is continually running away. Some unidentified person has been unlocking the pound every night and liberating the dogs.

Leon Wilkeson, a young athlete, fireman on the drill engine of the Wood Foundry at Beverly, while jumping off to turn a switch Wednesday, slipped and fell under the wheels. One of his feet was severed. He was sent to the county hospital.

William Derry, a Camden negro, who has figured frequently in the local courts, was sentenced to five years in the State prison at hard labor by Justice Joline, after being convicted of a charge of atrocious assault and battery on Filipo Pauruo.

Patrolman Charles L. Ayres, who had been a member of the Trenton Police Department for about two years, was dismissed from the force at a special meeting Wednesday evening of the Board of Police Commissioners. Ayres was charged with failing to perform his duty.

Special Master in Chancery Robert Williams Wednesday had a hearing in Paterson in the divorce proceedings of Mrs. Jennie Harrington against her husband, Harry T. Harrington. The action was brought on grounds of desertion and a decree will be recommended.

The Paulsboro Board of Education will take stringent measures after the first of the year to compel pupils to attend the public schools regularly. Some time ago a truant officer was appointed to look after delinquents, but he found it the hardest work he has done.

The heroic work of William S Parry, wife and servants saved their home near Riverton from being destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The range in the kitchen caused the chimney to become overheated, and started a fire between the walls, where it smoldered for some time before being discovered by one of the servants.

Confessing the theft of jewelry valued at about $300 from the apartment house of Mrs. Ann Lawrence, 554 Benson street, William Hibbs was Wednesday sentenced to eighteen months in State prison by Judge Joline, in Camden. The police learned that Hibbs served sentences in Philadelphia and Peoria, Ill., on similar charges, always visiting apartment houses, where, he said, he usually found the doors unlocked.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

"The play is the thing," but add to a good play a liberal production, a superior company, and the best of stage direction, and you have a still greater thing. "A Working Man's Wife," the new melodrama which A. E. Woods will offer at the Plainfield theatre on Christmas, matinee and night, is the work of Walter Lawrence, who has written more successful plays of this sort than any other five men put together—so much for the piece itself. The production is guaranteed to be the best as it comes from the office of the largest producer of melodrama in the country; the same argument holds good in respect to the company and its performance. The day has come when people buy from the brand and the rule applies to plays. The public does not care to risk its money or its time on plays for which they have no assurance will amount to anything. The good plays are always taken by the big producers and A. H. Woods feels as though he had pulled off a coup on the other managers in getting "A Working Man's Wife," as it is said to be one of the best pieces of theatrical property ever put upon the boards.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Plainfield people endorse this:

Mrs. E. Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says:

"About three years ago I was suffering severely from kidney trouble. There were dull, heavy pains in my back and in the top of my head. I also had dizzy spells and I was subject to chills. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and I began their use. They promptly drove away my trouble and I have had no symptom of a return since."

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

So long as she herself had escaped nothing mattered much. Mallory's break with Patsy did not strike her as being serious. Patsy would easily be able to square herself with him by explaining the facts, and they between them would find some means of hushing them up and of placating her mother. And, anyhow, it was Patsy's own fault. What did she want to follow her about for and mix up in things that did not concern her? She forgot that she had looked to her sister to help her out of the predicament in which she had found herself at the theater and her fear of facing her parents because of the forged note. All she cared to remember was that she had been certain of getting the note herself. It was true she had been afraid of Crawford. The violence of his declaration of love had alarmed her. But she felt sure that he would not have persisted in face of the protest, for he was such a nice man and liked her so much. The more she thought about it the more she came to look upon herself as a martyr to Patsy's interfering proclivities and assumption of the right to boss her. She was deeply resentful also of Patsy's rough treatment of her in the bedroom and of the fact that her sister should have dared to suspect her of having "gone to the bad." The net result of this meddling, as she figured it, was that Patsy had stirred up a row between Crawford and Mallory that had caused them to end their partnership, got herself into trouble with Mallory and her mother, offended Crawford so deeply that it was doubtful whether her own former pleasant relations with him, which might have ended in a brilliant marriage, could be resumed and, after all, had not succeeded in getting the note.

The latter fact Nora ascertained by questioning Patsy when they found themselves in the street. The reflections outlined above came afterward while a cab, which Patsy fetched herself while Nora remained in the hallway at her sister's request so that she should not walk on the street in her satin slippers, was bearing them to their home. The journey was made in silence, save for Nora's query and Patsy's answer to it. When the cab neared the street in which they lived Patsy, saying that she would come later, alighted and let Nora drive on.

"Tell 'em you was took sick before the show an' had to come home," was her parting injunction.

Patsy had no heart to enter the flat, where she thought her parents must be by that time. She wanted a chance to think and decide upon a plan of action. She had been too unnerved by what she had been through to be able readily to collect her thoughts, but as she walked on heedless of where she was going the significance of what she had brought upon herself for her sister's sake forced itself upon her. What hurt her more than even her mother's words and belief in her guilt—and they burned to her very soul—was that Dan should have doubted her and cast her off with brutal scorn. The idea that he would not understand that something grave and extraordinary must have led to her presence there, that he would not trust her and wait for her explanation, would never have occurred to her even if she had had time to think before she took the desperate step she did to prevent the discovery of Nora and the supper table in the bedroom. On the spur of the moment she had confidently thought that her statement that she had come to Crawford's rooms on business would suffice. She could not understand that her appeal to him to trust her had not been wholly sufficient, as a similar appeal from him to her in such circumstances would have been pending opportunity to hear what he had to say.

There arose in her mind the memory of the first and only semblance of a disagreement between them prior to this night, when she had announced her intention of going on the stage soon after their betrothal. She recalled what she had said:

"You've got to trust me for good an' all—trust me without a string to it—in all places an' all things. You've got to believe in me as I believe in you."

And his reply:

"You're all right, little one. I will trust you at all times, in all things."

She had believed in him unswervingly during all the years since then, never doubting his loyalty, never believing that he was as other men she saw and ever could or would let his thoughts dwell upon another woman, confident in his love, confident that he would remain true in every sense to the spirit of their troth and await with her the apotheosis of their romance, the supreme reward of their patience, in their union forever. Sure as she was of herself in her love for him, her mind never could have conceived the idea that he would ever seriously harbor the notion that the wealth of another man might hold attraction for her. Although he had intimated at the time of her last visit home that the thought of it worried him, she had dismissed the subject with her playful rejoinder and straightway forgotten it. Now at the first real test he had broken his pact and credited her with baseness of the most ignoble kind.

"I suppose you thought when you got through with him an' he cast you off you'd fall back on me, the patient, good natured fool down in the country who wasn't wise to the sort you've proved to be."

The words whirled in her head. Had Dan really delivered himself of such an infamous utterance to her, his affianced wife, who had borne so much for him? There was no evading the hideous reality of it. He had said it and spurned her ruthlessly. This was the trust of a man! This was the end of her dream of bliss! It was all over, over with everybody. She could not explain to her mother, and the latter would tell her father, and he, too, would shut his heart to her. There was nothing left for her in the world. She had lost all. Distracted by her despair and misery, she ran rather than walked—ran straight before her, and people turned and gazed after her curiously. On she hurried until she brought up exhausted at a line of cars that blocked her way. Scarcely conscious of what she was doing, heedless of where it went, she boarded the car that had stopped in front of her. She wanted only to sit down. There were few people in the car, and she did not look upon them with seeing eyes. The courage, the knowledge of the world, the qualities of pluck and clear judgment that had enabled her to hold her own in all circumstances had deserted her utterly for the time being in her wretchedness. Her nerve was gone. The blow was too much even for such a brave little woman to bear up under.

"South ferry! All out!" shouted the conductor.

Mechanically she descended from the car and walked slowly over to Battery park. The solitude of the place at that hour appealed to her. She wanted to get away from the noise, the lights, the people. But from the lights she could not escape. They were everywhere. They piled in mountains all about her. They cast long golden sheens from the passing ferryboats. Their gayety seemed to mock her. She walked toward the water front, and a policeman, twirling his night stick, advanced upon her out of the shadow.

"Hi!" he shouted gruffly. "Where are you goin'? What d'you want?"

His rude tones startled her and recalled her to herself.

"I'm going to the subway," she answered at a venture.

"Well, that ain't the way to the subway you want, an' you know it," he replied. "Get out of it, an' if I find you around here again tonight I'll run you in, see?"

Greatly frightened, she retraced her steps, walking hurriedly.

As she neared the car tracks a man who had followed her at a distance from the time she had left the car accosted her.

"Excuse me, Miss Patsy," he said, raising his hat. "Are you ill? 'As anything 'appened? Can I 'elp you?"

Surprised, she looked at him, but failed to recognize him.

"How'd you know my name? I don't know you," she answered.

"Hi'm William Perkins—you know, the Djuke they used to call me at Myple Grove."

And the Duke he was, but it was small wonder that Patsy failed to recognize him. The generally dirty sweater clad stable boy was miraculously transformed. He was as spick and span as a new pin. A smart tan overcoat opened upon a suit of a loud check and distinctly English cut. A hard felt hat and gloves to match the topcoat gave an added air of distinction to him, as also did his black patent leather shoes, straight collar and soft red tie set off with a real diamond horseshoe pin.

"I wus in a Broadway car just naow," he went on, "an' recognized you, but you seemed in such trouble an' so anxious to be let alone that I didn't like to speak to you, but when I see you go across Battery plyce at this time o' night an' lookin' so ill I was afryd somethin' wus the matter an' took the liberty of followin' you. I 'ope you don't mind. If there's anything I can do"—

This meeting, following the incident with the policeman, had the effect of restoring Patsy wholly to her senses. In common with everybody at Maple Grove, she had liked the Duke from the little she had seen of him there, because he always had been obliging and cheery.

"Yes, I've been under the weather an' upset a bit," she told him. "I feel like I'd drop. I'd be real grateful if you'd put me on an Eighth avenoo car. They go from somewhere hereabouts, don't they?"

"Ow now, not a tram, but a keb, hif you'll allaow me, Miss Patsy," he said. "But 'adn't you better 'ave somethin' fust? I'm sure you need it."

PISTOL SHOTS AT AUTOISTS.

Three Strangers Hit Mrs. W. E. Mathis, of Atlantic City.

Three men "shot up" William E. Mathis, of Atlantic City, while running near New Gretna in his automobile yesterday. Mathis was accompanied by his wife and Mrs. Thomas C. Tompkins and her little son.

It was just at dusk. A man stepped into the road from the brush and signaled to the machine. Mathis made no sign of stopping, and the man stepped aside. He immediately reappeared with two other men, and as the machine passed they all fired. The shots took effect in the body of the machine and several leaden pellets struck Mrs. Mathis in the face.

Post Mortem Kindness.

Do not keep the alabaster box of your affections sealed and laid away until your friends are dead. Fill their days with tenderness, speak your words of commendation while their ears can hear them. The things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their caskets, send before hand to brighten and sweeten their homes ere they go out of them. I have often said and I know I speak for thousands of others weary plodding toilers, that if my friends have vases laid away filled with the perfume of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body; I would far rather they would bring them out along my toilsome days and open them when I can enjoy them and be refreshed by them.

May Chase the Hounds.

If the weather is favorable the members of the Watchung Hunt club will enjoy a chase after the hounds tomorrow, starting at 11 o'clock from the Baltusrol Golf club. There will be the usual holiday festivities at the club during the day.

Her First Birthday.

The children of the Sunday school at the Italian Mission on East Third street, will have a Christmas entertainment with a tree, tonight at 8 o'clock. There will also be special music.

KILLED BY FALL, JUST ESCAPED HITTING WOMAN.

Washington, N. J., Dec. 24.—Falling from a railroad culvert over East Washington avenue Wednesday night, Patrick J. Sexton landed directly at the feet of Mrs. J. M. Hann, who was returning home at the time. He was dead when picked up, having sustained a fractured skull.

Sexton was forty-three years old, and he was walking on the improvised path along the culvert when it is presumed he stumbled. He fell over the arch and landed on the hard roadbed eighteen feet below. If Mrs. Hann had taken another step the falling man would have struck her.

Mrs. Hann summoned assistance, and Coroner Shrope viewed the body, after which it was taken to the town hall and later taken in charge by Sexton's brother, Thomas, of Carlton avenue.

Sexton was one of the best known men along this division of the Lackawanna. He had been a telegraph operator and brakeman, but had not worked at anything but odd jobs during the past year. He leaves a widow and one son, the latter of Port Norris. He has also three brothers and a sister, John and Thomas, of Washington; Timothy, of Hoboken, and Mrs. Edward Donohue, of Allentown, Pa.

EXPRESS CO. SUDDENLY DISCHARGES 40 GIRLS.

Jersey City, Dec. 24.—Some forty girls who were employed in the C. O. D. department of the United States Express Company at Eighth and Henderson streets, this city, are complaining of the suddenness of their discharge by the company on Tuesday. Several of the girls were the sole support of relatives. The girls had been quitting work daily at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, according to custom. It was at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon that the girls received notifications that the C. O. D. department had been transferred to another department and that their services would be no longer available. It was the custom to pay the girls twice a month, and they had been paid on December 15. Following the notification of the loss of their positions the girls were paid for their services for the period from December 15 until Tuesday at 5 p. m.

It was said that the express company intended to replace all their women employes with male help.

FESTIVITIES OF XMAS

Receptions, House Parties and Entertainments Mark the Holiday.

DINNER PARTIES GENERAL.

Many Plainfielders As Hosts For the West-end — Some of Those Who Entertained.

Receptions, dinners, dances and entertainments generally marked the Christmas day festivities. At almost every home there was a celebration of some sort, at which a number of friends and relatives were present. Here are a few of them.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. McCullough, of Steiner place, entertained a house party over the Christmas holiday. There were eighteen guests, including Lieut. Clarence Richards, of the Brooklyn Navy Yard; Lieut. Richard P. McCullough, of Philadelphia; Dr. Leon Peroult, of New York city, and Father Gleason, the chaplain, who went around the world with the U. S. fleet of battleships.

Mr. and Mrs. Bateman Thatcher, of East Fourth street, entertained a large party of relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Clark, of 971 West Fourth street, gave a Christmas dinner party for sixteen, including the members of the Clark and Blimm families.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Lockwood, of Madison avenue, gave a Christmas dinner party, covers being laid for sixteen.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Mortimer, of West Seventh street, gave an informal reception Christmas Day in honor of their son, Donald C. Mortimer, who came home from Boston for the holidays. About twenty people were present.

Mrs. Mary E. Messerschmidt, of East Fifth street, gave a Christmas dinner party, the guest of honor being John Y. Bainbridge, of East Marinette, Wis., it being his first visit here in twenty-five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Vars, of Webster place, gave a Christmas dinner party for sixteen relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, of East Ninth street, entertained a house party of sixteen relatives and friends from Friday until today.

Mr. and Mrs. Juan A. Babcock, of Clinton avenue, entertained a house party of sixteen over the week-end, including relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stevens, of Clinton avenue, gave a Christmas dinner party, covers being laid for twenty-six.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Herr, of East Front street, entertained over Christmas Mrs. Herr's sisters, the Misses Susana C. and Laura A. Beck, of Lancaster, Pa. They returned home today.

Arthur Decker, of Brooklyn, spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hudson, of Somerset street.

Miss Frances Newell, of Sherman avenue, entertained a party of twenty friends Christmas night. Yuletide games and dancing were enjoyed. The house was elaborately decorated and a collation was served.

Xmas "Joy" Results.

Bartholomew Taylor, an old timer, was given a suspended sentence by Judge Runyon this morning. Taylor was found helplessly drunk on West Front street Christmas eve, lying in the gutter near the corner of Park avenue. Another who had imbibed too freely, George Cornell, a Swede said that he had been drinking Irish whiskey. The judge told him that Irish whiskey was never intended for a Swedish stomach and allowed him to go as it was his first offense.

Mrs. Guion's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Louise Esther Guion, who died on last Friday, was held this morning at Grace Episcopal church at 11:30, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson officiating. A quartet composed of Miss S. Etta Raybert, Miss Grace Carroll and Messrs. Holmes and Tallamy sang three hymns, favorites of Mrs. Guion. The interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Stahl in Critical Condition.

William Stahl, a former resident of the borough and a brother of Councilman Stahl, of North Plainfield, who has been ill for seven weeks, is not expected to recover. Mr. Stahl's illness started with abscesses on the body, which developed into tuberculosis of the bone.

Borough Jail's Leaky Roof.

The roof of the borough lockup sprung a leak as a result of the big fall of snow on Friday night. The water came through the ceiling in several streams and completely drenched James Newell, a prisoner, which made his removal to another cell necessary. Mayor Townsend investigated the damage this morning and ordered repairs to the roof.

STREET COMMISSIONER A GOOD SAMARITAN

Richard Cole, a colored youth, of 22 years, was detained at police headquarters last night. He was found by Patrolman Anderson at the Netherwood station at 1 o'clock last night, evidently looking for shelter. Cole said he came from Ocean Grove, where he was in the employ of J. B. Sweet, proprietor of Sunset Lodge. He said he went to Pennington to spend Christmas with his mother and while there gave her all the money he had excepting enough carfare to carry him to Bound Brook.

Cole walked from Bound Brook to this city hoping to get a job which would furnish him with enough money to pay his fare home. He was put to work this morning by Street Commissioner Gavett, after being given his breakfast.

XMAS CELEBRATION AT ITALIAN MISSION

The first Christmas celebration for the children of the Italian Mission Sunday school, was held Friday night at the mission on East Third street. It was a true Italio-American meeting, crowned with real success. Songs and recitals were given by the children, dolls, gloves and other useful articles distributed according to the merit. Everyone had his share of apples, oranges, bananas, nuts and candies.

During the evening a short address was made to the children by the missionary in charge, Theodore Boretty. The mission was crowded and a number of people had to be turned away for lack of room. Italian and English hymns, with the accompaniment of mandolins and guitars, added to the pleasure and happiness of those present.

Those in charge of the mission work feel deeply grateful to the public and the members of the mission greatly appreciate the work of Mrs. Charles F. Dayton, chairman of the entertainment committee: Miss Schuyler, organist; Mr. and Mrs. Miles Roberts and Rev. Mr. Bond, who take such a generous interest in the work. Ira LaRue, Miss Dewey, Miss Griffen and Miss Newman have also been thanked for their share in the work of preparing the feast.

D. A. R. TO HEAR PAPERS ON AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The members of Camp Middlebrook, Daughters of the American Revolution, who met at the home of Mrs. C. E. Westervelt, on Putnam avenue, last Tuesday, have decided to have a series of papers on the various battles fought during the Revolution. A literary committee will have charge of this feature. On Tuesday, Miss Emma Herbert, of Bound Brook, presented a paper on "The Battle of Monmouth." There were about thirty members present.

The annual luncheon of the Camp will be held at Bound Brook on Wednesday, February 2. One new member was received by paper and one by transfer.

Fighter Fined $10.

William Brown, one of a trio of three colored men who were arrested Thursday night, for raising a disturbance near Richmond street and West Second, was fined ten dollars this morning by City Judge Runyon and the other were allowed to go. George H. Rockafellow, of South Second street, who saw the scrap testified for the men who were allowed to go. The fight started in Simmons' pool room on Madison avenue.

To Leave for Mission Field.

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, the missionary to Arabia, who is being sent out by Trinity Reformed church, will sail on Saturday, January 29, for his post. Dr. Harrison will spend the time from January 18 to the day of his departure in this city with members of the church. His headquarters will be at the residence of Rev. Mr. Broek.

Cleaning Borough Streets.

Street Commissioner Barrett had a dozen teams and a big squad of men at work today engaged in the removal of snow from the streets.

POSTPONE THE SERVICES

Formal Observance of Christmas Deferred Until Next Sunday.

CONGREGATIONS ARE SMALL.

Protestant Flocks Could Not Assemble at Their Places of Worship Owing to Storm.

In the majority of churches yesterday, the Christmas services were postponed on account of the storm. Where celebrations were held the congregations were slim. In most instances, the formal observance was postponed until next Sunday.

St. Stephen's Church.

St. Stephen's Day was not celebrated in St. Stephen's church yesterday morning owing to the storm. This special service will be held next Sunday when Mrs. Violet Truell Johnson will render special music on the violin and H. Raymond Loder will sing. A special sermon will be preached by a clergyman to be named later. Tomorrow night the children's celebration of Christmas with a tree will be held and gifts will be distributed. The exercises begin promptly at 7:30.

Warren Chapel.

The Christmas services as announced, with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, were held at Warren chapel, yesterday morning with a large congregation, and last night the regular services were held with special music. The storm did not alter the arrangements in the least. On Thursday night the main school will hold its Christmas entertainment, and in the afternoon the primary department will enjoy their festivities. It is urged that those attending bring cakes. The ice cream will be furnished by the chapel.

Temple Baptist.

All of the special Christmas services announced for yesterday at the Temple Baptist church were postponed to next Sunday. In the evening the first anniversary exercises will be held as planned for last night, with special music.

Trinity Reformed.

At Trinity Reformed church yesterday so few were present in the morning that only a short service was held. The Sunday school, however, held its regular session in the afternoon. The evening service which was to have been the Sunday school exercises and special musical program, by the choir, was postponed until next Sunday evening and a preaching service was held instead.

On Wednesday afternoon the Junior C. E. Society will enjoy their Christmas exercises to which the parents of the children are invited. Thursday afternoon the primary and beginners of the Sunday school will have their Christmas tree with distribution of gifts. In the evening the regular Christmas entertainment will be held and two professional entertainers from New York city will be there to please the audience.

First Baptist.

There were about fifty worshippers at the morning service yesterday. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss gave an appropriate talk, but the Christmas music was postponed to next Sunday night. There were 113 members of the Sunday-school out in the afternoon and short addresses were made by George A. Chapman and Mr. Herman. The Christmas exercises were postponed to next Sunday afternoon at the regular hour.

First M. E.

The morning services yesterday at the First M. E. church was attended by about twenty-five members. No attempt was made to sing the Christmas music at this service, but the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, gave a short talk. No Sunday school session was held in the afternoon, it being decided to hold the Christmas exercises next Sunday afternoon. Last night the choir sang the Christmas cantata, "The Coming of the King," to a good-sized audience. It will be repeated next Sunday night. The solo parts were taken by Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis, Miss Jessie Haynes, B. F. Tallamy, William Tallamy and H. R. Moyer.

First Presbyterian.

All of the services were postponed at the First Presbyterian yesterday to next Sunday, when the Christmas programs will be followed as planned for yesterday. The quartet choir failed to appear, Mr. Byard being stalled at White Plains, N. Y., and Mr. Knauer being unable to get here from Philadelphia on time. The women members of the choir were instructed not to come here. Miss Rupel, the violinist, reached here on time, but her services were not re-

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED AT CHRISTMAS PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McVoy, of West Fourth street, entertained thirty relatives and friends at a Christmas party at their home on Saturday, guest being present from this city, New York, Newark and Summit.

The home gathering was an especially happy affair owing to the prence of Dan Cupid. During the festivities the engagement of Miss Anna Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, and a sister of Mrs. McVoy, to Albert Harris, of Clinton avenue, was announced. The young couple received the congratulations of all the guests No date has been set for the wedding.

BULLET FROM FLOBERT MAY RESULT SERIOUSLY

Christmas had its joys and sorrows for Michael Eadz, a sixteen-year-old lad, of East Fourth street. Michael received a spring Flobert rifle as one of his presents. During the day his younger brother secured the gun and started to play with it. The latter did not know it was loaded, and pointed it toward his brother in fun. The trigger snapped and a lead bullet hit Michael in the eye.

The optic is considerably bruised and inflamed, but Dr. A. H. Dundon, who is attending the boy, is hopeful that the sight of the injured eye will be saved.

CHRISTMAS CANTATA AT NEW MARKET CHURCH

Members and friends of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school of New Market church attended the annual Yuletide festival on Christmas eve in large numbers. The exercises were held in the church, which was tastefully decorated with holly and greens.

A special feature of the celebration was the presentation of the cantata, "Santa Claus' Dream," by about thirty members of the school. Among those taking part were John Hadley, as Santa Claus, Hannah Nelson, Hazel Piddington, Ediweina Reusch, Gertrude Bunting, Maud Rupel, Frances and Josie Mitze, Emily Pirrington, Bessie Jacobs, Edith Dayton, Anna De Hart, George Nelson, Fred Von Vinden, Howard Dayton, Fred and Bosworth Coriell, Linwood Hutchinson and others.

Assisting in the cantata was Paul Pope, of this city. He took the part of newsboy and sung the solo parts, which included "Mickey McGin" and "I'm Peter Pan the Candy Man," both of which were encored.

At the completion of the program "Santa Claus" Hadley distributed presents to the children from a tree.

The committee in charge was Mrs. Charles Day, Miss Alice Pierce, Mrs. Charles De Hart, Mrs. Frank Smalley and Miss Iva Dayton.

Owing to the storm the Christmas services scheduled for yesterday in the church were postponed until next Sunday.

Calendar Plate of 1877.

J. W. Harrison, of Central avenue, is exhibiting a plate made in the Staffordshire potteries, of England, which bears a calendar for the year 1877 imprinted on it. The impressions of the figures are plainly legible and make quite a curiosity. Mr. Harrison was formerly in the pottery business at Liverpool and the plate is one of some thirty-six thousands he had made thirty-two pears ago.

Pastor Howard to be "At Home."

Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard will be "at home" at 446 West Fifth street, New Year's day. This is a departure from the old established custom of having "open house" at Hope chapel and one which, it is believed, will be generally approved of by members of the chapel. For the past twenty-one years the chapel has always been open on New Year's day.

Held Christmas Day Services.

The Christmas services held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Saturday morning, were largely attended by members of the church and congregation. The full choir was present and rendered music appropriate to the day and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, preached a brief sermon, his theme being in harmony with the day.

Mystery Play Postponed.

Owing to the inclement weather, it has been decided to postpone the Mystery Play to have been given tomorrow night by the Junior Auxiliary of Holy Cross church. It will be presented on January 7.

REV. MR. ROBERSON DEAD

Former Local Pastor Goes to His Reward on Christmas Eve

SERVICE TOMORROW MORNING.

A Wife, Formerly Miss Davis, of This City, and Two Children Survive Him—Interment Here.

Rev. Ellis E. Roberson, former pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, died at his home in Passaic on Friday night shortly after 10 o'clock of Bright's disease and pneumonia. He was pastor of the First M. E. church in Passaic at the time of his death. He is survived by a wife and two children, Lester, aged twelve and Jennie, four. The funeral services will be held in Passaic tomorrow at 11:45 in the morning and the interment will be in Hillside cemetery in this city.

Mr. Roberson came to Plainfield in 1908 and remained until his transfer by the Newark conference last year to the First M. E. church in Passaic. During his ministry here he made a large number of friends and was well liked. He married Miss Annie S. Davis, sister of E. W. Davis, of West Fourth street. He was a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. and of the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Mr. Roberson's first charge in the Newark conference was at Kingwood in 1892 and his succeeding charges follow: 1893-'95, Lebanon; 1896, Metuchen; 1897-1900, Whitehouse; 1901-'03, High Bridge; 1904-'05, Bound Brook; 1906-'07, Monroe Avenue church, Plainfield; 1908'09, Passaic.

XMAS DAY SERVICES WERE WELL ATTENDED

By holding their services on Christmas day as prescribed, the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches were favored by Providence with weather which did not seriously interfere with the attendance. But the storm which developed in fierceness as the day progressed Saturday prevented the other churches from holding the services they had planned for yesterday and only a handful of the faithful were on hand in many of them.

On Christmas morning all the services at Grace, St. Stephen's, Holy Cross and Heavenly Rest churches were attended by large congregations. Of course, the music in all of these churches was a special feature and all of it was good. At the Church of the Holy Cross, the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, preached a short sermon at the 11 o'clock service on the Birth, Life and Love of the Babe of Bethlehem.

Preceding the sermon Mr. Warner said that his four years of happy relations with his parishioners had been happy ones and cordial and that the church and its people were in complete accord which afforded him great pleasure. The singing of the choir was noticeably good especially in Tours' communion service. The decorations in all the churches were beautiful.

Nearly Frozen to Death.

A trio of Christmas celebrators, Alfred Sanderson, colored, Michael Super and Garmel Riecks, both Italians, were allowed to go because they helped the city to shovel snow away from police headquarters. Riecks was found nearly frozen to death at Berkman and Second streets by William Thorne, a letter carrier, who notified police headquarters, and he was brought in in an exhausted condition. He was revived and this morning repented of his rashness in over-indulging in Chianti.

An Indian Arrested.

Philip Lohr, a six foot Indian, who says he hails from Milwaukee, was arrested Christmas night on a charge of being disorderly. He convinced Judge Runyon this morning that if he wanted to he could be very disorderly but had not been. He was allowed to go. Lohr says he is a stone cutter by trade and is here looking for work having been recommended to one of the local stoneyards.

Hope Chapel News.

There will be a rehearsal of the Christmas cantata at Hope chapel tonight at 8 o'clock. The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of Hope chapel will meet at the home of Mrs. J. F. Horton, 819 West Sixth street, at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon.

—Neuman Bros. pride themselves on the choice teas and coffees sold by them. They have that rich flavor found only in such goods.

BLIZZARD CONDITIONS AT NEW MARKET

The snowstorm hit New Market and Piscataway township hard. When the residents of that section awakened on Christmas morning they united in declaring that it was the biggest fall of snow since the memorable blizzard of 1888. The milkmen of the district were greatly handicapped in making deliveries, all of which were from eight to ten hours late. In many instances the milkmen were unable to travel by the roads owing to the drifts and were obliged to drive through fields to reach their customers.

Justice Rogers, however, was "Johnny on the Spot." Yesterday he brought into service his snow plough and cleared the roads and sidewalks between New Market and Dunellen, thus placing the former place in communication with the outside world.

MRS. HECTOR C. SMITH, AGED SIXTY YEARS, DEAD

Mrs. Mary B. Smith, aged sixty years, wife of Hector C. Smith, of 977 Madison avenue, died on Friday at Dr. J. H. Cooley's sanitarium, where she had been under treatment for Bright's disease and nervous troubles. She had been in poor health for a long time and she was taken to the sanitarium in the hope that the change would be beneficial. For a time she seemed to improve and then suddenly grew worse, passing away on Friday night.

Mrs. Smith was a women of rare qualities and had a host of friends. She was an attendant at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Her husband, Hector C. Smith, is prominent in G. A. R. circles and is commander of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. Mrs. Smith's death was such a shock that her husband is now detained at home by illness and is under the care of a physician and trained nurse.

Owing to the death of Mrs. Smith, the invitations to the wedding of her son, Ray Smith and Miss Marguerite Ostrom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom, of Albert street, have been recalled. The wedding has been set for Wednesday evening, January 19, at 6:30, and it will be a quiet home wedding with only the members of the two families present. Mrs. Smith's funeral will be held this afternoon from the late home on Madison avenue and will be private. Besides a husband, Mrs. Smith is survived by three sons and one daughter.

Charles B. Wicht Remembered.

Charles B. Wicht, manager for the Clarkhurst Farms' dairy store on North avenue, entertained the employes of the local diary, as well as those from New Brunswick and the farm at Bound Brook, at his home Friday night. During the evening Mr. Wicht was presented with a handsome gold head umbrella by his friends. He appreciated the gift exceedingly. Afterward Mrs. Wicht served supper to the company and there was a general good time.

Hurt By Fall.

William Stine, of West Fifth street, a carpenter in the employ of Rimmer, Apgar & Cuzen, while at work in a house in the course of construction on Prospect avenue, on Friday afternoon, missed his stepping and dropped through a tier of beams. The drop was fifteen feet. Stine sprained both ankles and was taken home in a carriage where he is under a physician's care. It will be several weeks before he is able to resume work.

Halted Track Cleaners.

In their efforts to clear the trolley tracks in the borough this morning, the employes of the traction company resorted to the use of salt. When Chief Weiss discovered they were using this method he ordered them to desist, on the grounds that the salt is injurious to the hoofs of horses. The trolleymen obeyed the chief's mandate without argument.

Christmas Serenade.

Following the old English custom, Holy Cross' choir serenaded the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, on Christmas eve. After the choristers had sung carols, they were invited into the rectory, where the rector and his wife entertained them. Refreshments were served and the Christmas tree was lighted.

Another Proud Father.

Santa Claus was a day late in stopping at the home of William Olmstead, the hustling news agent, of Watchung avenue, but "Billy" is probably the happiest fellow in town today, as on Christmas night he became the father of a little daughter.

BLIZZARD STRIKES CITY

Plainfield, Like the Whole Country, Suffers From the Big Storm.

TRAFFIC IS ABANDONED.

Trolleys Stalled—Church Services Postponed—But Few Accidents Are Reported.

With the passing last evening of the storm which struck New York, New England, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania early on Christmas Day, there ended one of the most trying snowstorms experienced hereabouts in years. The most notable feature of the storm outside was a fourteen-foot wave that swept in on the New England coast, doing great damage, the loss at Boston being estimated at $1,000,000 and that at Nantasket Beach at a similar amount.

One foot of snow fell here between Saturday and Sunday mornings, but owing to high winds there were big drifts, some of which were four feet deep.

The storm which started early on Saturday morning cut up all sorts of ructions especially with the churches which had planned for elaborate Christmas services. All the special services were postponed for a week. The high wind, which it is said blew at the rate of sixty miles an hour drifted the snow in some places so that the streets were impassable and the tying up of all the trolleys was a matter of but a few hours. Signs were blown down from Joseph Sattel's piano store on North avenue and one at the corner of West Front street and Somerset.

No accidents were reported on account of the storm, but one occurred just before the snow began to fall on Christmas morning at the corner of Belvidere and Woodland avenues. An automobile containing Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Arens, of 1062 Rahway road and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Hagadorn, of New York city, with Charles Northberg as chauffeur, was run into by another car driven by George A. Bowman, of Hillside avenue, who in company with William Alling and his son, Leon, was on his way to the Plainfield Country Club. How the accident actually happened is not quite clear, but it is believed that Mr. Bowman's car skidded, and he lost control of it for a minute. Any way Mr. Arens' car was badly wrecked and Mr. and Mrs. Arens were thrown out and bruised.

There is little to be wondered at that people living on the outskirts of this city were annoyed at the lack of trolley accommodations. No effort was made by the P. S. C. to clear the lines excepting the main line, which was not accomplished with any degree of promptness because they had but one snow plow and one sweeper according to a statement by an officer of the company this morning. It was late last night before the Fourth street and Arlington avenue lines were tackled and until this morning the Somerset street line was not working at all, and neither was the Netherwood line. It was also said in explanation by P. S. C. employes that the cars are lighted here and run much less frequently and that therefore they could not be expected to resume service as speedily as in large cities, where heavy cars are used and the headway is generally a few minutes apart.

Many complaints were heard as to the treatment of the Jersey Central at the Netherwood station on Saturday and Sunday nights. Passengers were compelled to stand in the snow awaiting the arrival of belated trains both east and west. In recent years, the company has locked up its station there at 6 o'clock despite the fact that there are many passengers, and no exception was made during the storm. There is no station or shed for the westbound track. There is not a single light anywhere in its park between the station and South avenue, the company having declined requests of commuters to light the walks at night.

Heavy pressure caused by the weight of the snow caused a portion of the roof of VanNess' sash and blind factory to give way yesterday. The attention of Building Inspector Doane was called to the matter, and after an investigation that official decided there were no grounds for fearing any additional damage.

It was rather a hazardous thing to do but H. W. Marshall thought his automobile was equal to the trick so he went to Elizabeth to spend Christmas. He started home Sunday night in all the snow, but got only as far as Cranford, where the machine balked and refused to go any further. He was not alone in his misfortune, however, as Dr. T. S. Davis got into the same kind of a fix on West Front street, while

Irish Lace Makers Here Again

Exhibition and Sale of Real Irish Laces, Made by Real Irish Girls, Begins Monday and Continues Thruout the Week

Those of our patrons of Irish decent are perhaps more vitally interested in the coming of these Irish girl lace makers than other folks, and there is a charm about the whole exhibition and a peculiar attractiveness about real laces that will win the hearts and attract the attention of thousands of others.

The exhibition is both educational and philanthropic, and men, women and children will find it well worth their while to come this week and see it.

Mrs. Mary O'Flanagan, Miss Mary K. Davroeen, Miss Rose Egan—comely girls from the School of Industries of Loughlynn, County Roscommon, Ireland—have been brought over expressly for this demonstration, and will give an exhibition of their cleverness in the art of lace making. The exhibit is in charge of Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, who is on tour of the United States in aid of the industrial revival in Ireland. Father O'Flanagan's efforts to promote the industries of Ireland are laudable, indeed, and will be approved by all friends of the Emerald Isle in this section of Jersey.

The merit of Irish Laces is known the world wide, but of late a great deal of the imitation Irish laces have flooded the market, and this exhibit will serve to illustrate the difference between the sham and the real. Many magnificent pieces of Irish laces, neckpieces, coats, etc., will be displayed.

The exhibition will be on the Third Floor in the Oriental Rug Room and will begin tomorrow and continue thruout the week.

In conjunction with this exhibit we will have a show and sale of our own Irish Hand Made Laces—an extensive line of various widths and an immense variety of patterns at prices that will please you. All Over Nets, Bandings, Edgings and Insertings; also made-up Irish Lace, Crochet Collars, Rabats, Jabots, etc.

We seek your favors rather on the score of quality and beauty than on price, but we do not overlook the fact that people must be economical and that they do not want to pay more than things are worth—hence the lowered prices.

GOLF.

Despite the efforts of the Royal and Ancient rules committee, golfers continue to disagree on certain points. Throughout the last season many "nineteenth hole" arguments were heard over that old question as to what comprises a bunker. The following, given out by the secretary of the Royal and Ancient committee, will throw some light on the subject:

Definition 6 describes a "hazard" as "any bunker, water (except casual water), path, road, ditch, bush or rushes." In the 1902 rules railways, whin, rabbit scrapes and fences were also mentioned. Grass, whether long or short, is not a hazard, unless it be within the limits of a defined hazard. Had the word "bunker" been synonymous with the word "hazard," there would have been no necessity in definition 6 to say more than "a hazard is any bunker." The term "bunker" denotes a pit or hole in the ground exposing the soil. A bunker may be natural or artificial. Sand is generally considered the best substance to form the bottom of a bunker, but it is not necessary to its definition. A cop is merely a turf wall. When used in addition to a bunker, it is the duty of those who frame the local rules on any course to state whether the cops are or are not, in whole or in part, to be treated as hazards. A grass covered mound is not a hazard. If it were so, St. Andrews and many seaside courses in this country would consist principally of hazards. That the term "bunker" has always had its distinct and separate meaning may be seen by reference to the older codes of rules.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Touring through the New York stores at Christmastide is, if we see into as well as look at things and people, a fruitful lesson in the philosophy of life. Everything reflects the tendency of the times, everybody illustrates the twentieth century gallop after the ever-changing, ever-ascending goddess of luxury. Floods of travellers' tales have these twenty-five years fascinated the rich with the mania for turning their houses into strictly imitation European palaces. With these it is quite beneath their dignity to even whisper of "Home, once Sweet Home!" And such is poor weak human nature that our enterprising storekeepers find it compulsory to cater to this craze for eclipsing the good old times and ways. It looks as though a vast and powerful class of our American stock are getting ashamed of American standards. What "up to date" hotel nowadays serves a simple American dinner? Why these preliminary cocktails and Frenchified frilligigs that swell the bill more than the payer? Where are the sturdy sons of the stalwart Fathers who so valiantly made this American nation and died believing posterity would proudly maintain its independence by keeping up its plain, sensible and everyway admirable mode of living?

* * * *

Let the rich go their own gait; the great mass of the people, the backbone of the nation, the pith and marrow of its greatness, are not compelled to follow those whose weakness for imitating outsiders is in fact a belittling of its greatness and a pretty poor return for what its Makers have done for them. The stores show an overwhelming appetite for the gaudy, and a growing distaste for the simplicity which is the stamp of strong sense and pure taste. Our children are being demoralized by parental rivalry in decking them up as imitation princesses and dukelings. They are ceasing to be children. They scorn real toys. They whine and pine for aeroplanes that fly, locomotives that go by steam, and for every kind of mimic machine that can be made to work by electricity. They see their supremely wise parents and seniors doing their worst to ge rid of their legs for walking. The human body is scorned as too slow for anything except getting enough money to save it from exercise and rid it of the consequences of the one grand use it is permitted—of consuming luxurious fare which is enjoyed in proportion to its harmfulness and cost.

* * * *

A new New York restaurant opened last week under cover of holy Christmas's (two s's please) festive time. "The handsomest in the world," of course, for hotel reporters know every eating place in the universe and are juvenile enough to consider themselves the highest authorities on true taste. It has cost $4,000,000, more than a fourth of this going for decorations. Syrian palaces, Japanese temples, royal palaces, and the supposed very heaven of Art with a big A have been plundered to dazzle the gilded dudes of Gotham the Gorgeous Magnifique. There are pergolas of black marble, "shimmering in the lights," statues, sculptures, and the finest staircase "in the world." Walk up, walk up, ladies and gents! and see the Winged Bulls of Babylon "bearing pale flames on their backs." If this means that you can have a steak cut to order from the sizzling beast served with the oozings of its own gravy I am almost tempted to go for a thirty-five cent meal, but am likely to balk at the head waiter's demand for the tip of $9.65 for the decorations.

* * * *

Another hotel feast, said to cost $100 a plate, was gorged "after the old Roman style," though instead of reclining while eating, these imperial diners sat on "gold chairs," solid, no doubt, as high art feeders are always men of weight in a cultured community. And so the animal is getting his revenge on his long time subduer—the intellectual. The wheel goes round in every sphere of life, as the world complacently fancies the sun, moon and stars go dancing round it, for its sole delight. Every item and atom in these Mammoth Mastodon Dazzling Saloons of Mammon is the Gorgeousest, Costliest, Spangledest Conception of Super-Barnumized Genius in the World! And think of the touching disinterestedness of it all. These are our pioneers, blazing the way to the Higher Christian Civilization of which prophets have prophesied and dreamers poetized these thousands of years. All for our good, not at all for their own. And yet we have only just got to the vestibule of th corridor down which great Rome of old waltzed gaily to its doom.

BISHOP'S MEMORIAL TO DEPARTED WIFE.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Scarborough, of the Episcopal diocese of Trenton, whose wife died during the past week, has announced that he will put in a large chancel window at Christ Episcopal church, Trenton, in memory of Mrs. Scarborough.

The subject which has been selected by the Bishop is "The Ascension." It represents Christ ascending into heaven surrounded by ministering angels and the Disciples and the Virgin Mary in weeping groups on the ground at his feet. The window will be the work of Meyer & Company, of New York, and will be turned out by the Royal Bavarian establishment at Munich, Bavaria, which is now making three memorial windows for Christ church. The work is all done in Munich. The window will be ordered in a few days and it is hoped that it can be received and put in place so as to be dedicated on Ascension day.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX IS NOW ATACKED.

The constitutionality of the collateral inheritance tax acts of New Jersey as passed in 1894 and 1908, and amended by the Ackerman bill enacted at the last session of the Legislature, is the subject of attack in an action brought in the Supreme Court at Trenton by the executor of the $7,000,000 estate left by the late Wesley Hunt Tilford, of New York, in an effort to set aside a tax of $138,378.52 levied against the estate by Secretary of State Samuel D. Dickinson, acting as registrar of the Prerogative Court.

DECIDES AGAINST BANK.

Trenton, Dec. 27.—The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Trenchard, has affirmed the District Court of Atlantic City in giving judgmen for $120 in favor of John Pratt against the Union National Bank. The action involved a check forgery in Philadelphia. Pratt mailed the check to George W. Nock, in Philadelphia, and Nock's indorsement was forged after the check was received in his office. The forgery was not discovered at once and the check was negotiated and when it was presented at the Union National Bank it was paid. Later, in 1906, the forgery was discovered and Nock made demand for payment which the bank refused. Pratt then brought suit to recover the money.

In deciding against the bank on an appeal, Justice Trenchard holds that the act of 1908 providing that banks shall not be held liable for forgeries unless notified within one year is not retroactive and does not apply in this case. He also holds that a depositor in a bank is not precluded from recovery by his failure to discover a forgery when it appears that he did not know his payee's signature.

TWO LICENSES GRANTED.

New Brunswick, Dec. 27.—Daniel C. Whalen, of Metuchen, was granted a license for the Metuchen Inn by Judge Lyon Friday. Witnesses testified that Metuchen had enough licensed places and the application was opposed on the ground it had been up before the court within a year's time. It was withdrawn at the former hearing because there was not enough legal signers. Judge Lyon held that a withdrawal could not be considered a rejection. The case will be carried to the Supreme Court for review.

A license for the Black Horse Tavern, which was refused at the last term because of disorderly conduct allegations, was granted Friday to Harry S. Eels, of New York, who has bought the place and will cater to the auto trade. The hotel has been a licensed place since the old stage coach days.

Demented Woman's Long Walk.

Long Branch, Dec. 27.—Annie Williams, a domestic, in the employ of H. B. Seering, at Rumson, walked from that place to Long Branch, Friday night while in a demented condition. She strayed into the Monmouth Memorial Hospital, where she was cared for during the night and turned over to the police authorities this morning. Chief of Police James Layton got into communication with the Seering family, who took the woman home. She will be committed to an institution. The woman has been acting strangely for some time.

Suit Against Morristown.

Morristown, Dec. 27.—Papers in a civil suit for $150,000 were served Friday night by Riker & Riker on the city clerk on behalf of Antonio Costa, a contractor, of Orange, who seeks to secure payment for the work of installing the sewerage system here. The papers were filed in the Supreme Court at Trenton, and the trial, it is expected, will take place at the courthouse in Newark. Costa's original claim was for $134,544, but of this amount a sum was held back by the city on the ground that Costa had not properly performed the work.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The members of the Methodist Sunday school and its friends enjoyed their annual Christmas exercises in the church Friday night. An excellent program was rendered. Santa Claus was there with presents for all and a most enjoyable time was had by the members of the school and their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark, of Front street, following a custom of long standing, held a family reunion Christmas day at their home. Children and grandchildren all gathered around the festive board, covers being laid for about twenty.

"The Bachelors" hold the third of their series of winter dances tomorrow night in the hall. The success of the other dances is well remembered and ther is no reason why the club's friends will not be out in force tomorrow night.

Edward Heath, of Westfield avenue, is out again after an illness of two weeks with a severe attack of tonsilitis.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the church.

The storm put an end for a time to the excellent skating which had been enjoyed for a week.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the Methodist church.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

PLAINFIELDERS ENJOYED BROOKLYN HOUSE PARTY.

Among the many Plainfielders who spent Christmas out of town, none was more enjoyable than the family gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hardy and Mrs. S. E. Prescott, 618 Madison street, Brooklyn. A. L. Force and family were present, from the borough, and enjoyed the day and evening with several other Brooklyn friends, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hardy.

A tastefully decorated dinner table, loaded with good things to eat, contained a small chimney, with Santa Claus, descending the same. From the interior of the chimney ribbons were run to each guest's plate and as the presents were received hearty laughter was caused over the "Limerick" attached to each gift. At 12 o'clock "good nights" were said and Mr. and Mrs. Hardy were voted model entertainers.

quired. She will be here next Sunday.

Crescent Avenue.

Snow failed to prevent the annual Christmas reunion of the Sunday schools of the Crescent Avenue church, Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels yesterday afternoon at the Crescent Avenue church. Despite the inclement weather close to four hundred members of the four schools attended the services.

The principal feature of the exercises was a Christmas address by the Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie. Dr. Zelie referred to the birth of Christ as the great gift and to its influence on the world for centuries.

The pubpit was lavishly adorned with floral decorations, the arrangemen including a large star of holly which was illuminated by electric lights.

Mt. Zion A. M. E.

Christmas services were held in the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church last night in spite of the storm and the fact that the pastor, Rev. J. T. Diggs, was ill. The decorations in this church were the work of A. P. White who also conducted the music sung by a choir of twelve voices. A feature of the decorations was a star composed of twenty electric lights which was illuminated just as the services began and made a striking impression. The music was wonderfully sweet.

Xmas at City Home.

The inmates of the city industrial home made merry over a turkey dinner arranged by the matron, Mrs. Andrew McDonald, on Saturday. In all eighteen sat down to the repast.

Still Selling Red Cross Stamps.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society wishes to inform the public that the Red Cross stamps will remain on sale at all the principal stores, including the florists, for the rest of this week. They are as appropriate for "thank you" messages and New Year's greetings as they were for Christmas presents. The Society took 60,000 stamps from the National Red Cross society and all which remain unsold on January 1 will have to be returned. It is hoped that the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield will see to it that there are none left over. Fifty percent of the proceeds of the sale of the stamps will go to the support of the local sanatorium and the balance to the National Red Cross Society.

APPEAL FOR ASSISTANCE FOR AN UNIVERSITY.

Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, and one of the honorary vice-presidents of the Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tenn., has received from Fred H. Wilson, secretary of The Lincoln University Endowment Association, an appeal for assistance. On Tuesday night, December 14, Grant-Lee Hall, the main building of the university, was destroyed by fire. There was no loss of life, but the students suffered greatly through the loss of personal effects.

As a result a majority of the students were obliged to walk to their homes, in some instances a distance of one hundred miles. The university was founded by the late Gen. O. O. Howard, nephew of Rev. Mr. Howard, and there are many Plainfielders who are personally interested in the educational work being carried on there.

At Proctor's.

LaVallier's football dogs are at Proctor's this week. The dogs go through their tricks with cleverness that is surprising. This act will delight the little ones. Nellie Kennedy and company in the sketch, "Her Country Cousin," is one of the best playlets that has come down the pike. Moon & Phillippe have a musical novelty act that is a winner; full of classy songs and comedy. The Noherns, acrobats and equilibrists, are marvels. The famous films d'art are the best pictures obtainable.

Funeral of Mrs. Schmidt.

The funeral service of Mrs. Justina B. Schmidt, of Duer street, who died on Thursday, was held at her late home yesterday afternoon, and was conducted by the Rev. William H. Miller, rector of St. Joseph's church, of which the deceased was a member. The celebration of the usual mass was omitted owing to the Christmas services in the church on Saturday and the regular Sunday services yesterday.

Tree for Children.

Children of the members of the Gesang and Turn Verein were made happy at a Christmas celebration in the society's hall on Somerset street, on Friday afternoon. All were given presents, candy and oranges. The committee in charge was Charles Strauzenbach, Frank Klotz and A. Wolff.

Xmas Exercises at Hope Chapel.

The Christmas exercises of the primary and beginners' departments of Hope chapel Sunday school will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Sunday school rooms at the chapel. Mrs. John Ulrich and Mrs. E. W. William will be in charge assisted by their respective corps of teachers.

Xmas Music Next Sunday.

Owing to the small attendances at the services at St. Mary's and St. Joseph's R. C. churches yesterday, because of the storm, the special musical programs will be repeated next Sunday. The childrens exercises at St. Mary's school were postponed to the afternoon of that day.

Two Present at Service.

Christmas worship at St. Peter's German Lutheran church was suspended yesterday owing to the small attendance. When the time arrived for the opening hymn the pastor, Rev. T. Duerscherner, could see only one member of the congregation in a pew, deacon Richard Warnick.

Holiday for Borough Clock.

Snow, coupled with the cold weather, stopped the mechanism of the large clock in the borough school house during the storm early yesterday morning. The Board of Education will take steps to have the timepiece repaired as soon as the weather moderates.

Rasores Club to Meet.

The Rasores Club will meet tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. I. C. Pierson, on Watchung avenue. The subject will be Louisa Alcott.

MUST CHIN THEMSELVES IN NEW YORK SCHOOLS

Physical training has been placed on the same basis as other branches of education in the schools of New York. Pupils are to be graded for their physical training work, their progress or lack of progress counting in the credits necessary to graduation. This innovation has just been introduced by an order issued by New York City Superintendent William H. Maxwell, upon the authority of the New York Board of Education.

In estimating the ratings for graduation, the order says, the following points are to be considered:

First—The effort and the success of the student to follow out the instructions in hygiene, particularly with regard to cleanliness of face, finger nails, mouth, teeth, hair and clothing.

Second—Both the ability to assume a correct posture and habitual posture, particularly when the student is writing or at rest, and the posture when marching, walking or standing to recite; because good posture is an expression of vigor as well as an evidence of a correct physical habit.

The ability of boys to "chin" themselves by raising their weight by their biceps and the facility of the girls in folk dances also are to count. Ability in these dances is to be determined under three heads: Memory, form and spirit.

A child who fails to receive a passing mark in physical training and hygiene will be referred to a school physician for examination and a special report on the case will be made to the district superintendent. Similar standards are to determine the progress of the student from grade to grade.

The new order originated with Dr. C. Ward Crampton, director of physical training in the public schools. Dr. Crampton said yesterday:

"The effort and the success of students to follow out the instruction in matters of cleanliess of the face, finger nails, teeth, hair and clothing should be taken into serious consideration. Nothing will bring more forcibly to the student's mind the importance of removing unhygienic conditions than will the fact that he marked for graduation upon what he is as well as upon what he knows. If this policy is followed throughout the grades there certinly will be less retardation due to physical defects of an easily remediable nature.

"Good posture, while being an evidence of vigor, has also a commercial value. Level headed business men make their choice of erect, well appearing candidates for any business position, because they know instinctively that vigor and the habit of success are behind such posture.

"Too many immature weaklings are passed into the high schools every year, only to find that the work is too severe for them; and the great high school mortality is found to be due to lack of vigor in this class of students."

COMMENDS PREVENTORIUM.

This is Real Preventive Medicine, Dr. Rosnau of Harvard Writes.

The Lakewood Preventorium, designed to save children from tuberculosis, which has aroused such bitter opposition in Lakewood, is warmly indorsed by Prof. Milton J. Rosenau, Professor of Preventive Medicine and Hygiene at Harvard. In a letter to Nathan Straus Dr. Rosenau writes:

"I see by the papers that you have given a princely gift for the establishment of a preventorium for tuberculosis at Lakewood, N. J. This is real preventive medicine, and I am sure will not only fill its mission, but will set an example which should be widely followed."

Dr. Rosenau was formerly Director of the Hygienic Laboratory of the Public Health Service at Washington, and it was under his administration that Dr. Stiles, one of his assistants, discovered the hookworm disease. Dr. Rosenau, with Dr. Walter Wyman, the Surgeon General, conducted the famous milk investigation, under President Roosevelt's administration, which resulted in the Public Health Service and the Agricultural Department declaring emphatically in favor of the pasteurization of milk.

ENGINE STALLED AND DELAYED COMMUTERS.

Summit, Dec. 24.—One cylinder of an engine drawing the Buffalo Limited, which under the new schedule makes the run from Dover, where it is due at 6:25, to Hoboken over the Morris and Essex division, got out of kilter when the train was about a mile west of here yesterday morning. As a result the 6:52 train from Dover, a nine-car train, usually crowded with commuters by the time it makes its stop here, was delayed between Chatham and Summit for nearly forty minutes. The train arrived in Newark thirty-five minutes late. Other commuter trains were also delayed, the whole eastbound schedule being put awry as a result of the Buffalo train's breakdown.

Vaughn McGee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGee, of the borough, will leave Friday for Tokio, Japan, where he takes a position with the Standard Oil Company.

DAVID C. SMALLEY, JR., IS AWARDED PRIZE.

Exeter, N. H., Dec. 27.—Louis H. Mead, of Perth Amboy, has been awarded a Kingman scholarship of $120 and in addition a Phillips scholarship of $100 for excellence in his studies. This fact was made known Friday by the college faculty. Mead is working his way through school.

Other New Jersey students to be awarded prizes were William K. Keaton, of Paterson; Howard Harderman, of Perth Amboy; David C. Smalley, Jr., of Plainfield.

The Junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday school will hold its Christmas party Wednesday afternoon and the primary department will have its Christmas entertainment Thursday afternoon.

BOOKS ARE MIXED, BUT BOROUGH WELL OFF.

New Brunswick, Dec. 27.—Mayor W. E. Florance, in his report of his expert investigation of the affairs of the borough of South River, which he filed with Justice Bergen early last week, and which reached the county clerk's office Friday afternoon declares that there has been gross carelessness manifested in the keeping of the books in some of the departments, but he emphasizes the fact that the borough is in a good financial condition. There was some criticism of Mayor Joseph Mark acting as borough recorder, and in investigating this matter the expert finds the books very incomplete, so that no accurate finding can be secured therefrom. He advises the employment of an accountant to open up a new system of books in several departments.

The expert finds the Common Council minutes have been carefully kept, but says: "I cannot criticize too severely the lack of system in the books of the collector. The annual financial statements must have been made to suit the occasion, as they are full of inaccuracies and inconsistencies, and could never have balanced with the true condition of affairs as of the first day of each year." Mistakes have been made on both sides of the ledger, and there are shortages and surpluses due to bad bookkeeping.

ATLANTIC CITY HAS WATER SUPPLY NOW.

Atlantic City, Dec. 27.—The water famine, due to the fire at the Absecon pumping station was of short duration. The damage to the machinery was comparatively slight, and the army of laborers and machinists rushed to the scene in automobiles, and did an emergency job in remarkably brief time.

Thursday evening water was turned on from the works, the first pump to be put in operation being No. 2, which has a capacity of three and a half millions daily. Then No. 6, called "Jumbo," which sends a stream of water through a thirty-inch main across the five-mile stretch of meadows, began to work.

"The resort's consumption of water," said Superintendent Lincoln Van Gilder, "at this season is five millions daily, and we have an ample supply."

Possibility of fire during the municipal drought led to the filling of standpipes and other storage places in this city, and by noon announcement was made that enough water was in reserve to supply fire engines in event of a serious conflagration. Two small fires, which occurred during the afternoon on the meadow district of the city, created a tremendous excitement, but were extinguished by chemical streams without calling on the water mains.

DOVER WONDERING AS TO APPOINTMENTS.

Dover, Dec. 27.—Interest in Dover at present centres on the various appointments to be made by the incoming Common Council on January 1. The terms of office of incumbents in nearly all branches of the town government expire. Numerous aspirants for the places have appeared in addition to the present officials, all of whom are said to be candidates for reappointment.

Among the offices to be filled are the following: Town treasurer, collector of taxes, assessor, town clerk, member of the Board of Water Commissioners, three members of the Board of Health, street commissioner, town attorney, town engineer, chief of the fire department and three assistants, two trustees of the public library, marshal and two assistants, janitor of the town hall and other minor places.

Every attempt to learn in advance what action the councilmen will take, either in relation to the appointments or the town policies, has been unsuccessful.

RESORT IN CAPE MAY COUNTY FIRE-SWEPT.

Wildwood, Dec. 24.—The most serious fire that has ever occurred here, and one that for a time threatened the destruction of a large section of the resort early yesterday, destroyed seven dwellings and a dance hall.

The fire started in the upper section of Holly Beach, where it adjoins this resort. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

HOLDS TWENTY AT BAY.

Trenton, Dec. 24.—Without any apparent provocation, Steven Rice, 19 years old, of 121 Ferry street, shot a fellow workman and held a score of would-be pursuers at bay at the point of a revolver Wednesday. He made his escape.

The victim of the shooting is Frank Paack, 26 years old, of 182 Home avenue. He is suffering from a severe wound on the left hand, and in addition his nerves are greatly affected by his narrow escape from death.

An Effectual Remedy.

First Farmer—'Ere, you remember telling me you gave your 'oss turpentine when 'e 'ad colic?"

Second Farmer—Ay!

First Farmer—Well, I gave my 'oss turpentine, an' 'e died.

Second Farmer—Well, mine died, too!—Punch.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Novelized From Forbes' Play of the Same Name by JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"Nix for the cab," she replied. "I could do with a cup of coffee, though."

"There's a plyce just across the w'y what keeps open all night," he said. "We can get some cawffee there if you'd rather not 'ave anythin' stronger."

Patsy refused anything stronger. With profound diffidence he offered her his arm. Feeling faint, she leaned upon it gladly, and they soon were installed at at table with some hot coffee before them.

The Duke was not a little proud of the honor done to him and sought to cheer his companion up by chatting animatedly. With instinctive delicacy, however, he refrained from questioning her, but talked about himself. Patsy had not heard of his departure from Maple Grove. He told how he had been summoned from there by a telegram from his mother to go to England and that he had arrived in New York on his return from that country that very day.

"I went to the Long Acre theater this hevenin', but I didn't see Miss Nora or you," he said.

"No," she replied; "we wasn't there."

He saw from the absent look in her eyes that she was not listening to half of what he said.

"P'raps you'd like to go 'ome now," he suggested.

"Home!" she echoed wearily. "Oh, yes. What time is it? Gee, it's after 12 o'clock!"

Requesting her to remain where she was for a moment and to excuse him, the Duke went out and in a few minutes returned with a cab.

"You're awful good," she said as he helped her in. "I don't know how to thank you."

"You can best do that by forgettin' it," he answered. "Good night, Miss Patsy."

He added as the vehicle started in response to his signal:

"Don't p'y the kebby; 'e's 'ad 'is fare."

One thing was sure, she would have nothing more to do with Dan after the way he had treated her. Another thing also was sure, she would not be able to return to the Long Acre theater after having left the stage manager in the lurch as she had done. This did not trouble her much. She did not want to return there. She and Nora would go away somewhere, procure an engagement with a company on tour that would take them far from everybody and from New York. Some day they would find out, perhaps, how unjust they had been to her, and Dan would be sorry, but she would never forgive him.

At the thought that all was over between them, of the failure of her hopes that had sustained her through all the years of her trials and struggles, she began to weep.

"Oh, Dan, Dan!" she sobbed. "How could you! Oh, how could you!"

The cab came to a stop in front of the house. She ascended the stairs slowly and at the door of her flat hesitated, still dreading to go in, but feeling that she must.

"Help me, God!" she prayed. "I ain't done nothin' wrong, an' I don't deserve this. I couldn't give my little sister away!"

As quietly as possible she opened the door and entered.

CHAPTER XV.

THE gas was turned down in the parlor when Patsy entered. Quiet as she had been, Nora heard her turn the key in the lock and advanced to meet her in a wrapper and with a handkerchief tied around her forehead.

"Are they here?" asked Patsy.

"Yes; don't talk loud," whispered Nora. "Mom's asleep. Dan's gone out to hunt for pop."

"Did you beat 'em here?"

"Yes."

"Gee, that was luck!" said Patsy, turning up the gas. "I was scared green. What d'you tell 'em?"

"What you said—that I took sick before the show and had to come home."

"Did they say anything about me?"

"Asked me if I knew where you were. I said I left you at the theater."

"That's good," sighed Patsy, removing her hat and coat.

"Where have you been since you left me in the cab?" questioned Nora.

"Oh, I've been ridin' around on cars, tryin' to get up nerve enough to face pop. I'd 'a' given my eyetooth to 'a kept this from him. It's too late now. Mom 'll tell him everything."

"Yes," assented Nora. "That's what's been worrying me. What did you run to hide from mom for? Why didn't you stick it out in some way? You could have told her a story of some kind, and it would have been all right. You weren't like me. You had your hat and coat and street clothes on."

"I got rattled," she confessed.

"Yes, and you've got us into a pretty mess, haven't you?" grumbled Nora. "You brought it all on yourself. You had no business following me. I won't be followed."

"Lucky I did follow an' find you before it was too late."

"Too late? Stuff and nonsense! You're always thinking bad of people. You haven't helped me by butting in, and you've only got yourself into trouble."

"D'you s'pose I thought I run any risk with Dan?" demanded her sister. "S'pose I thought for a minute he wouldn't trust me, wouldn't believe I was true an' good, no matter how appearance was against me?"

"Don't you think he'll make up?"

"I don't know, an' I don't care. Serves me right. If I'd kept my promise to mom to watch over you 'stead of bein' so took up with my own happiness that I let you run around with that Simpson woman it all needn't 'a' happened. I'm to blame, an' I got to pay for it all, that's all."

"What it serves you right for is treating me like a kid," commented Nora. "I don't want to be watched over, and, what's more, I won't be. I'm a woman, like you, earning my living, like you. Don't worry on my account. I can take care of myself. There's no call for you to do it."

"That's where you're wrong," rejoined Patsy in unoffended tone. "You ain't got no head. You couldn't take care of yourself if you was alone in a ten acre field, not to talk of a city full of sharks like New York. But nobody's goin' to put you in the soup if I can help it."

"All right. You've got all the head. Let it go at that. How are we going to get the money for the note? That's what I'd like to know."

"We'll have to save it out of what we earn. There's no other way."

"Couldn't you get it from Dan?"

Patsy looked at her for a few moments before she replied, but there was neither anger nor reproach in her gaze; only sorrow and weariness.

"Ask Dan Mallory for money!" she said brokenly. "Ain't there any limit to what you want me to do for you? Ask him for money! I'd scrub floors first."

She seated herself on the sofa and bent forward, covering her eyes with her hands.

"I'm dead to the world," she murmured. "Make me a cup of coffee, will you?"

Nora went out to comply with the request. At the door she glanced around and saw that her sister was crying.

She had scarcely turned her back when there came a ring at the bell. Patsy sprang up and quickly wiped her tears away. The ring brought Mrs. O'Brien from an inner room.

"So ye've come home, have ye?" she said, going to open the door.

Patsy remained silent.

The person at the door was Mallory. He entered and glanced at Patsy, but offered no word of greeting.

"Where's Patrick?" queried Mrs. O'Brien.

"I dunno," answered Mallory, throwing his hat on a chair. "He'd left the hotel, an' I hunted for him everywhere, but I couldn't find him an' gave it up. I left word at the hotel for him to come on to the flat if he turned up again, as no doubt he will. I got tired of waitin', an', besides, I thought he might 'a' come here by this time."

"Haven't you two seen pop yet?" ventured Patsy timidly.

"No," growled Mallory, without looking at her.

A ray of hope shone in the girl's eyes.

"Then I want"— she began hesitatingly.

"Want phwat?" snapped her mother.

Patsy advanced toward them eagerly.

"I want you both to promise me that you won't say nothin' to him of what you seen tonight. He'd only make a muss with Crawford. No good 'n'd come of that."

"Indade, Oi'll promise nothin' av the koind!" retorted her mother decisively. "D'ye think Oi'm goin' to l'ave ye an' that man to yir carryin's on? Not if Oi know it. Yir father will deal with him an' with ye too."

"You keep quiet an' I'll promise never to see Crawford again—on me honor," she appealed.

"Yir honor!" laughed her mother harshly. "Yir honor!"

"Don't you see I'm doing this for pop's sake?" urged Patsy. "There ain't no need for him to know—to know"—

"The koind ov a girl ye are," broke in her mother angrily. "D'ye think Oi'd decaive him as ye've been decaivin' us?"

"No, there ain't no need for him to know the sort of girl I am," repeated Patsy, writhing under the cruel, unmerited interjection. "You'll promise, mom? It's the last thing I'll ever ask you. Say you will for his sake—for the sake of me that was dear to you once."

She appealed to Mallory in turn:

"Won't you promise?"

Mallory turned to Mrs. O'Brien.

"It won't do no good to tell him," he said. "It's no use breakin' his heart like she's broke mine—an' yours."

"Thin ye promise never to see Crawford ag'in?" demanded her mother.

"I promise, mom. An' you can believe me," she said earnestly.

"All right, then. I won't tell if Danny thinks it best," the old woman agreed.

"What lie are you goin' to frame up for your father?" asked Mallory.

"I'll tell him it's all off between you an' me, an' that's no lie," Patsy answered.

Mrs. O'Brien looked dubious.

"Ye'll have to think of somethin' better'n a quarrel to convince yir father," she said. "He'll want some good reason for me takin' Nora home with me."

"You're goin' to take Nora away from me?" questioned Patsy, with wide, frightened eyes.

"Phwat d'ye think?" flared up her mother. "D'ye s'pose I'd leave me baby with ye? It's hoigh toime she was out av this."

UNDERMUSLINS, WAISTS, WHITE GOODS, EMBROIDERIES, and Kindred Lines Are Represented.

The Undermuslins a Great Feature of the Event

Women will revel in the bounteous and beauteous assortments, in the splendid workmanship and exquisite trimmings of laces and embroideries. The critical observers will especially note with what fullness every garment is modeled, and how perfectly every piece is cut and fashioned, even down to the lowest priced. And the prices are so very reasonable that the home-making of muslinwear will fairly prove a waste of time. Every garment is fresh and dainty, having been made in large, well-lighted, clean, perfectly ventilated workrooms. Forehanded women will buy a year's supply now.

out on a visit. His machine stuck fast in the snow and froze there. Other automobiles met with a like fate on the outskirts of the town and in the absence of the trolley service their occupants were forced to plough through the fast drifting snow.

At 9 o'clock this morning a team attached to a cutter and driven by Hugh Gormley tried to force their way through a snow bank while on the way to the east bound station, and as the horses plunged into the snow the traces broke and the horses made a runaway of it. Patrolman Toby Nolan ran one way and Mr. Gormley another in an effort to head the horses off. Mr. Gormley won the race capturing the animals before they could get onto the track where they were headed for.

The storm cut Scotch Plains off from the outside world and tied things up in general Saturday night and Sunday. The trolley schedule had to be abandoned on account of the drifts near Galvin's Park. The township snow plow was out early Sunday morning, but the paths on many of the streets had to be made in the middle of the road on account of drifts on the sidewalks being four to six feet high.

Another snowstorm is headed this way from the Canadian northwest and should reach this city tomorrow night. Meanwhile the temperature is expected to remain in the vicinity of 20 degrees above zero.

MRS. M. R. KINSEY DIED ON CHRISTMAS MORN.

In the early morning of Saturday, 25th inst., Mrs. Margaret Runyon Kinsey, widow of Moses Kinsey, late of Newark, departed this life at her home, 62 Roseville avenue, Newark. She was taken suddenly ill with a serious atack of pneumonia on Monday, December 20. Shortly thereafter the disease had assumed a very virulent form and while she remained conscious nearly all the time, her attending physician, was soon impressed with the fact that her life was fast ebbing away, and she quietly breathed her life away at 6 o'clock on Christmas morning.

The deecased left her surviving two daughters, Mrs. Oriana Taylor, Mrs. Augusta Burgess and a granddaughter, Clare Burgess. She was a sister of Mrs. John R Morrison and Mrs. Cornelius K. The farm is valued at $7,000.

PATROLMAN VANDERWEG A XMAS EVE HERO

To the vigilance of Patrolman "Mat" Vanderwig, of the local police department, while patroling his "beat" on West Fourth street during the raging snow storm late on Saturday night, three women, residents of the West End, owe their escape from being electrocuted by a live wire which was laying directly across West Fourth street near Plainfield avenue.

The heavy wind which was blowing at the time caused the wire to break and fall to the ground and across the trolley tracks. Vanderweg detected the breaks while walking toward the scene by sparks from the suspended wire where the break occurred.

Approaching the wire in the middle of the tracks Vanderweg also noticed three women coming toward the wire. Realizing the impending danger of a tragedy Vanderweg shouted several warnings to the pedestrians. It was not until they were within ten feet of the wires did the women understand the warnings of the officer.

To prevent any acidents Vanderweg notified the electric light station and the power was shut off.

The women were on their way home from a shopping tour down town and were ladened with bundles containing Christmas presents for their children. They were unable to ride home owing to the cars being stalled and had walked all the way from town in the middle of the tracks.

TRAFFIC RULES CHANGED

New Regulations at North Avenue Station Early in January.

AN IMPROVEMENT PROMISED.

Mayor Acts Promptly on Complaint Made in Communication. in The Daily Press.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, working with the councilmanic police committee, has drafted new traffic regulations to be adopted at the North Avenue Station and put in effect soon after January 1. It is proposed to have a simple diagram of the new idea printed and distributed generally among the cabmen as well as drivers of private carriages so that there may be no misunderstanding as to its provisions.

The proposed changes are a result of the recent letter by Albert H. Atterbury, published in The Daily Press, in which he complained of the present difficulty, the crowding in front of the station platform by owners of private carriages, as well as cabmen in general.

According to the provisions of the proposed new rules, private carriages, automobiles, etc., waiting for passengers, must stand in line at the west end of the station, with right side next the curb, the first vehicle not to stand beyond the west end of the main building.

Public hacks will stand at the east end of the station, left side to the curb and the first hack must not stand beyond the east end of the main building. A police pole will be placed at each of these points to plainly indicate the place and a lighted green lantern will hang on the pole after dark. The space on the curb between these points must be kept clear and vehicles will only be allowed to stand while receiving or discharging passengers.

All vehicles on arriving at the station must take a position at the end of the line and drivers must keep line closed up. As one moves out the line must close up. This must be observed both by private conveyances at one end and hacks at the other. After the line is filled hacks will stand in the street in present place, but must take their place in regular order on end of the line as vacancies are created.

Hackmen must take the first person applying and patrons are requested to take, as far as possible, the first cab in line. No hack will be allowed to wait for any special person in the hack line. These regulatione are made for the good and convenience of all and every one is earnestly requestd to comply and assist the officers in seeing they are carried out.

Mayor Fisk has requested the police committee to furnish him with two of its best men to see that the new rules are strictly enforced and that no partiality is shown to either regular cabmen or drivers of private conveyances.

Barret Clearing Sidewalks.

Street Commissioner John Barrett, of the borough, is not only using his efforts in clearing the borough streets of snow, but he is also devoting his attention to the sidewalks, where the residents and property owners had neglected to do the clearing. As the borough ordinance calls for the prompt removal of snow from the walks after a storm those property owners who failed to comply with the law, will be assessed extra for the work involved in the work.

Entertainment at Bethel.

The Christmas entertainment will be held Thursday night at Bethel chapel at 8 o'clock. All members of the church are invited to be present. The play which the girls intended giving Tuesday night will be given on Thursday night.

Another Good Fellow.

A box of toys addressed to "Santa Claus, care of The Daily Press," was received today in the mail. One of the Good Fellows, acting as proxy, saw that a deserving little boy received it as a belated, but not less appreciated, Christmas present. Several letters from Good Fellows have also been received, but as the list was closed on Friday morning, this acknowledgement is made.

Watch-Night Services at Hope.

The annual watch-night services will be held on Friday night at Hope chapel. Rev. L. R. Howard will be in charge. The services are largely attended as a rule. They will begin at 10:30 and continue until midnight. All members of the chapel are urged to attend.

LAWYERS TO CONSIDER JURY RECOMMENDATION

A committee of five members of the Union County Bar Association was appointed at a meeting held yesterday morning at the Courthouse in Elizabeth to consider the recommendations recently made by the October Grand Jury that the association devise some plan to eliminate the unnecessary time and trouble given to petty cases by the Grand Jury and the expense caused the county when these cases go to trial.

The subject was discussed at length. Former Chancellor William J. Magie told of the law still on the statute books which gives a person convicted of a crime the constitutional right to waive trial by jury or to waive examination by the Grand Inquest. At the time he was Prosecutor, he declared, more than forty years ago, the same trouble with petty cases was experienced by the Grand Jury.

The committee appointed at the meeting yesterday morning will report back at the annual meeting to be held the second Tuesday in January.

LITTLE GIRL IN GRIP OF TWO AILMENTS

Eleanor, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carl, of Lee place, is critically ill with attacks of pneumonia and acute indigestion.

On Christmas day the little girl was happy and apparently in the best of health. During the day she ate an unusual amount of pop corn. At supper she also ate heartily of macaroni. During the night she was attacked with painful illness.

A physician was called, who diagnosed the case as acute indigestion, while yesterday the symptoms of pneumonia appeared. The combination is considered as most unusual particularly in the case of a child.

CHRISTMAS DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB

The annual Christmas dance at the Park club, last night, was attended by nearly three hundred members and their friends, including a large number of out-of-town guests. The large auitorium was appropriately decorated for the event with roping of greens, while in the centre of the stage was a handsome Christmas tree, covered with attractive ornaments.

It was about 8:30 o'clock when the dancing started and this was continued until an early hour this morning, with an intermission at midnight for refreshments. Music for dancing was furnished by Muller's orchestra, of Brooklyn, and was one of the features.

The patronesses for the affair were Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. William McCutchen, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore and Mrs. Clifford W. McGee. The next event of interest at the club will be the junior dance on New Year's eve and the New Year's Day reception, which will be in charge of the entertainment committee. The New Year's day reception is usually a big affair at the club and this year it is proposed to make it better than ever.

FEAST OF CIRCUMCISION AT GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

The regular midnight service on New Year's eve has been cancelled for this year, and it is desired that the members of the congregation will avail themselves of the service on New Year's day instead of the one ordinarily held on New Year's eve.

The Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson will hold his annual reception on New Year's day, and will be at home to receive guests between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

POLITICAL GOVT. ADDRESS

Miss Mary Thompson Reads Paper Before Equal Suffrage League.

LENGTHY DISCUSSION FOLLOWS

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller to Speak On "The Right and Obligations of Citizenship."

Miss Mary Thompson, of North Plainfield, read a paper before the Equal Suffrage League yesterday at the home of Mrs. C. L. Riley, which is considered to have been one of the best articles yet placed before the members. Miss Thompson's topic was "How a Party Platform is Constructed." The original intention was to tell of the old political method of constructing a platform, but the topic was changed owing to the fact that the methods of today are the same as they were seventy-five years ago.

Miss Thompson said that the operations of a national political organization are based upon the same principles as those controlling the National Government. The principle of two-fold representation, i. e., representation of the people as expressed at the primaries through delegates, and representation of States as expressed in the State convention through delegates-at-large. That upon the policy of the primary depends the platform of the nation. That the women then as sometime electors and meantime influential members of the smallest representative unit, the home, should turn their time away from organized charity plans to the study of Government and the nature of their fellow man in order to insure the best timber and stauchest building of the platform which supports the nation.

The next meeting of the League will be held on Monday, January 24, at the home of Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, 744 Watchung avenue. Mrs. Miller will then read a paper having for its title: "The Right and Obligations of Citizenship."

After the meeting yesterday tea was served by the hostess and a lively discussion of the topic introduced by Miss Thompson was indulged in.

WILLING WORKERS PRESENT THEIR TEACHER WITH BIBLE.

Horace J. Martin's Sunday school class at Trinity Reformed church, known as "The Willing Workers," enjoyed last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Kenney, of Pearl street. The evening was spent in a social way and Mr. Martin was presented with a teacher's Bible by the members of the class. The presentation was made by Rev John Y. Broek, pastor of the church, on behalf of the class.

During the evening the class elected these officers for the coming year: President, Miss Anna Scheelein; vice-president, Miss Mary Seidentop; secretary, Mrs. Martin Hanson; treasurer, Miss Jean Lindsay.

JERSEY CENTRAL SERVICE

Several Protests are Made Against Treatment at Grant Ave. Station.

AGENT IS SEVERELY SCORED.

Netherwood Station Locked Up at Sunset and Company's Park Is In Darkness.

Several Plainfielders, residents of the West End, who have had occasion to take trains at the Grant Avenue station recently, have filed a chain of kicks with The Daily Press, which covers alleged discourteous and careless treatment at the hands of the ticket agent, and because of lack of accommodations for night passengers during the recent storm.

On Sunday night it is reported that a number of passengers, including a small boy, were obliged to remain outdoors, until a policeman ordered the ticket agent to open the doors. The agent, it is alleged, was engaged in playing cards in the office with a party of friends while the people were suffering from the cold blasts outside of the depot. The policeman's attention was called to the matter by the crys of the little boy who was suffering from pain caused by the exposure.

Rev. C. W. T. Attlee, of West End avenue, is another Plainfielder who has a grievance. Mr. Attlee had an engagement to preach at Keyport last Sunday. He went to the Grant avenue office, asked for a ticket, and also requested the agent to flag the train. Mr. Attlee declares that the agant, instead of giving him a ticket and flagging the train, engaged in a conversation with a party of friends on the outside. The result was that the train did not stop, and Dr. Attlee was unable to keep his engagement.

The Netherwood station is locked up at 6 o'clock and the company also refuses to light its park.

Will Be a "Giving Christmas."

The Christmas entertainment for the Sabbath school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be held at the church tonight. It is to be a "giving Christmas" and the gifts are to be "dry groceries" to help stock the storehouse of the Day Nursery, managed by the City Union of The King's Daughters.

CHRISTMASTIDE GAIETIES

Teas, Receptions, Dances and Other Festivities of the Season.

SOME ARE FOR DEBUTANTES.

Bridge Whist, Dinners, Luncheons and Other Social Functions Announced.

Gaities claiming the attention of society folk during the present week began with the dance at the Park Club house last night. Today teas will be given for the introduction into society of Miss Edith Griscom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Griscom, at her home on Sycamore avenue; Miss Helen Cruikshank, daughter of S. A. Cruikshank, at the home on Belvidere avenue, and of Miss Hope Ivins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, at her home on Hillside avenue. A dance will follow the tea given for Miss Ivins.

Thursday evening Miss Gladys Peck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue will give a dance at the Park Club house. Friday night the Charity Ball for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital will be held at the Hartridge School auditorium, preceded by the play "The Climax" in which Effingham Pinto has scored such a great success.

Besides these large functions and the festivities of New Year's day, there are many smaller parties for dancing and bridge, luncheons, teas and dinners. The week will be a busy one for those fairly launched on the social stream.

The luncheon and reception which was announced for yesterday at the Plainfield Country Club for two of the season's debutantes, Miss Hope Ivins and Miss Lillian King, had to be postponed owing to the fact that the storm made travel to and from the club impossible at that time. The affair was planned and was to have been given by Mrs. E H. Booth, of Central avenue.

Several hours before the time appointed for the luncheon it was decided that traffic conditions would not permit of its being held. It was learned that not only the guests could not reach the club but it would be impossible to transport necessary articles there. The postponement was a great disappointment to the hundreds of invited guests, but Mrs. Booth expects to arrange for another date in the near future.

THIS YOUNG WOMAN THANKS DAILY PRESS.

Through the publiration of the fact in The Daily Press, the young woman who dropped a package in the postoffice last week bearing no address and nothing but a ten-cent stamp, recovered the parcel and was able to put the address on it in time for her gift to reach its destination nearly on time. The sender explained to Postmaster Bird that in the holiday rush she had entirely forgotten to address the package.

This morning a number of regular postal cards already stamped were dropped in at the postoffice and each one bore an additional one-cent postage stamp. One, whose attention was called to the matter, suggested that it might be a wise idea to introduce as a part of the curriculum in the public schools here a study of the postal system. He thought it would be more advantageous than some of the new idea branches now pursued.

E. WILLIAMS WINS SUIT AGAINST WM. DARSCH

Judge William Newcorn has rendered his decision in the suit brought by Edward Williams, of Westfield, against William Darsch, of the same place, in favor of Williams, awarding the latter $140.50 damages.

Williams is a grocery clerk and was in the employ of a grocer in Westfield. He fell at the bottom of the cellar steps of Darsch's house and broke his leg. At the time of the accident there was insufficient light at the entrance to the cellar and Williams did not see a trench or drain which was just beyond the bottom step. He was carrying a bag of potatoes which weighed about 180 pounds and as he stepped into the trench the weight of the bag threw him to the ground, causing the injury.

Judge Newcorn in his opinion declared that the defendant, Darsch, did not use the necessary care in warning Williams of the trench and was therefore liable for the injury.

Francis J. Blatz represented Williams and W. A. Coddington appeared for Darsch.

BALDWIN JAILED FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

George Baldwin was committed to the city police headquarters yesterday on a commitment for contempt of court. Judge William Newcorn ordered Baldwin's detention for a fine of $50. Baldwin is to stand committed until this fine is paid.

Baldwin was sued in the District court by C. A. Reed on a note and judgment was given to Mr. Reed on January 30, 1908 for $159.00. An execution was issued against Baldwin on June 23, 1909, and later supplementary proceedings were started. Baldwin was cited to appear before the District court, but instead went to Harry C. Runyon, in chambers, as Master in Chancery.

The warrant for Baldwin's arrest was issued on December 16 and his formal commitment was made out this morning by Judge Newcorn.

MISSING MAN PICKED UP BY A PATROLMAN

J. B. Dick, of Dunellen, who was reported to the police as missing from his home last week, was picked up by Patrolman McDonald yesterday on West Front street, and brought to police headquarters. Dick explained his absence by saying that he had been to Plainfield on business, but he could not explain what the nature of the business was.

Lois Rogers Ill at Hospital.

Lois Rogers, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rogers, of "Highland Farm," is very ill at Muhlenberg Hospital with penumonia. The child was taken ill about a week ago and was removed to the hospital Christmas Eve. Mr. Rogers, who made the trip to the institution in his sleigh, met with many difficulties, the snow having drifted so that his sleigh was upset several times and both he and his child were thrown out. The child has also been suffering from an abcess in the ear, necessitating an operation.

Had Delightful Holiday Trip.

Mrs. and Mrs. J. V. Beekman, of West Eighth street, have returned from a holiday trip to St. Paul, Minn., and Clarksville, Tenn., where they visited relatives. At St. Paul they found the weather twelve below zero, with not as much snow as in Plainfield and at Clarksville there was as much snow as here, with plenty of good skating and freezing temperature.

Snowstorm Stagnates Business in City and Borough Trade Circles.

MR. GAVETT MAKES HEADWAY.

Street Commissioner Has a Force of Seventy-five Men at Work Cleaning Snow From the Streets.

Business in all the local stores, especially in the grocery and butcher establishments is stagnated on account of the snowstorm. A prominent merchant of this city stated to a reporter for The Daily Press today that the loss of business, as a result of the storm will easily approximate $25,000. The storm, however, gave many merchants the opportunity of having a breathing spell after a brisk holiday business. While the storm has caused a lull in business conditions, the storekeepers are as a rule thankful that the blizzard held off as long as it did.

Had it occurred twelve hours or even a day earlier, the windup of the holiday trade would have been paralyzed, and a big loss encountered by the dry goods establishments and toy dealers.

The big loss in business is due to the inability of storekeepers to deliver orders owing to the bad condition of the roads and also because customers are unable to reach the stores, especially from the outlying districts.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett is succeeding admirably in clearing the streets of snow in the business districts. At the present time he is concentrating his efforts in having Front and Somerset streets cleared. A part of Watchung avenue was cleared yesterday, and Park and North avenues will be tackled next.

Altogether about seventy-five men, twelve teams and thirteen single carts are in commission representing a daily expense of nearly $200 to the city. The work started Sunday afternoon with a few men and thirty-six men were at work yesterday.

In addition to the street squads, there are also three gangs at work clearing the sidewalks. This work was started in the center of the city yesterday at noon and the gangs will be busy for several days. The expense of this work is covered by the general fund, and is charged to the property owners.

Tenants and property owners as a rule have been prompt in clearing their sidewalks, according to Mr. Gavett. The bad walks which have been neglected are almost universally in front of vacant houses and lots.

It is the expectation of Mr. Gavett to have the business part of the town in good shape by tomorrow night. Last year being a light winter the expense resulting from the light snowfalls was $060. The indications are that the present storm will double that amount for this year.

The storm had one good side. It was a big boon to the unemployed men of the city. As a rule, all applicants for jobs, were given work by Commissioner Gavett. To supply the extra demand for work fifty new snow shovels were purchased.

The arteries of travel are now operating on schedule including the steam and trolley service.

Wrong Address, Brother.

William Besler, vice president and general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, lives in a town not touched by any railroad. It is North Plainfield, but the Central's Plainfield station is only a little more than a stone's throw away from the dividing line between the two places.—Newark Sunday Call.

Beg your pardon, W. G. Besler lives in Plainfield, through which three big roads run, and where there are four stations.

ENGINEER STRUCK HEAD AGAINST POLE.

Bordentown, Dec. 28.—Chester Archer, of Camden, engineer of a passenger train on the Amboy division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was nearly killed at 1:30 Sunday morning while running his train in the storm from Camden to Trenton. Two miles above Bordentown, while Archer was watching for signals, his head came in contact with a telegraph pole. He was rendered unconscious and blood streamed from his wounds.

Joshua Matthews, firemen, of Bordentown, held the engineer with one hand and ran the train into Trenton with the other. Archer was taken to the Mercer Hospital in that city.

He is still alive, but is in a precarious condition.

His father, at one time, was yardhouse keeper in Camden. The injured engineer resided with his widowed mother.

Children Give Play.

"Slimmi's Slippers" was the title of a clever little comedy in three acts given by children in the Westfield Casino yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the Woman's Guild of St. Paul's Episcopal church. The play was gotten up by Mrs. Watts, of Westfield. Those in the cast were: Balavan, cadi of Bagdad, Ruskin Watts; Urad, a gentleman in waiting, Spencer Hyde; Misnar, a wealthy gentleman, Walter Bliss; fisherman, B. Harold Dewey; a miserly merchant of Bagdad, Hilary Watts; Zuleika, his wife, Marjorie Cosgrove; Houra, their daughter, Jocelyn Watts.

Deeper Inlet Doomed.

Atlantic City, Dec. 28.—The deeper Absecon Inlet project has been dealt a severe blow in the official report of the Board of Engineers. Although the board still gives interested parties an opportunity for a hearing before killing the project altogether, it reports to the army authorities that in its judgment the undertaking is inadvisable and not feasible from an engineering standpoint.

STATE WAGING WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Trenton, Dec. 28.—During the past fiscal year New Jersey expended nearly $2,000,000 in caring for upwards of 10,000 inmates of its penal and charitable institutions. The exact cost of the penal and correctional institutions was $600,804, and of the charitable institutions $1,206,390, a total of $1,807,195. This is a decrease of $31,119 from the preceding year in the amount expended for penal establishments and an increase of $160,574 for the charitable institutions, making the net increase $130,455.

The total number of inmates in charitable institutions last year was 6,883, in penal and correctional institutions 2,583, and in soldiers' homes 754, making a total of 10,220 persons under the custodial care of the State. This was an increase of five over 1908, showing that the population of the State institutions in the aggregate has not changed perceptibly in the two years past. These figures, taken from the annual report of Commissioner George B. Wight, of the Department of Charities and Corrections, comprise only a small part of the interstate data which has been collected by the department. The financial statistics embrace only the money which has been expended by the State and did not include expenditures by the various counties or municipalities.

The expenditures for penal and correctional institutions were divided as follows: State Prison, $279,650; Rahway Reformatory, $164,350; State Home for Boys, $85,308; State Home for Girls, $71,496.

The expenditures for charitable institutions were: State Hospital at Morris Plains, $291,875; State Hospital at Trenton, $210,650; county insane hospitals, $249,300; Epileptic Village, $132,700; Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glen Gardner, $84,250; Home for Feeble Minded Women, $40,796; Home for Feeble Minded Children, $72,000; Blind Children, $15,000; Soldiers' Home at Kearny, $50,000; Soldiers' Home at Vineland, $59,819. Of these expenditures $35,000 were for improvements at the State Hospital in this city and $58,500 were for improvements at the Epileptic Village.

Dr. Wight reviews the work accomplished during the year at each of the State institutions and in most instances pays tribute to the methods employed in dealing with the State's wards. At the same time he makes a number of suggestions for betterments, calling particular attention to institutions whose needs have become most pressing. The work of the Tuberculosis Sanatorium comes in for attention in the report and in discussing the subject generally Dr. Wight says::

"The State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glen Gardner is doing excellent work along the line marked out for it by law, but its object continues to be largely misunderstood by the general public. Constantly applications are being made by indigent and friendless patients suffering from consumption, and great is their disappointment when denied admission to the institution, but it is not a hospital, and cannot be under the statute creating it. It is a Sanatorium for incipient cases, and those alone."

RECONCILIATION AFTER ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.

Despondent because he was separated from his wife, Wallace Gracie, twenty years old, of 176 DeWitt avenue, Belleville, attempted suicide Saturday afternoon by drinking the contents of an ounce bottle of chloroform. He was removed to the Newark City Hospital, where the doctors succeeded in saving his life, and Sunday he and his wife became reconciled, and when he leaves the hospital and explains his attempt on his life to the police, they will, according to Gracie, live together again.

Gracie took the chloroform while standing in front of 60 Clifton avenue. The man was unconscious when taken to the hospital, and a stomach pump was used to save his life. A note written on a leaf from a notebook was found in his pocket. It read: "This is a case of too much mother-in-law, the cause of my wife going back on me, the girl I cannot live without." The note added: "Send for my wife at once at 16 Highland avenue."

Two years ago Gracie and Miss Mabel Ecker were married, and resided with the young wife's parents. Several months ago they separated, the wife remaining with her mother and Gracie going back to live with his parents. Mrs. Gracie and her husband had a long talk yesterday, which resulted in the reconciliation. They have a baby several months old.

His Auto Runs Away.

Jersey City, Dec. 28.—Automobile No. 40,673, N. Y., driven by William A. Lang, of 4379 Boulevard, ran into a fire hydrant at the Boulevard and Woodlawn avenue, early Sunday morning. The machine was driven by Lang at a fair rate of speed when he lost control of it at Woodlawn avenue. A second later the heavy machine crashed into the hydrant. The damage to the machine was slight.

JERSEY CONGRESSMAN WANTS CLEANER MONEY.

When Representative William H. Wiley was in Congress three years ago he introduced a bill for "clean money" which did not get beyond the pigeonholes of the committee. At that time Representative Fowler, of Elizabeth, was chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, and as he was busy in his fight to get a bill of his own reported by the committee, he did not have time to look into the merits of Mr. Wiley's bill.

In the opinion of the major there is no reason why this Nation should not have as clean money as England and some of the countries of Continental Europe. It is the intention of the Congressman from East Orange to take up his "clean money bill" this winter, after his work as a member of the District of Columbia Committee is out of the way, and make an effort to have the committee give the bill the consideration it deserves. Major Wiley has the hearty approval of all of the Treasury Department officials, who would like to see the bill become a law.

KILLS WIFE WITH GUN; CALLS IT AN ACCIDENT.

Elizabeth, Dec. 28.—Walter P. Jacobsen, a young National Guardsman, shot and killed his wife, at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, at their home, 409 Catherine street, this city. The shooting was done with Jacobsen's regimental rifle and he claims it was purely an accident.

So far as known the couple had no family troubles. Jacobsen is a private in Company C, Second New Jersey Regiment, and is twenty-four years old. His wife was twenty years old. They have one child, two years old. The body of the dead woman was removed to the morgue, while her husband was locked up at police headquarters pending an investigation of the affair by County Physician Westcott yesterday afternoon.

Killed After Quarrel.

David Slickwis shot Deneta Leleak in the breast Saturday night, killing him instantly. The murder occurred on a road three miles from Andover, N. J. Edward Dockery, a negro, gave the alarm, but, owing to the storm, the authorities were not notified until seventeen hours after the shooting, and the murderer escaped. Leleak and Slickwis were employed on the Lackawanna "cut off" near Andover. They quarrelled Saturday morning, and on Saturday night about 6 o'clock left their boarding places armed. They met on a lonely stretch of road. Without any warning Slickwis shot Leleak three times, each of the bullets lodging in the victim's breast.

THE ART OF MAKING FRIENDS.

Because of our modern system of luxury there are those who claim that friendship can no longer exist, for the reason that it entails no sacrifices, writes Thomas L. Masson in Lippincott's Magazine. Our friends, or those who go by the name, are all mightily independent of us. Should they, by any happy or unhappy accident of Fate, be lacking in any one thing, we may not supply it to them, for if we do we run the risk of offending their pride.

If one of them is caught in the market, or is unexpectedly pinched for money, the opportunity to be of service is usually denied us, for the reason that we ourselves are pretty likely to be in the same case. The reason for this is that our modern society is so closely interwoven, that of necessity we must all stand or fall together. This masses individuals more, and makes them, as individuals, less than they were formerly; while at the same time, although as a whole they are more homogeneous, they touch each other only on the surface.

Even under these deterrent conditions, however, the making of friends is good sport, if for nothing else than the danger it involves; not necessarily because your friend will borrow money from you, or put you to any material discomfort or embarrassment, btu because you are likely to come to know him too well. You are so used to your own peculiarities, your little, fatal weaknesses, that you come to accept them as a matter of course, and usually brush them aside when you are otherwise engaged. But with your friend it is different. His faults, like the flaws in the painting that is right under your nose, are the only things that you see.

It is always safer and better, therefore, to be friends with some one who lives at a distance, and whom you can see only occasionally. Thus your feeling of friendship for him is always fresh.

The best friend is the man who, no matter how intimate you are with him, never becomes confidential. We would not impose our confidence upon a comparative stranger. Why should we do so with our best friend.

This is the real reason why friendships are so hard to achieve. The moment we come to know our friend, we insist on imposing on him.

On the contrary, we should always be on our best behavior with him. When he comes to realize that no amount of intimacy can break this down, he will permanently respect us.

PATIENT JAPANESE WOMEN.

Kanazawa, Japan, is noted for its production of habutae, a certain kind of glossy white silk. The annual output amounts in value to 2,000,000 yen, or about $1,000,000. In the manufacture of the habutae thousands of women are employed, who work from early dawn till after sunset, each one at an old-fashioned weaving frame, using both hands and feet to operate the noisy old machine, says The Spirit of Missions. The large number of women engaged in this monotonous occupation may be inferred from the fact that almost everywhere in town the peculiar sound—clack-a-ta-clack, clack-a-ta-clack, rather rapidly—of these weaving frames is audible.

About as many women are employed in the manufacture of embroideries for the large wholesale and export stores in Yokohama, Kyoto and Kobe; but the life of the embroidery women is perhaps not so hard, not so confining as that of the weavers, for they are sometimes allowed to do the work at their own homes and are paid only by the piece. Still, the mapority are hard-worked, having strict masters, who themselves are under contract to furnish goods to the large export houses.

This contractor hires, we will say, 100 women, paying them what in America would be considered starvation wages. He reqquires them to work seven days a week while the daylight lasts, summer or winter, with only one hour's intermission for the midday meal.

The home life and home influence of such a woman, many of them mothers, must amount to very little; and yet, without a word of complaint, but with a happy face and a ready smile, she goes to her daily task and works from twelve to fourteen hours for the pittance she needs for her family. If it were attempted to put revolutionary ideas into her head she would say: "It's the custom and it can't be helped."

Trentonians are looking forward with much interest to the visit of Commander Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, on January 21. Commander Peary, together with J. E. Hansdell, president of the National River and Harbors Congress, will be the guests at that time at the annual dinner of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce. Henry C. Hancock, the retiring president of the organization, will leave on January 25 for an extended trip through Europe.

Pastor Gets Large Purse.

Bayonne, Dec. 28.—The congregation of the Calvary Episcopal church, this city, has just presented its rector, the Rev. Horatio Watts Maguire, with a purse containing several hundred dollars. The Rev. Mr. Maguire resigned the rectorship two weeks ago. He preached his farewell sermon Sunday.

ADOLPH MACK EXPIRED AT AGE OF SEVENTY-FOUR.

Adolph Mack, seventy-four years old, treasurer and for some time head of the Raritan Woolen Mills, died at his home at Somerville Saturday. Mr. Mack was born at Furth, near Nuremberg, Germany, in 1835, and came to this country in 1853. He was in business in Cincinnati for many years with one of the oldest hardware firms there. Afterward he was engaged in the silk business in New York city, but for the last thirty years had been associated with the Einsteins in the woolen industry at Raritan. His wife, who was a Miss Einstein and a sister of Edwin Einstein, who ran for Mayor of New York city at one time, died about three years ago.

Mr. Mack is survived by a son, Alexander W. Mack, connected with him in business, and a daughter, Miss Clara Mack.

HARMLESS "HIGHWAYMEN."

From the nervous condition of Galvestonians resultant from recent assaults, burglaries and robberies, and rumors of other burglaries and robberies, many peculiar and amusing incidents have developed, says the Galverton (Tex), Tribune.

A few nights ago a well-known business man returning home from a singing society rehearsal about midnight spied what he believed to be two desperate burglars or highwaymen. He was making his way eastwardly on Broadway, when suddenly the forms of two negroes mounted on bicycles whisked around a corner ahead of him and made their way rubber-tiredly eastward a block or two, then disappeared around another corner leading north from Broadway. The well-known business men bethought himself these two very suspicious looking characters might be plotting to hold him up. He was trying to whistle the thought out of his mind when, having walked another block, approaching close to another street intersection he spied two men in a crouching position beside a cluster of oleander bushes and in the background he saw the two wheels leaning burglarlike against the sidewalk curbing.

Quickly convening a council of war himself, while his heart ran up to 177 strokes a second, the W. K. B. man debated with himself whether he should retreat and be shot in the back or face the two highwaymen and cough up what loose change and jewelry he sported. It was finally decided, and in less time than it takes to mention it, that the W. K. B. man should face the music even though his knees trembled slightly. My, what a state of affairs, what a police force, and what a cold-blooded world to permit a good citizen to be waylaid and punched and robbed.

The two negroes were still crouching and glistening in the faint light their victim could see pieces of steel—burglars' tools, pistols, bowie knives and other instruments of torture.

A silent prayer and the W. K. B. man stepped out to be slaughtered.

"Hello, boss!" came the salutation from one of the highwaymen, and the business man felt his courage creeping through his veins, and with an artificial naturalness he returned the greeting and stepping closer perceived that the two negroes were buckling on roller skates. Even while the white citizen stopped to shake his frame back in place the two darkies struck out and cut a few didoes on the spacious concrete sidewalk in front of the home of a prominent Galvestonian.

"You see, boss," exclaimed one of the darkies. "Washington Hamilton has been capturing all the prize money at the rink for fancy skating and Bill Jones and me concluded we would do a little practising while the night is cool on Mr. ————'s sidewalk."

The following day a sign decorated the sidewalk aforesaid, reading thusly: "Roller skating prohibited on this sidewalk." Evidently the darkies had skated some that night and perhaps other nights before the owner of the sidewalk was aroused to the situation.

Family in Fear of Black Hand.

Developments yesterday, following an insignificant fire at the home of Thomas J. Moloney, No. 114 Henry street, Orange, Sunday night, convince the police that the family are the objects of an attack by a Black Hand scheme. Evidence has been discovered showing that the fire was unquestionably of incendiary origin, and now comes the information that since December 17 the family has been in terror of some unknown enemey, who wrote at that time to the effect that if $500 was not placed at the disposal of the writer, "Tom," meaning either the head of the family or his son, three years old, would come to harm.

Sparks Fired Load of Hay.

Roselle, Dec. 28.—Sparks from a locomotive set fire to bundles of hay on a heavily loaded wagon belonging to the Hildebrant Company, wholesale grocers, of Elizabeth, while the wagon was crossing the Central Railroad at Linden avenue Friday. The flames spread so quickly that the wagon was almost completely destroyed. John Martin, the driver, had to jump from the wagon seat to escape the flames. He was severely burned about the face and hands in cutting his team from the burning wagon.

WOMAN DIES FROM EXPOSURE.

Falls in Paterson Street, Overcome by Cold and Fatigue.

Overcome by the cold and the exertions of climbing over snow banks on her way home, Mrs. Meliaas Barborrow late Sunday night fell exhausted on the trolley tracks in Grand street, Paterson. A belated trolley car was approaching when Policeman Kearney saw the unconscious form.

Mrs. Barborrow was taken to her home, in Pine street, where she died within an hour. She was the mother of nine adult children and was sixty years old.

LIVING OVER THE CATACOMBS.

Paris, in many of its districts, is built over the catacombs, writes Rowland Strong in Harper's Weekly. These vast subterranean chambers and galleries produce that peculiar cavernous sound which is heard in the Luxembourg, Montparnasse, Vaugirard, Montrougue and Montsouris quarters when heavy carts pass rapidly along the coarsely metaled roads. The streets are then like monstrous drums beating funeral marches to theg rave over that vast common grave of ten centuries of Parisians with its milious of skeleton dead.

That quaint little Gothic house at the corner of the recently prolonged Boulsevard Raspail, which many an American artist must remember from his student days, actually has a private staircase leading to the catacombs from beneath a hermetically closed stone slab just in front of the doorstep. From time to time, certain municipal official s visit this grim entrance, the existence of which is known to only very few people.

A former occupant of the house, surprised by one of these visits, the reason of which was mysterious to him, was accustomed to relate that once in the dead of night, while he watched, quaking, from the room above, convinced that he was witnessing the final scene in some Borgia-like political tragedy, a party of men, the chief of whom wore half-concealed under his coat the tricolor scarf of a police commissary, had conveyed a body through this entrance into the catacombs below.

A few days later he was annoyed by a cadaverous smell rising through the boards of his dining room floor. The nuisance was almost certainly attributable to a dead rat, but, to complete his discomfort, every morning at 5 o'clock an empty school omnibus belonging to the College Stanislas pased through the narrow street on its way to pick up pupils, rousing the thunderous and sepulchral echoes of the catacombs with such vibratory effect as to give him alarming palpitations of the heart. Being a man of imaginative temperament, he decided to transfer his residence to the right bank of the Seine. He had also been much troubled by the noise of cats.

Hoboken Police Attack Mayor.

The Hoboken Police Board had an acrimonious session last evening, and Mayor Steil was bitterly denounced and accused of breaking his promise. He was verbally assailed by Patrick R. Griffin, chairman of the Democratic City Committee; Police Commissioner Capelli and Committeemen Wren and Buckley. The row is the result of factional strife in the Democratic party.

THE UPPER HOUSE'S NEW OFFICIALS NAMED

Trenton, Dec. 28.—The Republican majority members of the State Senate, in caucus here yesterday, ratified the "slate" arranged for by them during the closing hours of the Legislature. As was expected, Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Raritan, Somerset county, was agreed upon for the Presidency of the 1910 session, and Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, Union county, was picked for the majority leader.

Without a dissenting vote, also, Howard Tyler, a newspaper man, of Cumberland county, was again chosen to be the Senate secretary for the next session, and William C. Murphy, editor of one of "Davy" Baird's papers in Camden, was once more given the assistant secretaryship.

The other officers selected were:

Journal Clerk—John W. Clift, Union.

Sergeant-at-Arms — Gaudaloup A. Holl, Mercer.

Assistant Sergeant - at - Arms—Charles R. Fenton, Burlington.

Bill Clerk—John Heck, Bergen.

Assistant Bill Clerk—C. W. Homan, Cape May.

Supervisor of Bills—Edward A. Sexsmith, Monmouth.

Assistant Supervisor of Bills—Benjamin Paterson, Salem.

Stenographer—Elwood W. Moore, Mercer.

The snowstorm in South Jersey delayed the starting of the caucus. Senators Minch, Plummer and Gaunt did not arrive at all and the caucus was held without them.

At the close of the Legislature last spring when former Senate President Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington, was appointed by Governor Fort to the Chancery clerkship, Senator Frelinghuysen, who has acted as majority leader of the 1909 session, was named as president and served as such for an hour. At the same time Senator Ackerman was given Mr. Frelinghuysen's place as majority leader, the understanding being then that the two selections should remain in force during the 1910 session. It was merely in ratification of that understanding that the selections were indorsed yesterday.

Secretary Tyler called the caucus to order and asked for nominations for chairman, which carries with it the majority leadership. Senator Ackerman was named by Senator Wakelee.

There had been some talk during the fall that Senator Harry D. Leavitt, of Mercer, would go after the leadership, but no such intention was shown by Mr. Leavitt yesterday, as he seconded the nomination of Mr. Ackerman.

Senator Frelinghuysen was then nominated for President by Senator Bradley.

The selection of the other officers followed. After the caucus President Frelinghuysen let it be known that he would name Clarence E. Case, of Somerville, as his private secretary.

The Republicans have a majority of nine in the next Senate, and yesterday's selection assures to Mr. Frelinghuysen later his formal election to the Presidency.

The Democrats will not caucus until the Senate meets.

Senator Frelinghuysen and Senator Ackerman are both millionaires, and each has been mentioned as Gubernatorial possibilities next year. Mr. Frelinghuysen is an avowed candidate for the Governorship and intends to make a personal campaign of the State to obtain the nomination. He lives about a mile and a half back of Raritan and is in the insurance business in New York. Mr. Ackerman is in the cement business in New York.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

On Thursday evening L. S. Sire will present Joseph Bryon Totten's drama of Mexican life "The Call," at the Plainfield theatre. The scenes are laid in the foothills of the Rockies in Mexico and have to do with one Piquita, a handsome halfbred Spanish girl, Don Pedro de Scavillo, a handsome Spanish bandit, Clyde Wilson Harrison, a stalwart young American and his sweetheart, Sue Gertrude Harrison. It tells the passionate love and hatred of the Spanish girl who hates gringo's but falls in love with the American in the end, and thereby loses her life. The production is elaborately mounted and Mr. Sire has given it a small cast.

Every member of the cast of players which will give "The Climax" at the Plainfield theatre, December 31, is not only an actor, but also a piano player, singer and especially an educated musician. Joe Weber, the producer, has had a great deal of difficulty in securing players who combine these talents. He is said to have seen over 1,500 players before the proper material could be secured.

"St. Elmo," a dramatization of the once widely popular and still read novel of the same name by Augusta Evans Wilson, will be the offering at the Plainfield theatre matinee and night January 1. A lavish production of the play has been made by Vaughan Glaser and a cast of superior excellence has been engaged to portray the various characters. The mounting of the piece as regards scenery and effects, is said to be exceptionally fine and no expense has been spared by Mr. Glaser to make this the most pretentious of the attractions playing the circuit.

MR. TAFT'S RULING UPON WHISKY CLASSES

Washington, Dec. 28.—The word "whisky" was defined Sunday by the highest American authority when President Taft rendered the final decision on the subject in connection with the construction of the provision of the pure food law with reference to labeling. The President held that whisky made of neutral spirits is whisky when reduced to potable strength.

The decision follows the lines of the conclusions reached by the Royal Commission of Great Britain and reverses the verdict of former President Roosevelt, former Attorney-General Bonaparte, Solicitor-General Bowers and Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry. The Roosevelt-Bonaparte-Wiley order denied the use of the word "whisky" in branding to all liquor except "straight whisky"—the whisky which is aged in charred oak casks. Mr. Bowers extended the use of the word to liquors made of "rectified" and "distilled" spirits. President Taft goes a step further and includes blends and whisky made from "neutral spirits."

According to the instructions under this decision "straight whiskies" will hereafter be branded as such, but the brand may be acompanied by the legend "aged in wood," and whisky made from rectified, distilled or neutral spirits will be branded so as to make known the principal ingredient. In addition, if they so desire, manufacturers of straight whisky may also use the word "bourbon" or "rye," as the facts may warrant.

The definition of "blends" is not made broad enough to include neutral spirits made from molasses and reduced to potable strength. This article the President says cannot be labeled as whisky; it is rum.

The President takes Dr. Wiley and other chemists to task for a "fundamental error," as to what the name "whisky" has included during the past 100 years, and he also expresses the opinion that Mr. Bowers makes "too nice a distinction" in his deductions.

The President thinks that such an order as his decision contemplates cannot do injustice.

"Those," he says, "who make whisky of 'rectified,' 'redistilled,' or 'neutral' spirits cannot complain if, in order to prevent further frauds, they are required to use a brand which shall show exactly the kind of whisky they are selling. For that reason it seems to me fair to require them to brand their product as 'whisky made from rectified spirits' or 'whisky made from redistilled spirits,' or 'whisky made from neutral spirits,' as the case may be; and if aged in the wood, as sometimes is the case with this class of whiskies, they may add this fact."

MAYOR AND SISTERS VICTIMS OF MISHAPS.

Paterson, Dec. 28.—Mayor Andrew F. McBride is ill at his home suffering from blood poisoning, and his two sisters sustained fractured bones on Christmas and Christmas eve. It was reported this morning that Mayor McBride lost the thumb of his left hand by amputation. This report, however, was denied at his home. Dr. McBride was sterilizing an instrument after having performed an operation, when he accidently scratched his finger with it. Blood poisoning followed, and for the past two days he has been confined to his home, Main street.

Miss Mamie McBride was in Main street Christmas eve when she slipped and fell. She sustained a compound fracture of the arm and a broken wrist. While going over to visit her sister and brother, Mrs. Annie Nolan, wife of Captain Charles Nolan, of the fire department, slipped on the icy pavement, fell and broke her collar bone Christmas Day. She was removed to her home in a cab.

Mayor McBride and his sisters are being attended by Dr. Henry Parke and Dr. Archibald Alexander.

CASHIER'S CASE HEARD.

Trenton, Dec. 28.—An effort to quash the indictment found by the United States Grand Jury last June against Charles W. Jones, former cashier of the First National Bank of Seabright, was made yesterday before Judge Joseph Cross. Decision was reserved. Holmes V. M. Dennis, Jr., of counsel for Jones, charged that the evidence was not sufficient to indict, and that extraneous and scandalous matter had been injected into the case by individuals with claims against the defendant.

Judge Cross notified the lawyers for Jones that such grounds would not be considered by him in the motion to quash, and said he would overrule the entire set of reasons stated in the notice of the motion. He told counsel that they did not know, as they had intimated, what happened before the grand jury; that the court did not, and that although the district attorney does know, it is not his business to divulge. Later the court decided to take the briefs on a point that the making of a false entry in a report to the Comptroller of the Currency does not constitute a fraud. The entry Jones is alleged to have made increased the reserve of the bank by about $8,000.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Novelized From Forbes' Play of the Same Name by JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"Then I ain't goin' to have no one! You don't think I'm fit to have my honey lamb around! You think I'd make my sister bad! Oh, my God! Oh, my God!"

Patsy burst into a passion of tears and fled from the room.

Mrs. O'Brien gazed after her, visibly perplexed. Dan was rubbing his chin vigorously and shifting uneasily from one foot to another.

"Oi almost misdoubt me own sinses," said the mother. "It's hard to believe her bad. Oh, what's to become av her?"

"You'd better take her home with you for the present," Dan advised. "You can't leave her here alone to be temptel by that—that man. No one knows but you an' me."

"But what if O'Brien's gone to Crawford's?"

"I shouldn't wonder if he had," he admitted. "I don't think, though, Crawford 'll tell him much. You heard him say he didn't want no row on his hands. Anyhow, you'll take her, won't you? Who'll stand by her if you don't? She can't be anythin' more to me, but I'd be sorry if she went from bad to worse."

Mrs. O'Brien reflected.

"Ye're right, Danny, that's sure," she said. "It's me duty to take her home an' save her from becomin' worse. But Oi misdoubt if she'll listen to me. Help me to persuade her. Oi've no one to lean on but you, bhoy. Ye'll have a talk with her?"

He answered in the affirmative.

"An' yez won't let me face O'Brien alone, will ye? Help me to lie to him!"

"Don't worry. I'll fix it," he assured her.

"God love ye, Danny, bhoy," she said. "I'll have ye so that ye can talk to her alone."

Mallory waited for Patsy to return to the room. He had no doubt that she would do so when her paroxysm of weeping had spent itself. Now that the fury inspired by the discovery of her supposed faithlessness and duplicity had calmed down the open wound of their separation was smarting, and the sight of her misery and despair had not tended to alleviate the pain. But at the mere recollection of Crawford and the lie of the life he imagined Patsy had been living his heart hardened against any softening influence of compassion.

Henceforth, he told himself, he would believe in nothing and no one. With what would remain to him from the ruins of his training stable business he would betake himself west and, keeping to himself, strive only for one thing—money, since money was the pass that opened all doors and procured the gratification of all desires. Honor, love, counted as naught in this world. Money counted for everything.

His bitter musing was interrupted by the advent of Nora in high dudgeon.

"What's this about going home?" she demanded. "Patsy says mom's going to take me away."

"So she is. She thinks it best. So do I," he said.

"What for? I don't want to go home. I can't live down on that stupid old farm now, and I won't. I've had enough to bear without being dragged into the country where there's no fun nor anything. Why, they've promised me a part in the next show. Besides, I ain't going to run away and have those girls gossiping about me. I'll get even with Sylvia Simpson for getting me into this mess, the jealous cat!"

"Jealous? Of what?"

"Of everything—because I'm younger and prettier than she is—because I'm going to have the part she wanted. The idea, talking about me to people!"

"She said you were at Crawford's rooms tonight."

"I know; sent pop and mom chasing after me."

Mallory was astonished.

"How did you know that?" he demanded.

"Mom told me," she answered, quick as a flash, but reddening.

"She did? I'd hardly have thought she's 'a' done that."

"Yes, and that ain't the worst of it," she went on, eager to seize the opportunity of being alone with him to broach what she had on her mind and to what her sister had refused to do. "Oh, Dan, we're in awful trouble!"

"That so? What is it?"

"We—er—we—er"—

She stopped, not liking and hardly knowing how to go on.

CHAPTER XVI.

"COME on. Out with it," Mallory said rather gruffly. "What d'you want me to do?"

"I'll tell you, Dan, because I know you'll stand by us for mom's sake."

"Let's see what it is first."

"Well, we owe money, and—and—Patsy says we can save it out of what we earn. But how are we ever going to save $300?"

"Is that all your trouble?" he asked. He had wondered what further misfortune he was about to hear of. He took it for granted that the money had to do with the furnishing of the flat. "Have the bill sent to me. I'll pay it," he added.

"But that won't do," she objected. "I'll have to pay the note myself."

"Oh, it's a note?"

"Yes; we had to raise money somehow, and now the note's got to be paid at once. Patsy promised she'd get the $300 from you, but she won't ask you now you've quarreled?"

"How'd you know we've quarreled?"

"She told me so."

"Why do you have to pay the note? Why can't I pay it? I haven't the money about me, but I can send it."

"No; you'll have to give it to me. You see, I borrowed it myself—off—off one of the girls at the theater, and it would be better for me to give it her back. I wouldn't like her to know"—

"Oh, all right," he acquiesced. "I'll give the money to you. I'll get it tomorrow. Tell your sister I'd like to see her, will you?"

"No; don't. You'll spoil everything if you tell Patsy," said the girl apprehensively.

"I guess not," he assured her. "I want to see her about something else. That's a darned funny business," commented Dan when she had gone. "I wonder how much the old lady's told her? An' how did they come to borrow all that money from one of the girls at the theater on a short term note when they gave us to believe they'd bought the things on the installment plan an' paid for 'em? They couldn't 'a' wanted it for anythin' else, as I can see. They've been fillin' us up with more guff an' lies, I suppose."

Patsy entered the room.

"Well?" she interrogated coldly.

"Will you let me speak to you a minute, please?" he asked, awkward and ill at ease.

"What can we have to say to each other now?"

"Nothin' about tonight. Let that go as it lays. I'd like to ask a favor of you."

"By what right?"

"Oh, no right. I ain't got no rights any more. Forget me in this. It's for your mother."

"I guess you don't want nothin' from me—not love even."

"I wouldn't say that. She's been hard on you tonight; it's natural under the circumstances, but"—

"She thinks I gave her cause," broke in Patsy sadly.

He looked at her askance.

"What do you think?" he demanded.

"I ain't thinkin'. I don't care."

"But I know there's nothin' you wouldn't do for her."

"That's right, though she doesn't seem wise to the fact."

"She wants you to come home with her."

"Home! What for? Oh, I see, she can't trust me—she don't believe I'd keep me promise. An' all I've ever done an' all I've ever been to her don't count for nothin'."

"No; it ain't that," said Mallory, embarrassed under the steady gaze she fixed upon him.

"Then why doesn't she come to me an' say it herself? Why does she send you?"

"She thought you mightn't listen to her. She hoped I could persuade you, but that time's past, an' I see it's useless to plead with you."

"I can't go. What d'you think I am? Go down home an' have you an' mom overlookin' things—bein' sorry for me—kind to me! Not for mine, thank you."

"No; I promise you. All will be forgotten."

"An' forgiven. Wait till I ask it, will you?"

"Then give me a reason why you won't do what she asks that I can give her. I got to tell her somethin'. Is it—is it because you love Crawford?"

"Love him! Love him!"

The expression of loathing on her face and the tone of profound scorn in which the ejaculation was uttered made Mallory's heart leap within him.

"Then why"— he began.

She interrupted him angrily.

"Look here! What right have you to stand there givin' me the third degree?" she demanded. "I can't go, an' I won't go, an' that settles it."

She turned from him, but he followed her.

"Is it the money?" he asked.

"The money?"

She turned and faced him with questioning eyes.

"Nora's told me. I'm goin' to pay the note."

"You're goin' to pay Crawford?"

"Crawford!"

He stood gazing at her open mouthed. Suddenly a look of understanding and of great joy came over his face.

"So it was Crawford! Now I see!" he exclaimed.

He ran to the door.

"Mrs. O'Brien, will you come here a minute?" he called.

"One question," he said when she appeared. "Have you told Nora what happened tonight? Did you tell her that you'd been to Crawford's?"

"No; Oi did not," replied the old woman. "What'd Oi tell the poor choild annythin' about it now for an' she sick as it is? It ain't necessary she should be made worse by knowin' her sister's disgrace. Oi'll find out tomorrow what Oi want to know from her."

It was all clear to Mallory now. Tears of mingled tenderness, thankfulness and exultation welled to his eyes. He paced rapidly to and fro in an effort to master his emotion, while the old woman and Patsy looked at him, wondering what was the cause of it.

SEE THE IRISH GIRLS MAKING LACES

A Demonstration and Sale of Educational and Philanthropic Importance

Mrs. Mary O'Flanagan, Miss Mary K. Davroeen, Miss Rose Egan—comely girls from the School of Industries of Loughlynn, County Roscommon, Ireland—have been brought over expressly for this demonstration, and will give an exhibition of their cleverness in the art of lace making. The exhibit is in charge of Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, who is on tour of the United States in aid of the industrial revival in Ireland. Father O'Flanagan's efforts to promote the industries of Ireland are laudable, indeed, and will be approved by all friends of the Emerald Isle in this section of Jersey.

The merit of Irish Laces is known the world wide, but of late a great deal of the imitation Irish laces have flooded the market, and this exhibit will serve to illustrate the difference between the sham and the real. Many magnificent pieces of Irish laces, neckpieces, coats, etc., will be displayed.

The exhibition will be on the Third Floor in the Oriental Rug Room and will begin tomorrow and continue thruout the week.

In conjunction with this exhibit we will have a show and sale of our own Irish Hand Made Laces—an extensive line of various widths and an immense variety of patterns at prices that will please you. All Over Nets, Bandings, Edgings and Insertings; also made-up Irish Lace, Crochet Collars, Rabats, Jabots, etc.

GOLF.

On the whole, the new rules of golf which came into use the beginning of the year are satisfactory to the players. They have had a good trial wherever the game has a foothold, and it is noticed that the complaints are far less than formerly. In discussing the question recently a well known amateur said:

The rule which provides for a ball which is driven out of bounds from the tee being reteed instead of dropped on the ground or turf has kept the teeing grounds free from scaff marks and holes, and at the same time has prevented congestion and enabled the players to get around the links in quicker time. A ball simply dropped on the tee is rarely sent a good long distance, very often it is topped into the rough, and in former years players were usually kept waiting at the tee for their unfortunate brethren who had sliced or pulled a ball out of bounds.

The making of a rule, also, which permits a ball which seems to have gone near the boundary line to be reckoned as out of bounds instead of being considered lost, provided, of course, five minutes' search is made for it, has cleared up a point on which there has always been a great amount of discussion. The flight of the ball is at times directly in the face of the sun and cannot be followed by the eye. The charity in this rule has been of service to many the last year, and none will gainsay its fairness.

The rule which has done the most good for quickening the play and making golf a wee bit more difficult is where no brushing of the line of the putt is permitted. The little pebbles and tiny bits of loose turf or any substance foreign to a good putting green are quickly picked up, and if any worm casts are in the way they are brushed aside with the putter. The putting has in no wise suffered in quality, although at the beginning of the year many golfers had visions of countless missed putts all on account of these irregularities, which are always present, and which in former years were always got rid of in a more or less impressive manner.

FIND FROZEN BODIES OF JERSEY HUNTERS.

Parties on clamming expeditions late yesterday afternoon discovered the frozen bodies of two victims of the storm on the banks of Swayne's channel, a small inlet that cuts into the new inland waterway, just below the Rio Grande bridge, that leads from Wildwood Island to the mainland.

The men were identified by gunner's license cards made out in the names of Julius W. Uber, a bartender, of 1250 Kaighn avenue, Camden, and Ernest J. McFarlane, a carpenter, of Wildwood Crest. They were on a gunning trip, and are supposed to have been upset from their boat and benumbed by the cold as they scrambled upon the bank of the creek, where they fell, exhausted.

The condition of the bodies showed that life had been extinct for two days. Searching parties are looking for the guns of the men, which are thought to be in the water. An upturned boat was found nearby. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

AM. BIBLE SOCIETY MAY LOSE THAT HALF MILLION.

Unless the American Bible Society can raise $127,000 between now and next Friday there is a possibility that a $500,000 endowment gift offered by Mrs. Russell Sage, on condition that the society be able to set aside a similar amount, may be withdrawn.

Officials of the society admit there is small likelihood of raising the necessary sum, but hope Mrs. Sage will duplicate that which has already been subscribed.

KISSES WIFE, HANGS HIMSELF.

Claus Miller, Aged Seventy, Commits Suicide Because of Inability to Obtain Employment.

Embracing his wife, who is sixty-eight years old, Claus Miller, seventy, of No. 220 Washington street, Jersey City, told her that he was going out to seek employment yesterday. Instead of going to the street, however, he went to the cellar of the apartment house and ended his life by hanging himself with a rope attached to a beam. Two hours later Mrs. Miller found her husband's dead body.

Miller was employed thirty years as a watchman at a sugar refinery near his home, but was dismissed three months ago. Friends obtained his reinstatement, but he was put to work on the sugar company's piers. The work was too severe for a man of his age and he was forced to abandon it. Miller is survived by two sons and four daughters.

TEARS DO NOT SAVE HIM.

Family of Joseph Weise Make Demonstration When He is Sentenced.

Joseph Weise, of Jersey City, was sentenced in the United States District Court at Trenton yesterday to three months in the Essex county penitentiary for fraudulent concealment of assets in bankruptcy.

Weise brought his wife and five children as a part of an appeal for clemency to the court. Upon the advice of counsel the wife and children remained in the corridor while sentence was being passed. When they were informed that the husband and father must serve a prison term the entire family set up a wailing that could be heard in all parts of the Capitol.

Doctor, Dog, Sleigh, Boy.

While Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow was making professional calls today, he was the victim of unexpected business while in his sleigh on West Front street. A party of little fellows, among them Eddie Glaentzer, son of Letter-carrier Charles Glaentzer, caught on behind the sleigh. The physician's dog, incidently, while running behind, caught on to Eddie's leg. Eddie's leg was slightly bruised. "First aid to the injured" was given on the spot.

Ferrymaster Leaves $50,000.

The will of Henry Maxwell, who was ferrymaster of the Hoboken ferries, was admitted to probate yesterday by Surrogate Egan, of Hudson county. There was surprise over the extent of the estate, which is valued at $50,000, as Maxwell was supposed to have lived up close to his income. His property goes to his children, three daughters and two sons.

HABIT OF SWINGING THE ARMS.

Sir Victor Horsley, lecturing recently before the Medical Society, explained our habit of swinging the arms when walking, which he stated was quite unnecessary, as a relic of the days when we walked on all fours, writes a London correspondent of the New York Times. Then we had to use arms as well as legs. Although their use serves no purposes when walking upright, we still keep on moving all four limbs alternately or in progression. Sir Victor set forth some new facts concerning the functions of the cerebellum, the mysterious and little understood hind part of the brain.

"Primarily, the cerebellum must be regarded," said the lecturer, "as a sensory organ which has an important part in the correct performance of many of our automatic actions. Walking, standing and running are good examples of such actions which cannot be accurately carried out without a normal, well-balanced cerebellum. New-born animals cannot stand. They sprawl, and before they can stand, walk or run they must acquire this power. For convenience in life this ability to stand must be secured without the animal having consciously to think what he is doing. The fully developed cerebellum supplies the power unconsciously."

In proof of this Sir Victor pointed out that the cerebellum of a full-grown cat showed fully developed cells and fibers, whereas in new-born kittens the brain in the cerebellar portion is not yet organized into active nerve tissues.

FACTS ABOUT THE SEA LION.

The head of the sea-lion at close quarters, says Bonnycastle Dale in The Wide World Magazine, is a blunt, rough, savage prow. It is well armed for battle, the mouth being an eight-inch half circle, studded with two rows of great sharp teeth. The body is heavily coated with seal brown hair, sun-bleacheed to light yellow on the back and sides.

The immensely long hind flippers have big, strong claws embedded in the flat upper surface several inches from the ends of the flipper. The fore flippers have the openings for these nails or claws, but in the particular female I dissected they were lacking.

The transparent wiry feelers about the jaw are much esteemed by the Chinese as toothpicks. About two dozen of these sensitive guards project from the upper lip. The ears are very small, not as large as a common cat's, and much depressed. The eyes are a deep, soft brown, but they can sparkle like flame in anger.

When the dissecting knife laid the skin back we encountered a heavy layer of fat-rich, oily and fish-smelling. The heart was very large, fully as big as a cow's, and the beast also owned four huge livers a foot and a half long. The meat is very red, and although eaten by the coast tribes, is too coarse and redolent of fishoil for any save a starving white. In fact, the whole beast has a most repulsive odor when in the sun. Freshly drawn from the water, this is not noticeable.

Light Work for Santa.

At each house visited they were met with the familiar story, "We don't take any children here."

They were just leaving the fifteenth house after being turned away with the same story, when Wilfred innocently looked up at his mother and exclaimed: "Say, ma, Santa Claus must have a cinch in this neighborhood."—Judge.

MAYOR'S PARTING WORD

Samuel Townsend Delivers Farewell Speech at Borough Council Meeting.

MAYOR-ELECT MAKES REPLY.

Newton B. Smalley Pays a Tribute to North Plainfield's Retiring Executive—What Administration Has Done.

Mayor Samuel Townsend, in presiding over the Borough Council for the last time in his official career as chief magistrate of that municipality last night, complimented the members of the Council, Chief of Police George Weiss and force, Fire Chief Howard Woolston and department, Street Commissioner John Y. Barrett, Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker and the Board of Health, for their efficient service, co-operation and courtesy during his administration.

Mr. Townsend, in his valedictory, also reviewed the work accomplished by the Council. He referred to the preliminary work of the sewerage commission; commended the successful operation of the dog tax ordinance; called attention to the fact that the borough is in excellent financial condition and that the deficit had been converted into a surplus. Mr. Townsend said:

"We are meeting tonight for the last time in which I shall have an opportunity of speaking to you as your Mayor, and I feel that I would like to briefly review the past two years in which we have worked together and see what has been accomplished. For, myself, I do not claim that mistakes may not have been made, for no one can hope to be always right, and yet I do not recall at this time any important step taken that had I the last two years to liveover again I would act differently.

"It is a matter of regret that we are still without a sewerage system. You all know the earnest work of the sewerage commission headed by W. J. Buttfield to effect an arrangement with the city of Plainfield for a joint plant. When this had to be given up immediate steps were taken to install a system of our own, and I am glad to say that the plans are now well advanced and that we can look forward to seeing work begun within the coming year. The economy made necessary by the condition of our finances has compelled the postponement of many needed improvements during the past two years, but it is gratifying to know the the financial condition of the borough is now good; that a deficit has been turned into surplus; that for the first time in many years we close the year with no unpaid notes outstanding; that as far as we have been able to get them in all bill have been paid excepting what is due to the special school fund. We also have to pay our proportion, being ten per cent of the cost of macadamizing Greenbrook road, the bill for the latter improvement not yet having been presented by the county. There will also be a bill for council fees on sewerage matters. We have, however, assets in the way of collectable unpaid taxes that will more than cover these items.

"It is gratifying to recall some of the things that have been accomplished, among which I mention the following:

"The improvement of Greenbrook road by the county giving us a continuous stretch of macadamized road the entire length of the borough.

"The filling in and raising of upper Duer street.

"Wilson avenue, that for years had been impassable, has been put in condition for travel, the expense having been partly borne by the property owners abutting on the street.

"The use of oil on our streets has been very satisfactory in keeping down the dust.

"The ordinance passed and now in force requiring all saloons to close at twelve o'clock midnight has worked most satisfactorily.

"The ordinance providing for the licensing of dogs has worked well. Under it we have issued licenses since May 20 last, for 357 dogs, the fees for which were all paid in advance. In the year previous there were only 157 dogs taxed, a considerable portion of which tax has not yet been collected.

"Early in the present year we published in book form a list of the individual assessments of all real and personal property. These were widely distributed and afforded an opportunity for every taxpayer to see just how his assessment compared with others. In this connection I want to praise the work of the committee of nine, headed by C. W. McCutchen, who took up the work of reviewing the valuations, and through whose work and suggestions many irregu-

MISS LACEY BRIDE OF DR. H. H. LOWRIE

Miss Emily Lacey, of Franklin avenue, and Dr. H. H. Lowrie, of Park avenue, were married at noon yesterday at St. Stephen's church, Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector, officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by the families of the couple. Alfred Lacey, a brother of the bride, gave his sister in marriage. Following the wedding luncheon was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Suhr, on East Sixth street, and later the couple left on a wedding trip. They will reside on Park avenue on their return.

The bride has been a resident of this city a number of years, having removed here from Dover. She has been an active worker in St. Stephen's church. During her residence here she has been cashier at the local office of the Prudential Insurance Company, and is held in high esteem by a large number of friends and acquaintances.

The groom is one of the best known practicing physicians in the city. In addition he is an examiner for the Prudential Insurance Company, and is also prominent as a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, being physician to Court Plainfield.

CLEANER CONCERN GOES TO THE WALL

Another one of the many infringers of the David T. Kenney vacuum cleaner patents has had its tombstone raised in the bankruptcy graveyard, in this case the "deceased" being the American Vacuum Cleaner Company, a concern which had confined its operations to Newark. When it passed away, the liabilities exceeded the assets of $250,000. Senator Johnston Cornish, who is well known as a music maker up in Warren county, as receiver, will play the requiem. The first sad rites were in the United States District Court, in Newark, when three big creditors asked that the concern be declared a bankrupt.

The Vacuum Cleaner Company, of New York, was the corporation which came into existence as a result of Mr. Kenney's success in marketing his patents. Soon after many infringers got to work. In consequence there are a multitude of cases pending in the courts against the alleged infringers.

"It seems a pity that so much capital would be invested in an infringement," said Mr. Kenney today, "and not only infringe our patent but practically our company's name as well. A large number of such concerns have been organized since I made the machine and business a success. The Vacuum Cleaner Company has instituted at least a score of suits against these concerns and it is not to be doubted that the Kenney patent rights will be upheld and the infringers restrained.

MISS CRUIKSHANK FORMALLY INTRODUCED

Miss Helen Cruikshank, daughter of Simeon A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, was introduced to society at a charming reception and tea given yesterday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock at her father's home. During the afternoon nearly three hundred guests attended the reception and extended their congratulations to the fair debutante. The home was lavishly decorated with flowers, in harmony with the Christmastide and the social event.

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, Mrs. H. M. Stockton and Mrs. M. B. Lancaster, the last named of New York, received with Miss Cruikshank, and those who assisted in the dining room were Mrs. E. T. Wilson, Mrs. H. E. Butler, Mrs. W. B. Taylor, Mrs. W. L. Righter, Miss Constance Wilcox, of this city; Mrs. C. B. Andrews, of High Bridge; Miss Dorothy Treat, of New York; Miss Helen Reid, of Montclair; Miss Grace Battles and Miss Agnes Dunlap, of Philadelphia.

Following the reception in the afternoon, the receiving party remained for dinner, which was served by Holland, of Philadelphia. In the evening there was a dance, when a number of young gentlemen friends from this city and out-of-town were present. Miss Cruikshank received a great many floral gifts from relatives and friends. She is popular in a large circle of friends and her introduction into society was an auspicious one.

Sleigh bells jingled merrily last night, especially in the borough, where Frank Mobus piloted five parties to the rural districts.

P.S.R.C. RAISES WAGES

4,500 Trolley Workers Receive Substantial Christmas Presents.

AN EXTRA CENT AN HOUR.

Given In Return For Their Loyalty Says President McCarter—Plan Benevolent Order.

A substantial Christmas present in the form of a raise in wages was made to the motormen and conductors of the Public Service Railway Company yesterday. The directors of the company met in the Prudential building, Newark, in the afternoon and the new schedule of wages which had been under advisement for a long time was ratified by the board.

The action of the directors was entirely voluntary, no demand for more pay having been made by the men, nor was an increase anticipated by them at this time. The first intimation the men had that they were to get more money came to them at the car barns in Greenville, Orange and Paterson, where Christmas celebrations were held last night. At these affairs the word was given in the shape of a letter written by Thomas N. McCarter, which read as follows:

December 28th, 1909.

To the Motormen and Conductors of Public Service Railway Company:

It is a genuine pleasure for me to be able to announce to you at this Christmas season that the company, after long deliberation, has settled upon a new scale of wages, effective January 1st, 1910, which will be of great benefit to you all.

The new scale is as follows:

First year men, 21 cents per hour; second year men, 22 cents per hour; third year men, 23 cents per hour; tenth year men, 24 cents per hour.

1911—First year men, 22 cents per hour; second year men, 23 cents per hour; third year men, 24 cents per hour; tenth year men, 24½ cents per hour.

1912—First year men, 23 cents per hour; second year men, 24 cents per hour; third year men and upwards, 25 cents per hour.

In addition to the foregoing, the company has also decided upon the two following additional propositions:

First—An extra time allowance will be made to such men as volunteer for an additional trip after their day's work is finished.

Second—All men on the extra list who answer all roll calls, and perform the work assigned to them, for a period of a week, will be guaranteed a minimum wage of $10.50 a week.

I believe that this places the wage scale of this company upon the most satisfactory basis of any similarly situated corporation in this part of the country, and I rejoice that the company's increased prosperity, to which you have all contributed, makes this action possible.

The company also has under consideration the adoption of a benevolent plan for the benefit of its employes, which we hope to perfect during the coming year.

Of course it is manifest that the consummation of this benevolent plan, and the carrying into effect of the raises outlined for future years, can only take place if we continue to have the same loyalty and co-operation on the part of the employes which we have had in the past.

Extending to you one and all the compliments of the season, I am,

Very truly yours,
THOS. M. McCARTER,
President.

Copies of the letter will be posted in bulletin form in all the car barns today.

The present scale of wages is twenty cents per hour for first year men; twenty-one cents for second to fifth year men; twenty-two cents from fifth to tenth year and twenty-three cents for tenth year and thereafter. The over time allowance and minimum pay for extra men also come as a pleasant surprise to the men, both propositions having been made on the company's own initiative.

The positions of third vice president and fourth vice president of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, Public Service Gas Company and Public Service Railway Company were created by the directors of the respective companies and Randal Morgan was named as third and Colonel Anthony R. Kuser as fourth vice president of the respective concerns. Both Mr. Morgan and Mr. Kuser have been directors and members of the executive committee of Public Service Corporation since formation in 1903.

A quarterly dividend of one and one-quarter per cent. was declared by the directors of Public Service Corporation payable December 31 on stock as of record at the close of business yesterday.

HOW FREIGHT IS HANDLED

Discussed by G. Herbert Condict at Runyon Bible Class Association.

ELECTRICITY & TELEPHERAGE.

Europe Ahead of United States in Applied Methods, But We Will Improve.

The handling of freight in this and other countries is absorbing the attentions of engineers everywhere, the prime motive in it being the reduction of its cost. Under the old system of freight disposal the cost is excessive because of the necessity of double and sometimes triple handling.

The members of the Runyon Bible Study Class Association, of Hope chapel, listened to an instructive and entertaining lecture on this subject last night, given by G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday-school. He is a well-known consulting engineer. Mr. Condict brought to the attention of his audience some practical ideas in connection with the problem of cheaper freight handling and demonstrated by stereopticon views how the work is done.

He compared the cost of handling the enormous bulk of merchandise which passes over our great railway systems every day in the year and showed how, by the use of electricity, this work will soon become a pastime in comparison. Mr. Condict said that the cost in the United States under the present methods would average 37½ cents per ton while in Europe, with the aid of electricity, the same thing can be done for from 1 to 3 cents per ton, and the cost by telepherage is reduced to a mere fraction of this cost.

After the lecture Mr. Condict was heckled by questioners in the audience and responded gracefully to all the questions hurled at him. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer at the close of his address and refreshments of coffee and cake were served by the entertainment committee.

The association will hold a bowling tournament at the Hartridge bowling alleys on Tuesday, January 25.

MISS EDITH GRISCOM ONE OF SOCIETY'S BUDS

Miss Edith Griscom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Griscom, of 33 Sycamore avenue, the borough, was formally introduced to society at a charming reception and tea given at the home yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. The reception was largely attended, there being more than two hundred guests calling throughout the afternoon.

The home was beautifully decorated, there being a profusion of dark red Richmond roses, while the spirit of the Christmas season was evidenced also in the floral arrangements. Miss Griscom received a large number of floral gifts, including roses, violets, carnations, white narcissus and plants. The debutante was showered with congratulations.

Mrs. Griscom received with her debutante daughter, Miss Griscom and her married daughter, Mrs. Raymond V. V. Miller, of Buffalo. Those assisting in the dining room were the Misses Catherine Titus, Susanne Wharton, Margaret Leal, Louise Saunders, Elizabeth Flanders, Ethel Most, of this city, and Edith Gorham, of Germantown, Pa.

Those who poured tea in the dining room were Mrs. Jacob VanDeventer, Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, Mrs. Andrew N. Selter, Mrs. Eugene Hatch and Miss Anne Kip Miller, of this city.

The guests began arriving soon after 4 o'clock and from that time until after 6 o'clock the house was thronged with people. Everyone evidenced the spirit of Christmastide and the reception was a brilliant one in every respect.

DOLLIVER FAVORS HOME

Borough Recorder Advocates That the State Care for Inebriates.

IN HIS REPORT TO COUNCIL.

Urges That Recommendation of Crimes and Dependencies Commission to Governor Fort Be Adopted.

Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, in his annual report, which was presented to the Borough Council last night, endorsed the recommendations made to Governor Fort and the Legislature by the Crimes and Dependencies Commission for the establishment of a State home for inebriates. Mr. Dolliver in his report states that personal observation of police cases in the borough during his administration has led him to advocate the adoption of the findings of the commission.

The total number of arrests in the borough during the year was 315, a majority of which were due to drunkenness. The amount of fines collected was $575.25. In support of his opinion on the proposed home for inebriates, Mr. Dolliver said:

"I have been honored by the appointment of Recorder of this borough for the last three years and it has been my privilege to observe something of the petty offenses which have come before the borough police court during that time. If you will allow something of a digression from the usual report, I should like to briefly state some of my observations. The most of the police court cases, the so-called petty offenses, come from too much intoxicating liquor. Those charged with drunkeness or disorder brought about by an over indulgence in drink, are of two classes. The habitual and the occasional tippler. While there are many strangers arrested for drunkeness, begging, etc., men who are tramps and those without any permanent residence, yet the majority of cases are those who live in the borough of the city of Plainfield.

The Crimes and Dependencies Commission, appointed by the Governor a year or so ago, recommen that there be established a State home for inebriates, where men and women may be sent for treatment by modern methods for advanced cases of the liquor habit. Such an institution to which habiutal inebriates could be committed by magistrates, would be a blessing to the community and the poor unfortunates themselves. Committment to the county jail has no terrors to those who are hardened. Two or three trips end the effect of the punishment and the committing magistrate has gone to the end of his rope. The State, which recognizes a duty to the consumptive, the epileptic and the insane, ought to more surely feel the responsibility for those who have contracted the disease of drink. Especially when the way to satisfy the appetite is legalized and licensed by the State. I thoroughly endorse a State home, ment and a reasonable amount of where there would be discipline, treatment and a reasonable amount of good hard labor in the open air, together with encouragement and sympathy.

"The occasional inebriate, the man who is arrested for the first time, needs friendship coupled with some restraint. He has some respect and beneath it all in many cases, there is a splendid fellow who is ashamed of his downfall and yet subject to the same environment just as soon as released. The extension of the probation system of restriction and brotherly love ought to be a source of aid to those who face the desk for the first time. We have, though without authority of law, tried the system of probation in two cases during the past few months. This involves a weekly report at the police station on Saturday evenings and an understanding that intoxication will end the matter and let the punishment fall. I am glad to say that there has been excellent results and that I believe the men are striving to conquer their old habit. We have excellent laws for the children and youth in the juvenile court and probation system, and those who form a large part of our police court cases should be also considered and included in that system. Little does the average citizen know of the police court and the cases before it until he investigates. And while the progressive community of the borough of North Plainfield has a record of god order, yet we are a part of a commonwealth where the problems of the petty police court case in the aggregate, is a question of importance and should be considered by all thoughtful citizens."

Christmas Entertainment.

The Congregational Sunday school Christmas entertainment will take place Thursday night.

MISS PEDEFLOUS UNHURT IN EXCITING RUNAWAY

Miss Pedeflous, daughter of Henry Pedeflous, of Washington Valley, had a narrow escape from injury in a thrilling runaway in the borough yesterday afternoon. Miss Pedeflous, while rounding Giraud and Myrtle avenues in a cutter, made a short turn. The sleigh came in contact with a curb and loosened the shafts from its fastenings.

One of the shafts dangled against the horse's hind legs and frightened the animal. Miss Pedeflous, in trying to check the horse, was pulled over the dashboard and hurled in a pile of snow, but was unhurt.

The horse continued its flight on a zig-zag route until it reached Somerset street. A delivery wagon of Frank Rickert, the local expressman, which was standing in front of Henry Haurand's store, blocked the progress of the horse in its journey up Somerset street. The animal plunged into Chatham street and fell against Haurand's building. Mr. Rickert held the horse until the arrival of Chief of Police Weiss.

The animal sustained several slight cuts in its fall. Miss Pedeflous, after arriving on the scene, went to Campbell's livery, secured another sleigh and returned home none the worse for the exciting incident.

SEVERAL HUNDRED GREET A DEBUTANTE

Miss Hope Ivins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, of Hillside avenue, was formally introduced to society yesterday afternoon, when a reception was held at the home of her parents from 4 to 7 o'clock. Several hundred guests, including nearly all of the younger society set of the city and borough, called during the appointed hours and showered their congratulations on the debutante.

Miss Ivins was the recipient of a wealth of beautiful floral gifts, pink roses and carnations being favorites. The home was attractively decorated for the occasion with flowers, appropriate also to the Christmastide season.

Receiving with Mrs. Ivins and her daughter, Miss Ivins, were Mrs Charles E. Brooks and the Misses Wait, of New York. The young women assisting in the dining room were the Misses Carolyn Martin, Louise Booth, Lillian King, Marguerite Carpenter, Helen Timpson, Dorothy Fisk, Mary Runkle, Edith Mellick and Bessie Tweedy, of this city; the Misses Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Beatrice Fofburgh and Mildred O'Brien, of New York; Josephine Roe, of Pottstown, Pa.; Margaret Wiley, of Orange; Marion Ditman, of Englewood, and Ella Norcross, of Boston.

Following the reception and tea, a dance was given for the debutante at the Park Club and was continued until a late hour, with an intermission at midnight for refreshments.

IGLEHART, JR. CLEARED AS A CO-RESPONDENT

The sensational divorce suit, Martin against Martin, which has been before Judge Crane for the past two weeks in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, has come to a close. Edwin E. Martin sued his wife for an absolute divorce and named seven corespondens, of which F. C. Iglehart, Jr., was named as one.

Judge Crane dismissed the charges against Iglehart, Jr., stating that there was no proof of wrong-doing nor cause for complaint so far as he was concerned. The court reserved its decision as to the other five corespondents.

For three years, Mr. Iglehart was the baritone in the choir of the First Presbyterian church here. During his residence here he made many friends, who were glad to hear that the charges made against his character were without foundation.

Counting His Troubles.

Troubles never come singly and Lewis C. Van Ness will testify to the accuracy of this trite axiom. During the gale on Christmas day part of Mr. Van Ness' factory was blown down, and this morning the cylinder head of his engine was blown out causing damage to the amount of $750. He hopes the third event of a calamitous nature will hold off for a little while, but is still courageous.

FALLS LENGTH OF STAIRS

Aged Frederick Gray Tumbles on Unlighted Theatre Staircase.

IS IN A SERIOUS CONDITION.

Dr. Dundon Puts Twelve Stitches in Scalp of the Injured Man.

Frederick Gray, 82 years old, of 984 Hillside avenue, lies in a serious condition at his home as a result of a fall sustained yesterday afternoon while down town.

Mr. Gray, after getting a shave at a West Second street barber shop started to go to the smoking room of the Plainfield theatre. The light was not turned on, and while going down the stairs, Mr. Gray lost his footing and fell eighteen steps. He fell headlong and landed heavily on the floor, inflicting a large gash in his forehead.

The fall rendered Mr. Gray unconscious in which condition he remained two hours. Dr. A. H. Dundon, the theatre physician was summoned and he attended the injured man.

Twelve stitches were necessary to close the cut. Mr. Gray's eyes were also blackened and he was also weakened by the loss of blood.

Soon as the injured man was resusticated he was removed to his home in a cab by Dr. Dundon, Sergeant John Flynn and Patrolman Birmingham. Dr. Dundon stated this morning that unless any internal injuries develop, or symptoms of concussion of the brain appear, Mr. Gray stands a chance of recovering.

Mr. Gray is a large man, weighing about 225 pounds, and the shock resulting from the force of the fall was largely due to him being rendered unconscious.

STATION AGENT DENIES HE HAS BEEN DERELICT.

Relative to the account appearing in The Daily Press yesterday regarding alleged discourteous treatment to passengers at the Grant Avenue station, on Sunday night, C. M. Drake, the agent, registered a denial of the charges today. Mr. Drake said:

"The closing hour of the depot is 6 p. m. on Sundays and I wish to state that the station was open for the convenience of the passengers who were waiting for the same train as myself.

"There was no meeting or game of cards going on as stated. There was no demand on the part of Officer Sweeney to open the station, as he was on the inside with the crowd.

"There is absolutely nothing to the claim of Rev. C. W. T. Attlee as I never had any call or sale for a ticket to Keyport.

REV. J. Y. BROEK TO VISIT NETHERWOOD CHURCH.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will go to the Netherwood Reformed church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, where he will deliver a special message to the congregation relative to the organization of the church by the Classis on Wednesday night, January 5.

At the conclusion of his talk he will be taken by some means of rapid transit to Trinity Reformed church, where he will take charge of the special Christmas services and give a talk appropriate to the occasion.

COURT FINES FIGHTER JUST TEN DOLLARS.

For fighting last night on Watchung avenue, Jack Callahan will have to pay into the city treasury the sum of ten dollars or go to the county jail for twenty days. He and Andrew Benford mixed it up in a snow bank near Fourth street at 9 o'clock last night and Patrolman Nolan had something of a time getting both men to headquarters.

As Benford was acting on the defensive and was not under the influence of liquor he was allowed to depart with a suspended sentence by Judge Runyon this morning.

Presbyterian S. S. Xmas Party.

The Sunday-school Christmas party of the First Presbyterian church will be held tomorrow, Thursday, evening, at 8 o'clock promptly. Those entitled to be present, but who have failed because of the storm last Sunday, will be admitted on identification by the ushers at the door.

This Hat Sale Caps the Climax

Our Determination to Have Two Big Days in Millinery Leads Us to Disregard Profit and to Almost Forget Cost

We have done so many big things in a millinery way that we would have to exhaust our vocabulary to convey to you a definite idea of the real importance of this sale of trimmed and untrimmed hats which we have planned for Thursday and Friday, but the prices will speak most eloquently and should bring us more people than we can wait on. Certainly there will not be a better hat offering than this this season.

GOLF.

Recent decisions of the St. Andrews rules of golf committee reveal a number of interesting questions. There is a case from the Cramond Brig Golf Club which tells of a foursome stroke competition that was in progress, and that one of the couples could not find another couple to play with them as partners. A week before they explained the difficulty to the steward of the club, and he, too, found it impossible to get another couple to act as partners for these players.

The steward did not, of course, represent the committee, and no member of the committee was present either to arrange for a couple of players or to say what, under the circumstances, the stranded persons should do. The professional of the club was consulted on competition day before these players started their round, but with the diplomatic caution of the Scot he declared that he was unable to advise the players as to their standing in the competition. The difficulty in which the couple were placed was in the end solved by securing the services of another member of the club to play against them and to mark their card.

These two players won the competition, and the question which St. Andrews was asked to settle was whether the couple who had thus won should be disqualified or whether they should be recognized as the winners. The decision given by the rules committee was that the competitors in the stroke foursome were in a similar position to a single competitor, and as the local committee was not represented and was unable to provide either a marker or a player, the competitors adopted the only course open to them, and therefore should not be disqualified.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Woodbury residents experienced a famine in bread, meat and milk Monday.

Thawing out a pipe yesterday, Winfield Lee, eighteen years old, of 429 Linden street, Camden, was badly burned about the back by an explosion. He was cared for at the Homeopathic Hospital.

At the point of a revolver, Joseph Smith, a newsboy, was held up while delivering papers in Bayonne, Monday. There were two men, according to the boy's story, but he had nothing with him and they fled.

Chester Archer, the Pennsylvania Railroad engineer, who was badly injured as the result of a collision with a telegraph pole while leaning out of the cab in the storm near Bordentown Saturday night, was improved in Mercer Hospital, Trenton, Monday.

Court Cranford, Independent Order of Foresters, of Cranford, had a big time at its meeting last evening in Masonic Hall. The court was visited by State officers. A class of twelve candidates was initiated and officers for the coming year elected. A banquet was served.

Prisoners arraigned in the Camden police court Monday on minor charges who had been there before were sentenced by Recorder Stackhouse to clean the sidewalks around the city hall. Prisoners at the county jail were compelled to clean sidewalks at the courthouse.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Job D. Borden and a reunion of the family were held Christmas at the home of T. Sherman Borden, at Coopertown, and four generations were represented in the large company of guests. The aged couple were presented with gold and other tokens of affection.

Suffering from painful cuts on the head and body, John Klowoski, of 1832 South Sixth street, appeared before Recorder Stackhouse, in Camden, Monday, and caused Safoni Kossone, Steve Teamoski and Anthony Cavich to be committed in default of $500 bail each on charges of assault and battery. The injured man claimed that Kossone held him by the throat while the others assaulted him, after forcibly entering his room.

Samuel Downer, of Downer, whose wife has been very ill with pneumonia, got word to Glassboro Monday that she was worse and that no doctor could be obtained, as the roads were all blocked. Over a score of Glassboro residents with shovels started at once to ditch the road between Glassboro and Downer so that Dr. Carr, of Pitman, could reach his patient. Albert Kepp also sent six horses and a snow plow to help the men, and the physician finally got through.

Officers of the Independent Telephone Company and the Burlington police are seeking miscreants who last week apparently tried to wreck the entire Burlington system by cutting the wires in many parts of the city. Twenty local cables, in addition to the large submerged cable to Bristol, Pa., were severed, with much inconvenience to subscribers. Officials of the company yesterday refused to voice their suspicions, but offered a reward of $100 for evidence upon which to convict the culprits.

larities were corrected.

"New maps for the use of the assessor showing the division of all property have been made taking the place of others that had been in use since 1897.

"Our borough ordinances have been printed in book form corrected to date.

"It has been our good fortune to have capable men in our various departments. Our borough clerk has given good service and has been ever watchful of the borough's interest.

"Our Chief of Police has been earnest and active in the performance of his duties while the men under him have given good service. We should feel proud of our police and of the fact that we have been so free from serious disorder and crime.

"For our fire department I can speak in the highest praise. The chief has been a good fire fighter. The captains, lieutenant and call men have done good work, and while the borough has been particularly fortunate in the absence of disastrous fires the credit is largely due to prompt action by the men of the department.

"For our street commissioner I must give full credit for the faithful and efficient manner in which he has performed his duties.

"For our Board of Health I can speak in the highest praise. To this body of men must largely be given the credit for our freedom from serious epidemics.

"The overseer of the poor in the performance of his duties has shown tact and wisdom.

"And now I want to thank you, the members of this Council, for the support you have given me during the past two years. With hardly an exception we have been of one mind on questions that have come before us, therefore to us as a whole belongs the credit or discredit for what has been done. For many reasons I shall feel genuine regret when our official relations cease. With the exception of one or two unpleasant incidents having no bearing on my relations with you my official life has been an agreeable one. I have enjoyed the work and am happy in the belief that this administration has had the respect and support of the majority of good citizens.

"With this I will close, wishing you all success as you will work in the future as you have in the past for the best welfare of the borough."

Mayor-elect Newton B. Smalley, who occupied a chair alongside the retiring mayor, also joined in the felicitations of the occasion by paying a tribute to Mr. Townsend. Mr. Smalley said in part: "To occupy the office of Mayor is quite a task, and it is impossible to please everybody. I did not always agree with Mr. Townsend, but I found the easiest way out of it was to forget it.

"I have always looked upon Samuel Townsend, the outgoing Mayor, as one of the borough's best citizens. In serving the people he was an efficient, painstaking and hardworking official, and I hope to have his cooperation when I assume the office."

Councilman Woolston also made a few laudatory remarks concerning Mr. Townsend's administration, and on a motion of Councilman Nicholl, the members of the Council extended a rising vote of thanks to the retiring Mayor.

GETS PRISON SENTENCE; "SMITH'S" WIFE GOES FREE

Edward O'Neil, alias Dr. E. G. Smith, who in company with "Kittie Smith," his wife, was apprehended in this city while carrying on a wholesale shoplifting business, was sentenced this morning by Judge Atwater, at Elizabeth, to two years in the State prison.

Robert McAdam, of Elizabeth, who represented O'Neil, made a strong plea for his client, but the record of the man, who is only nineteen years old, was against him.

His partner, whose correct name is Kittie Babcock, comes from a well connected and highly respectable family in North Carolina and her brother, who is a Baptist minister, has taken charge of the misguided girl and will take care of her in the future. O'Neil had quite a police record in the town which he claims as his home, Cornwall, N. Y., and Judge Atwater referred to this in his sentence.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The P. H. S. class of 1909 held a dance last night at the High School. About thirty couples were present and they had a fine time until a late hour. The auditorium was decorated in the class colors of blue and white and was very pretty.

The P. H. S. basketball team will play the High School of Commerce five this afternoon in the local high school gym.

SLANDER TRIAL POSTPONED.

New Brunswick, Dec. 29.—Owing to Prosecutor Booraem being ill in bed with a cold, the drawing of the struck jury to try Jacob H. Whitfield, Tunis McCaulye, Charles Moreys and Alfred Rastall, on a charge of circulating the slanderous H. Raymond Groves letter, was postponed yesterday by Judge Lyon until Friday.

Former Senator Robert Adrain, counsel for the defendants, will oppose the motion on the ground that the present petit jury is well able to try the case.

FESTIVALS OF CHRISTMAS

Sunday Schools' Pupils Take Part in Elaborate Celebrations.

MANY GIFTS ARE DISTRIBUTED.

Children Sing Carols—Addresses Are Made and Refreshments Served.

Christmas festivals were held in many churches last night. Among them were these:

The Christmas entertainment of the Seventh-Day Baptist church Sabbath-school was held in the church parlors, last night. The program, arranged with the idea of representing every class and the Home department of the school was as follows:

Song, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," school; Scripture reading, Joseph A. Hubbard; prayer, Rev. Edwin Shaw; quartet, "Christmas Hearts," Mrs. Frank Champlin, Mrs. Frank Langworthy, Frank Langworthy and Dr. O. B. Whitford; reading, "The Three Kings of Cologne," Eugene Field, Miss Bessie Dunham; vocal solo, "In Old Judea," Roy E. Titsworth; Bible acrostic, "Merry Christmas," Frances Mosher, Grace Stillman, Celia Cottrell, Laura Stillman, Dorothy Hubbard, Mary Hunting, Ruth Morris, Leland Shaw, John Cottrell, Jr., Elmer Hunting, Harold Spicer, Theodore Champlin.

Song, "Christmas Lullaby," primary department; recitation, "At Last It Comes to Christmas Time," Elizabeth Kellogg; recitation, "Bethlehem," Margaret Kimball, Stephena Shaw, Beatrice Cottrell, Ernest Stillman, Frances Warbach, Alfred Wooden, Blake Russell; "Giving Verse," Elizabeth Kellogg, Lewis Kimball, Everett Hunting, George Wooden, Robert Spicer, Harold Stillman; song, "Sing Your Christmas Carols,' primary department; distribution of gifts to the primary department; song, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," school.

At the close of the program the audience was served with refreshments, during which a social hour was enjoyed. It is customary with this school to remember some Plainfield charity at Christmas time, and this year, the King's Daughters' Day Nursery will receive a substantial gift of groceries, each member of the school having been asked to contribute something for its storeroom. The chairmen of the committees having charge of the entertainment were: General committee, Charles F. Neagle; soliciting, Miss Mildred A. Greene; decorating, Milton W. St. John; refershments, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph; gifts, Miss Ida L. Spicer; entertainment, Mrs. William C. Hubbard.

The Christmas exercises of the Friends first-day school were held Monday night at the meeting house on Watchung avenue. Mabel H. Vail, the superintendent, was in charge of the program. Readings and recitations were given by the pupils in an interesting manner. The program was as follows:

Opening address, "The Meaning of Christmas," Mabel H. Vail; concert reading, "A Winter Hymn," school; reading, "How Uncle Sam Observes Christmas," boys' class; introduction, Mrs. Elizabeth Ogden, teacher; "In the South," Russell Beekman; "In New England," Arthur Compton; "In New Mexico," Halbert Hutchinson; "Among the Shakers," LeRoy Stringham; "Among the Pennsylvania Germans," Carlton Vail; "In Porto Rico," Theodore Vail; "Among the Moravians," Russell Vail; "In Alaska," Roy Vail; recitations, "Christmas to All," Mildred Poole; "A Good Time is Coming," Gladys Weaver; "I Think I'll Marry Santa Claus," Amy Lorton; "Bethlehem's Star," Ellis Vail; "Elder Lamb's Donation," Ruth Stryker; "A Telephone Message," Ruth Compton; "Christmas," Ralph Williamson; "When Old Kris Comes Around," Arthur Hutchinson; "Willie's Letter to Santa Claus," Charlie Weaver; "A Merry Christmas," Maud Edel; "Christmas Chimes," Carlton Vail; "Kittie's Christmas Offering," Helen Poole.

Following the program ice cream and cake were served to the pupils and their friends, according to the usual custom. Before leaving each pupil was given a box of candy and an orange.

The Christmas exercises of the beginners' and primary departments were held yesterday afternoon at Hope chapel. Over one hundred and twenty-five little children were present from 2:30 until 5 o'clock, the chapel resounding with the merriment of the little folks. Games were played until 3:15, when Rev. L. R. Howard gave a short talk about "The Birth of Christ at Bethlehem." He held the close attention of his hearers for fifteen minutes.

The children eagerly awaited the coming of "Santa Claus," who appeared in the person of Sewell Ulrich, and he distributed beautiful dolls for the girls and mechanical toys for the boys. After the distribution of presents ice cream and cake were served and oranges and boxes of candy were given to the little tots.

Mrs. John Ulrich and Mrs. E. W. Williams were in charge, asisted by their respective teachers, who are as follows: Miss Bertha Jones, pianist; the Misses Edna and Eunice Eckert, Miss Marguerite Phillips, the Misses Clara Hunter, Mary N. Mortimer, Alice Leighs, Mary Radford, Elsie Rimmer and Mrs. Charles Hughes, Mrs. William Baker, Mrs. Harry Keen, Mrs. Ferdinand Dencklau, Mrs. Walter Bradford, Mrs. George Leighs and Mrs. L. R. Howard. The main school will hold its Christmas entertainment tomorrow night.

The Christmas tree festival for the children of St. Stephen's church was held last night and it was a jolly and largely attended affair. Besides the gifts for the children of the parish many small presents were brought for the poor children which will be distributed later.

The rector, Rev. Morgan Ashley, was remembered by his parishioners. The full choir rendered some beautiful music. The children sang carols which pleased the parents and others in the audience. The choir came in for gifts as well as the others and altogether it was a joyous occasion. The rector received a clock, a sweater and an umbrella stand to hold the umbrella he received last year.

Mrs. William Taylor presided at the organ and the tree committee consisted of Lewis Willis, George Dobbs, John Bremble and the rector. The latter, as usual, kept everybody laughing with his sheer joy in the event. In fact everybody was happy.

"A Trip to Santa Land, a Dream of Harold," was the name of a Christmas cantata given in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church, last night, under the auspises of the Sunday school. In the absence of the superintendent, James R. Joy, his place was capably filled by Maurice McGrath, one of the assistants.

The cantata was given in three scenes, first a home on Christmas Day, second, Santa's workshop and third, Christmas morning in the home. The settings were fine and greatly appreciated. There were about forty-five children in the cantata, those taking the principal parts were:

"Santa Claus," Leslie Leland; "Jack," Charles Small; "Suzanne," Myrlte Darling; "Mother," Mrs. Thomas MacDonald; "Baby," Howard Fisher; "John Tompkins," Wallace Zimmerman; "Tom," Harold Woolston; "Rex," Russell Beekman; "Jill," Allen Campbell; "Alice," Katheryn Bingaman; "Dorothy," Hester Stebbins.

Including the above, representing Yankee Land, seven nations were represented — Germany, Russia, France, Italy, Japan and China. There were several children in each group and they presented an attractive picture in costumes. The cantata practically took up the whole evening, after which there was a distribution of gifts to the smaller children, while Isaac W. Kennedy, the sexton; Miss Gertrude Sharp, pianist, and Maurice McGrath were each remembered by special gifts.

A feature of the entertainment was the work of Miss Frances Rittenhouse, who was the accompanist. Miss May Randolph, who is superintendent of the Junior Epworth League, which gave the entertainment, was in charge, and her assistants were Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, Mrs. Maurice McGrath, Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. Judd Stuart, Miss Edna French, Edward Brown, Walter Kennedy and Arthur Humble. The Christmas entertainment for the primary department will be held in the chapel tomorrow afternoon.

DUNELLEN TO HAVE NEW BRICK BUILDING

Activity in Dunellen real estate and building circles has taken a skyward leap, and the indications point to a big increase in the tax valuations in that borough in 1910. Winfield Hetfield, the veteran butcher, of that place, is reserving bids from builders for a two story brick flat which he will erect next spring on North avenue. The structure will contain two stores in addition to the living apartments and will cost between $5,000 and $10,000. Fred Wilcox, is receiving figures for a double house, which he will also have built in the spring.

After a standstill in building operations for almost a dozen years the borough has started to grow in earnest. The 1909 building statistics show that forty dwelling houses, representing an average cost of $3,200 and a total cost of $128,000 were erected during the present year.

ANOTHER OCTOGENARIAN PASSES AWAY SUDDENLY.

Mrs. Ginder is survived by four sons and three daughters—William Ginder, of Hamilton, Canada; John Ginder, of Atlantic City; Frederick Ginder, of Brooklyn, and Augustus Ginder, of Plainfield; Mrs. C. F. Morton, and Miss Emma Ginder, of Trenton, and Mrs. A. I. Laing, of North Plainfield.

BOROUGH REPORTS READ

Heads of Departments Submit Annual Statements to the Council.

DOG LICENSE TAX YIELDED $685

Total Expenditures For Year $31,610.14—Fire and Police Chiefs' Reports.

When Borough Clerk Frederick Martin read his dog tax report at the Borough Council last night which showed license money on canines yielded $685 to the treasury there were nods of approval from Mayor Townsend and all of the councilmen. In all the owners of more than 300 dogs paid their taxes or more than twice the number of last year. Quite a number of citizens dodged the issue this year but it was indicated at the meeting that the ordinance will be enforced to the letter next year.

Most of the time was taken up by the presentation of reports from the various departments. Councilman Stahl, chairman of the fire and building committee, reported that the expenses of the fire department for December was $551.16 and $3,909.96 for the year.

Borough Clerk Martin reported that the total expenditures of the year was $31,610.14. The monthly report of Tax Collector Brown gave the December receipts as $44,665.18.

The annual report of Fire Chief Howard Woolston registered twenty-five alarms during the year. None of the fires were of a serious nature, the total losses netting only $1,250. Chief Woolston's report was supplemented by his resignation to take effect December 31 and the recommendation that William McCullough be appointed his successor, William Baily, captain, and William Gaub, lieutenant.

Frederick Becker, overseer of the poor, reported that expenses of his department for the year was $1,073.60.

H. Crowfoot White, chairman of the Shade Tree Commission, presented a lengthy report, describing the progress made in the introductory work by the commission.

On the recommendation of Councilman Stahl four building permits were granted, two of which were to Assessor J. H. Cooley to have erected two one-story frame buildings for brooding purposes on upper Grove street; Henry DeMott, a dwelling on Jefferson avenue; Arthur R. Phillips, addition to barn at 36 Grandview avenue, and to William Uhrhahn, for the erection of a barn on Coddington avenue.

Warrants for $42,108.98 were ordered issued for the payment of bills. Of this amount $42,108.98 represented school tax monies, while $1,406 was for miscellaneous expenditures.

Court Plainfield to Celebrate.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, will celebrate the closing meeting of the year Friday night, when a large class of applicants will be initiated by Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger W. T. Bingham, of Elizabeth, and his special degree team. A musical program has been arranged and the court's own quartet will render several selections. Visitors from out of town will be present to see the work conferred. A smoker will be enjoyed and a large attendance is desired at this meeting.

CHAIRMANSHIPS IN THE STATE SENATE

Trenton, Dec. 29.—Through the apportionment of committee clerkships by the Republican Senators in caucus here Monday afternoon, a fairly good line on the Senate committee chairmanships for the 1910 session can be gleaned. Last winter former Senator Hillery, of Morris, had the naming of two committee clerks; Senator Frelinghuysen, one other, and Senator Ackerman, a fourth. By Monday's allotment these counties will get no clerkship representation, the four "plums" falling, instead, in the proportion of one each to Cape May, Monmouth, Passaic and Ocean.

The committees calling for these clerks are Judiciary, Corporations, Banks and Insurance and Revision of Laws. Just which of these clerkships each of the counties named will get will have to be settled by Senate President-to-be Frelinghuysen when the 1910 session opens. Senator Ackerman was made majority leader, and as such will be chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Ordinarily this carries with it also the naming of a clerk to this committee. This year, however, Mr. Ackerman is not to be allowed that opportunity, his colleagues satisfying him, instead, by giving him the selection of a journal clerk, a doorkeeper and a file clerk.

In the apportionment of the other clerkships it was noticed that Bergen county captured one, as well as a bill clerk and a clerk to the secretary. This is taken to indicate that Senator Wakelee will again land the chairmanship of the important Committee on Railroads and Canals, to which "public utility commission bills" are usually referred and generally smothered. Last winter Mr. Wakelee had for his clerk of this committee Le Roy Vanderburg, and he will name him again, it is understood.

Camden county also captured a committee clerkship, which means that Senator Bradley will once more fill the chairmanship of the Committee on Appropriations, of which Harry M. Dease, of Camden, was the clerk last year.

Senator Minch, of Cumberland, was once more allotted a committee clerkship, all of which makes sure Mr. Minch's reappointment to the chairmanship of the Committee on Municipal Corporations, of which Robert Sheppard was the clerk.

As this is his second year, Senator Gaunt, of Gloucester, will get a clerkship also and will quite probably be named as chairman of the Committee on Printed Bills. Wilbur K. Sloan will no doubt land this clerkship.

Senator Brown, of Monmouth, won a committee clerkship, too, and will undoubtedly ask again for the chairmanship of the Committee on Public Health.

Senator-elect Lewis, of Burlington; Prince, of Passaic; Mathis, of Ocean, and Mills, of Morris, fared well in the apportionments. Mr. Lewis got an assistant sergeant-at-arms, one doorkeeper and one page. Mr. Mills captured a page, an assistant to the Senate secretary and an assistant journal clerk. Dr. Prince got a calendar clerk and a page, beside the committee clerkship mentioned, and Mr. Mathis, a clerk to the president and a page, as well as a committee clerkship.

Those who will probably be the doorkeepers for the next session, with the exception of Senator Lewis' choice, from Burlington, are Major Henry, Atlantic; Frank L. Wallace, Cumberland; Gervas A. Hall, Salem; William A. Kline, Union; Ernest A. Schmidt, Gloucester. Daniel S. Cosgrove, of Cape May, will again be named a gallery keeper by Senator Hand, and Joshua Watson stands a good chance of being the Camden appointee to the post of cloakroom keeper.

Tuttle Walker, of Atlantic, will possibly be named again as an assistant clerk to the president, and Joseph Cahill, of Union, will be selected by Senator Ackerman for file clerk. The positions of assistant journal clerk, calendar clerk, clerk to the secretary and clerk to the president have not been filled yet.

After the caucus President Frelinghuysen announced that the Senators had decided to let it be known they did not want any flowers on the opening day. They expect to provide the bouquets in an oratorical form and wish them in no other shape.

It was, also, explained that the session would be a "short and sweet" one and that "reform" would have a slim chance in 1910. There were plenty of the Senators willing to verify this.

Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon county, has sent out an invitation to the Democrats who will serve in the next Legislature, to attend a caucus at his office in Jersey City on Thursday afternoon.

Miss Elsie Brown, of Newark, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

Robert Cuzen, of New York, is visiting his cousin, Allen Cuzen, of West Front street.

Mrs. W. S. Decker, of this city, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Fritts, of Trenton, has returned to this city.

MARKETING by TELEPHONE

THERE are many lines of business in which most of the sales should be made by telephone. Groceries, meats, fish, fruit, coal, livery, trucking, may be ordered as well by wire as in person. Customers should be urged to order by telephone. It is more convenient and saves time for both buyer and seller.

You cannot consistently advocate this method of buying unless your own telephone equipment is adequate to receive the public's orders without delay.

The Telephone Company has some ideas on bigger business for you, and time-and-money saving through the use of its service. Call Contract Department and ask about it.

The Chorus Lady

By JAMES FORBES

Novelized From Forbes' Play of the Same Name by JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Company.

"I'm goin' to show you up," he cried, stopping in front of Patsy. "I'm goin' to tell your mother the kind of a girl you are; tell her I know all about you an' Crawford; tell her that you didn't stop at any lengths to save your sister; that it was Nora who owed money to Crawford and that Nora was in that room you prevented him goin' into; tell her that I'm the biggest fool on earth, the lowest dog alive, to doubt for one minute the girl I love, the girl who's too good for me, too good for any of us!"

"Phwat's that? Danny, phwat d'ye mean? For hiv'n's sake, phwat d'ye mean?" inquired the old woman imploringly, torn by joy and fear.

Patsy had uttered a little cry of dismay.

"It's all a mistake," she cried. "Nora's as good as an angel."

"Nora, come here!" shouted Mallory.

"No; don't," entreated Patsy earnestly. "Don't ask her anything."

"What were you doing in that room at Crawford's tonight?" he demanded sternly when the girl tripped in.

Nora reddened and looked from one to the other with the startled gaze of a trapped fawn.

"You've told on me, you mean thing!" she almost screamed at Patsy. Then she sought refuge in a burst of hysterical weeping.

While Patsy tried to explain and palliate and condone, Mallory and Mrs. O'Brien by dint of questioning and by working upon her fears drew the whole story from Nora. Then Mrs. O'Brien took Patsy in her arms and cried over her and was hugged and cried over in turn.

Very humbly and very penitently Mallory advanced to receive his share of forgiveness also.

Patsy repulsed him.

"Nit, Daniel Mallory," she said. "You doubted me and would not hear me the first time the chance to stand by me showed itself, an' I'll never believe in you again."

"I deserve all that's comin' to me, but handle me gently. I was mad jealous," he pleaded—"mad jealous clean through and unable to reason."

A ringing at the bell checked further attempt at reconciliation.

"There's your father," said Mallory, turning to Nora. "Chase yourself! Get a move on! Don't let him see you tiveelin'."

Mrs. O'Brien opened the front door, and her husband came in. He was very pale, and his compressed lips and the ominous look in his eyes denoted that he was in a white heat of anger.

"Wheriver have ye been?" queried Mrs. O'Brien

"Ol've been to Crawford's," he announced.

"Why, the girl's here!" she said.

"She wasn't here when we came at tin o'clock, was she?" he questioned sarcastically.

"Yes," affirmed Mallory. "She came heme with a sick headache before the show an' didn't hear your ringin' because she was fast asleep in her room."

"An' where was she?" he demanded, indicating Patsy.

For a moment no one spoke. All were filled with secret consternation. Had Crawford, after all, told him what had happened?

"Patsy was around to the drug store," lied her mother desperately. "That talk av Nora an' Crawford was gossip, the clatter of an oldle tongue."

"It was, was it? Thin phwat's this note he gave me with a demand for the money? He said he lint $300 to get 'em out av a hole and told me to give it to 'em as a souvenir if they hadn't the dacency to make good. If it's all gossip, how comes he to have a note for money I never had, soigned with me name?"

He thrust the paper under Patsy's nose. She took it and stared at it blankly, finding nothing to say.

"Well, girl, haven't ye a tongue in yir head?" her father almost shouted and almost dancing with rage. "Who soigned 'P. O'Brien' to that paper? Who dared to use my name?"

It was clear that, though the yellow dog streak in Crawford had impelled him to try to make trouble with the note, he had been careful to avoid a violent scene with O'Brien by recounting the events of the evening. Mallory plucked up courage.

"What's the matter with you, pop?" he said. "It's her own name. It's signed 'P. O'Brien.' Why shouldn't she sign it? Why shouldn't she get money from Crawford? It's owin' to me, an' what's mine's hers. Crawford an' me's had a run in. I've quit him, an' he's sore, that's all."

Patsy shot a glance of gratitude toward him.

O'Brien was nonplused.

"What would she be doin' with that amount av money?" he inquired.

"That would be tellin'," laughed Mallory. "That's our own little secret."

Mrs. O'Brien came to his aid.

"Moind yir own business, Patrick," she ordered, with her old time domineering manner. "It's the excoitable man ye are careerin' all over town an' us waitin' supper for ye. Run out an' rush the growler if it ain't too late."

"Excuse me, Patsy. 'Twas all a mistake, I see," he said, preparing to do as he was bidden.

"Forget it, pop," she replied, imprinting a kiss on his lips.

O'Brien, all cheerfulness, went out.

"God love ye for the good girl ye are," said her mother fondly, "an' may he forgive me, for I need it."

"S-sh!" chided Patsy as she put her arms around the old woman's neck.

"Do I come in on this now?" demanded Mallory wistfully.

For answer Patsy put out an arm and included him in her embrace.

"This evenin' settles it," he said when he also had received the long, sweet impress of the seal of pardon and her mother had abandoned her to his caresses. "We'll take no more chances, dear. We have waited on the future too long. You'll come home with me now."

"Yes, Dan," sighed Patsy happily, resting her head on his shoulder. "An' we'll settle down like a couple of Reubens—us an' the cows."

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Plainfield Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinaryd disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Plainfield testimony:

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A constant pain in my limbs was the principal symptom of my kidney trouble. For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Make Your Hatpins.

For your dressy hats, why not make your own hatpins of lace? An old form can be covered with a crocheted medallion or lace flower. The stitches must necessarily be close in order to cover the foundation, but when an Irish lace daisy curls its petals over a hatpin you will pierce your crown with joy in the knowledge of having something homemade but new.

The Red Men romped away with three more games in the Fraternal Tourney, last night, the Public Service team being the victims.

SAD SIDE OF BIG FIGHT

Sons of Bob Fitzsimmons Grieve Over Father's Defeat in Ring.

"BOB, JR.," OUT FOR REVENGE.

Eldest Son of Former Champion Declares He Will Lick Bill Lang When He Grows Up.

Two little brothers, one fifteen and the other twelve years of age, the youngest bitterly sobbing and wiping the tears from his rugged cheeks, as the elder brother was reading to him from a newspaper, was a picture of pathos of real life which was presented to men, women and little folks who called at the Dunellen postoffice for mail yesterday afternoon.

The two boys were the sons of Bob Fitzsimmons, the erstwhile champion of the prize ring, whom on Christmas day, 15,000 miles away from his Dunellen farm, at Sydney, Australia, reached the final round in his pugilistic career by being knocked out in the twelfth round by Bill Lang, a second rate pug, of the Antopedes.

The Fitzsimmons boys, Bob, Jr., and Martin, are known by almost everybody in Dunellen and there was not an individual who did not realize their grief as they stood in the postoffice reading the detailed account of the defeat of their daddy.

"It's pretty tough," said Robert, Jr., to a Daily Press reporter. "Little Martin takes it to heart because the paper tells it so plainly. See here this is what made him cry so much."

Right here young Bob, interrupted by occasional gulps in his throat, read the cold blooded report of the sporting scribe. * * * "when Lang, twenty years younger and twenty pounds heavier, scored a knockdown on a crashing blow to Fitz's jaw. Staggering blindly to his feet at the count of nine, Fitz was a pitiable object and when Lang stepping deliberately, caught him on the chin with a merciless right hand uppercut Fitz fell to the boards battered and bleeding, to be counted out probably for the last time."

But, a spirit of vengeance surged in the heart of Robert, Jr., after he read the heart-rending account of the sunset of the grand and glorious ring career of his father and tried to comfort little brother Martin.

"Pop was the best fighter who ever put on the gloves," declared little Bob with an air of bravo. "I'm sorry he got licked and wish I could have been with him on Christmas, but I'll get even for it all. I don't like fighting, but Pop always said I would make a fine boxer. I'm fifteen now. When I reach twenty I'll be big enough to take care of this fellow Lang and give hime some "Old Man's Medicine." I never expect to go into the fighting business but I'll go after this fellow Lang."

Robert, despite the popularity gained by his father, is a modest chap, and is a favorite with all of the youngsters of the borough. He has a fine physique, and weighs about 150 pounds. Last fall he made quite a reputation for himself as a football player. Along with brother Martin, he attends the Parker schoolhouse at Conover's Corner, where he has the reputation of being a studious boy. Martin leans more to athletics and sports more so than his brother Robert.

NEWARK GIRL RESCUED FROM DEN OF CHINESE.

New York, Dec. 29.—A girl eighteen years old, who gave the name of May Belmont, was Monday arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court and committed to a home for women on West Tenth street. She had been rescued from an opium den in Chinatown by Miss Rose Livingstone. The girl was a physical wreck and her condition aroused the pity of Magistrate Barlow, who held her in $500 in order that she might be placed in some institution where she can be cured of the drug habit.

The girl was found in a basement opium room in Chatham square and was in a semi-conscious condition when discovered by Miss Livingstone. She was surrounded by a half dozen Chiense, all of whom were smoking opium. As soon as Miss Livingstone's mission became known she was attacked, and it was only through her screams and threats of informing the police that she was allowed to take the girl away.

The girl, who has been frequenting Chinatown for a few weeks only, is said to belong to a well-to-do Newark family. She has chestnut hair and fine-cut features.

PRESBYTERIANS GIVE PASTOR A CHAIR

The Sunday-school of the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, celebrated Xmas last night by the most elaborate program in its history. The principal feature of the exercises was the presentation of the cantata "Santa Claus and Uncle Sam." The railroad and cave scenes were realistic in the extreme and the solo parts were admirably rendered by the Misses Beatrice Cameron, Edith Schneider, Meta Pennock, Bessie Morris, Robert Lowrie played the part of Santa Claus, and Edgar Starker represented Uncle Sam. The various countries were represented by Clarence Voorhees, George Apgar, Edith Wyckoff, Bessie Morris, Clara Dodwell, Beo Dodwell, Anna Ace, Nellie Vail, Mrs. J. Newton Apgar, Dorothy Cameron, Clara Cole, Edna Coriell, Theodore Day, May Day, Emma Voorhees, Francis Peeling, Ruth Apgar, Ruth Voorhees, Eliza Taylor, Ruth Schneider, Eva Schneider and Ruliff Fisher.

Another pleasing feature of the program was the presentation of a chair to the pastor, Rev. E. O. Brown. Robert F. Bogardus made the presentation speech and Pastor Brown responded in a fiting manner.

There was also a Christmas tree from which the members of the school received gifts.

Burglars entered the home of John Todd at Hampton and stole $200 in cash.

Indicted by the Camden County Grand Jury on the charge of perjury, Onie Natsko is under arrest in Philadelphia pending his return to the Jersey authorities for trial. It is alleged that Natsko committed the offense in testifying against the Public Service Railway Company in a suit for damages which he brought for injuries received in an accident. In the Camden Circuit Court he secured a verdict against the company, and it is declared he has a suit pending against the Rapid Transit Company for the same injury. He testified he had never been injured before in his suit against the Public Service Company and also that he had not made a claim for his injuries. This, it is said, was found to be untrue.

MAYOR'S SURPRISE TO BE IN MESSAGE

Mayor Charles J. Fisk will read a short message to the Common Council tomorrow night which will embody only a few of the things which are uppermost in his mind at the present time, but his formal message, to be read at the adjourned meeting, will be at length and will contain at least one thing which will be of the utmost interest to the whole city.

Mayor Fisk would not speak on this interesting matter this morning further than to say that it would be something which would bring before the people a measure which will be a lasting monument to the city's progressive ideas and would undoubtedly cause a glad commotion in the community.

JACOBSEN IS CHARGED WITH WIFE-MURDER.

Elizabeth, Dec. 29.—Walter P. Jacobsen, the young National Guardsman, who shot and killed his wife last Sunday at their home on Catherine street, was arraigned yesterday morning in police court here before Judge Mahon. Chief of Police Geo. C. Tenney, after a consultation with Prosecutor Swift, made a formal charge of murder against the prisoner.

Judge Mahon committed Jacobsen to jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Chief Tenney said yesterday there would be no inquest held. He had had his detectives working on the case since Sunday, and he said that sufficient evidence had been gathered by them to justify him in the action he had taken.

The chief said that one feature of this evidence would be from the lips of a woman eye-witness who would testify that the prisoner, after his wife refused to cease reading a novel she was at the time perusing, went into an adjoining room, got his army rifle, placed a cartridge in it and raising the weapon to his shoulder, pointed it at his wife and pulled the trigger.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will elect officers tomorrow night.

Several Christmas festivals were held last night at local churches for the Sunday school children.

The feature of the festival was the presentation of a cantata, "A Substitute For Santa Claus," which was cleverly portrayed in song and story by eight members of the society under the direction of Mrs. A. V. Kinney and Lawrence French.

The cast was made up of Harold Bach, Lawrence French, Elmer French, Charles Alleger, Millard McAfee, Carman Trembath, Howard Willett, and Marion Wooley.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. John Y Broek, was present, and gave a Christmas address to the little folks.

By special request the cantata will be repeated at the entertainment of the Sunday-school tonight.

The Christmas exercises of the main Sunday-school of Hope chapel will be held tonight at the chapel, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. A cantata, entitled "Foxy Santa," will be presented by over forty members of the school. Rehearsals have been held during the past five weeks and a finished performance is assured.

Mrs. L. R. Howard is directing the musical part of the cantata and Mrs. G. Stuart Simons is the dramatic coach for the performers who have speaking lines. The rehearsal last night, under the combined direction of Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Simons, left nothing to be desired and a fine entertainment is assured tonight. The cast follows:

"Santa," Thomas Hendry; "Miss Mary," Miss Edna Eckert; "Snow Queen," Miss Eunice Eckert; "Jack Frost," John Slorah; "Postman," Charles Vincent; "Polly," Elizabeth Doig; "Evelyn," Grace Brown; "Lola," Gertrude Slorah; "Tessie," Margaret Mortimer; "Teddy," George Gray; "Bobbie," David Hendry; orphans, Ruth Dellehunt, Ethel Vincent, Grace Schmidt, Katie Carkhuff, Margaret Doig, Margaretta Kirstein; snow fairies, Eleanor Arrowsmith, Minnie Slorah, Elsie Slorah, Bessie McWilliams, Elizabeth Brown, Florence Gordon; six little tots, Edith Roseberry, Harriet Mortimer, Edith Walts, Elsie Leighs, Flossie Leighs, Jessie Ross; three little jacks, Charles Bradford, Roy Nelson, Robert Herron; Santa's military band, James Herron, Walter Slorah, Harold Eckert, Marcus Bradford, Harold Condict, Elmer DeHart, John Herron and Albert Martin.

Bottling Establishment Burns.

The bottling establishment of Abram Kanerling, formerly an alderman of Paterson, at Greenwood Lake, was destroyed by fire late Tuesday night. The bottling plant adjourned the Sterling Forest Hotel, and the firemen had hard work saving the hotel from destruction. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

MRS. KATHARINE WEISS NOW MRS. J. E. CHURCH

Mrs. Katharine Weiss Leland and James E. Church, of 243 Somerset street, were married at 7 o'clock last night by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, at his home on Central avenue. The ceremony was witnessed by a small company of relatives and friends. After the ceremony the couple left on a honeymoon and will reside at 243 Somerset street after January 5.

Mr. Church is prominent as a Sunday-school worker, being an active member of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school, and a teacher of a Bible class. He also holds the position of State superintendent of the Home Department of Sunday-school work, and represents "The Good Housekeeping" magazine. Both he and his bride have a host of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Church was a widower and the bride was a widow. Both have grown-up children.

WEST END TABERNACLE WATCH NIGHT SERVICE

An extensive program has been prepared for the watch-night services at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow night. It will begin with a song service at 8 o'clock led by Mr. Leech, lasting a half-hour. This will be followed with an address by Philip Vroom on the "Talents." From 9 to 9:30 a song service will be conducted by George Robbins, and from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, Mr. DeMeris will speak on "The Holy Spirit in Our Life," and this will be followed with addresses by J. H. Manning and Martin A. Korff.

Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock those present will be devoted to "Getting Better Acquainted," with five minute addresses and from 11 to 11:30 there will be a love feast, conducted by Superintendent Robert Love, to be followed from 11:30 to 12 o'clock by a quiet hour, the ringing of the new church bell and winging of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

RUSHMORE'S POSITION AS TO HIS CANDIDACY

Edmund Rushmore, the real estate broker, in reply to a statement made by William Jeffery, in another paper, relative to the presidency of the Board of Trade, declared today that he is a candidate for the presidency and is in the race to the finish. He says that he had no idea of retiring in favor of Mr. Jeffery and is willing to make the fight on square lines.

Referring to Mr. Jeffery's statement regarding the promotion of harmony in the board, Mr. Rushmore says that he is a regular attendant at all meetings and has failed to notice any lack of harmony. He says that he believes that the members are working harmoniously together for the best interests of the city.

There is a feeling on the part of many members that H. W. Marshall should be continued in office another year, and in fact every effort will be made to have him accept a re-election, but if he declines, Mr. Rushmore says that he will do all in his power to be elected.

Gave Doll's Tea Party.

The Misses Dorothy and Marion Lynn, of Grant avenue, gave a doll's tea part yat their home yesterday afternoon. Each guest brought a doll. Games were played and honors were awarded to Miss Gladys Waring and Miss Gladys Sherwood. Pniano selections were given by Miss Jubilee Rowley, Miss Gladys Waring, Miss Rachel Smith and Miss Marion Lynn. Refreshments were served and the guests departed about 6 o'clock.

Y. M. H. A. Hold a Meeting.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association held its last meeting of the year last night, when all arrangements were completed for the ball to be held Saturday night at Saengerbund Hall. Two applications for membership were acted upon favorably and all the reports presented showed the association to be in good condition.

"What Happened to Santa."

"What Happened to Santa" is the name of the Christmas cantata which will be given at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school, tonight at 8 o'clock. There is a large cast and the entertainment promises to be exceptionally good.

WHO GETS THE MONEY?

Recorder Dolliver at Sea over Thirty Dollars Fine Paid by Charles Geer.

MRS. VANHOESEN TAKES ACTION

Borough Magistrate Decides to Retain Money Until He Hears From State S. P. C. A. Society.

Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, of the borough, is at sea as to what disposition to make of the $30 fine paid by Charles Geer, which was the punishment meted out to Geer in the celebrated horse cruelty case.

Geer was remanded to the Somerset county jail but was released last Friday when a friend paid the fine.

According to the law, the fine should revert to the S. P. C. A. society, of Somerset county, where the deed was committed.

But the point is raised because Miss Mary Steele, of Somerville, the Somerset county agent of the society, refused to act when her attention was called to the case by the borough police authorities.

As a result of Miss Steele's refusal Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, of Fanwood, the Union county representative of the society was brought into the case. Mrs. Van Hoesen and State Agent Lewis Teed, of Newark, prosecuted the case until the end.

Taking all facts into consideration it appears that the money should be turned over to Mrs. Van Hoesen. The latter has taken the matter up with the State society, and until that organization decides who is entitled to the spoils Recorder Dolliver will hold the money.

Chief Weiss is also entitled to $1.65 for serving papers in the case.

OVERCOATS NECESSARY IN DISTRICT COURT

The temperature in the District court this morning was low enough to cause the lawyers in the two cases which were tried to keep their overcoats on and whoop things up a bit to keep themselves warm. Only two matters for the consideration of the court came up and in these Judge Whittemore, of Elizabeth presided in the place of Judge William Newcorn, who was detained in Elizabeth on special cases.

Charles Ramsey, represented by F. J. Blatz, recovered a judgment against Isaac Schrager on a contract of accounts with the Dunham Grocery Co., for $17.29. Another suit brought by H. G. McVoy against H. H. Williams for work done in the latter's house, the contract for which was held by E. S. F. Randolph, brought about a peculiar state of affairs. Mr. McVoy, who was represented by V. W. Nash, Jr., will have to sue Mr. Randolph to recover the amount for which he sued Mr. Williams. All of which is a triangular fight for the sum of $43.

Union M. E. Church Services.

The First M. E., Monroe Avenue M. E. and Grace M. E. churches will unite next week in week of prayer services. Wednesday night the congregations will meet at the First M. E. church and Rev. C. S. Kemble will make the address. Thursday night the meeting will be at the Monroe Avenue church and Rev. O. J. Shoop will speak and on Friday night the meeting will be at Grace M. E. church, when Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson will speak.

Mayor Fisk Will Receive.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk wants the announcement made clear that he will keep open house at his office on New Year's day from 11 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. He hopes that all those who feel like seeing him and passing the compliments of the season will avail themselves of the opportunity to call. Women as well as men will be welcomed.

Peary to Give Lecture.

Lieutenant Commander Robert E. Peary will deliver a lecture in the First Congregational church, Montclair, on the evening of Monday, January 10, under the auspices of the Montclair Colony of New England Women. This will be Commander Peary's first public lecture since his return from the North Pole.

MISS DUCHINI DEAD AT 99 YEARS OF AGE

Miss Maria Duchini, aunt of Dr. P. J. Zeglio, passed away at the latter's home on Somerset street, yesterday, after an illness of two days. Miss Duchini was in her ninetyninth year, and while she enjoyed fairly good health for one of her age, she had been an invalid for the last two years.

Born in Switzerland in 1811, she came to this country about thirty years ago, and always made her home with her nephew. The funeral service will be private.

STEPHEN M. STAATS BECOMES A BENEDICT

Miss Florence Minnie Pierson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Pierson, and Stephen Monroe Staats, of this city, were married at 8:15 o'clock last night, at the home of the bride's parents, 1018 East Front street. There was an assemblage of about one hundred relatives and friends from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Bayonne, Somerville, Raritan, New Brunswick, Martinsville, Dunellen and this city.

Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, of which the bride is a member, performed the ceremony. The Episcopal marriage service was used.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin messaline, trimmed with chiffon embroidery and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid was Miss Mabel Pierson, an elder sister of the bride and she wore a gown of pink and white organdie over pink silk and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses. Oscar P. Pierson, a brother of the bride, was the best man and the usher was Albert Walter Pierson, also a brother of the bride.

Mrs. Ivan G. Pierson, of Newark, an aunt of the bride, played the Lohengrin wedding march, when the bridal party entered the parlors. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of palms, southern smilax and ferns. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Oscar F. Pierson.

The parlors were decorated with white carnations and greens and in the library red carnations, smilax and holly were used, while in the dining-room they consisted of pink carnations and greens. The decorations were arranged by Miss Lincoln.

After congratulations were showered upon the couple, an elaborate collation was served. The couple left later in the evening for a brief honeymoon, their destination being a secret. On their return they will reside with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen O. Staats, of 130 West Second street.

In the exchange of wedding gifts among the bridal party, the groom gave the best man and usher pearl stick-pins. The bridesmaid received a pearl brooch from the bride. The bride also presented to her aunt, who played the wedding march, a silver belt buckle. The bride and groom presented diamond rings to each other.

Mr. and Mrs. Staats were the recipients of many handsome wedding gifts from relatives and friends, including a substantial check from the groom's parents. Mr. Staats holds a clerical position in the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York.

Juniors Christmas Party.

The junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school held its Christmas party in the Sunday-school room, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Harold Serrell, the superintendent, assisted by the different teachers, was in charge of the informal program. There was a Christmas tree and the children played games of all kinds, after which there was a distribution of gifts to each child, and ice cream and cake were served. The affair was entirely informal and everyone enjoyed themselves.

Typos First Ball.

Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, will hold its first ball at Saengerbund Hall, Friday night, January 28. Music will be furnished by Suhr's Imperial orchestra. The proceeds from the affair will be used to defray the expenses in entertaining the State Eight Hour League at its quarterly meeting here in April. The committee in charge comprises C. W. UNION COUNTY'S PLUMS Patronage Less Than in Last Few Years But is Considered Fair.

WHERE THE JOBS ARE TO GO.

The Committee Assignments—George Johnson Journal Clerk in the Assembly.

While the total patronage bestowed upon Union county by the caucuses and steering committees of the Senate and Assembly does not equal that of the last session, local leaders are well pleased with the jobs that came this way. The county does not get two jobs that it had last year—bill clerk of the Senate and Senate Committee clerk—but there is hope that one more job will be at the disposal of the Republican leaders of the county before the session gets under way. The salaries attached to the jobs already secured amount to $3,400.

The meeting of the House steering committee, of which Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz is a member, resulted in the parceling out of two more jobs to Union county. Robert O. Senkowsky and Joseph Buckley, both of Elizabeth, will be doorkeepers. Each job pays $350 for the session. George Johnston, of Fanwood, was selected journal clerk for the House at the caucus. His salary will be $1,000, bringing the total salaries of Union county men in the House up to $1,700 as compared with $1,550 last year.

In the Senate, John W. Clift, of Summit, will be journal clerk, and Joseph Cahill, of Elizabeth, will probably accept the position of file clerk in the Senate. William A. Kline, of this city, will be the Union county doorkeeper in the upper branch.

With this patronage settled, those interested in the session are eager to learn what committee assignments are to be given the Union county Assemblymen. Two of them, Messrs. Pierce and Schwartz, are veterans in the Lower House and will probably be given places on important committees with possibly one chairmanship each. Mr. Schwartz is mentioned for the chairmanship of the Committee on Banking and Insurance and it is probable that Mr. Pierce will again be named chairman of the Revision and Laws Committee.

JERSEY CENTRAL COMES NEAR LOSING STATION

About seventy feet of the north side of the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Communipaw was destroyed by fire this morning. The blaze started in the brakemen's room, which was back of the station master's room and the women's waiting room, which are side by side and nearest to the train shed. In the rear of the brakemen's room were sleeping rooms used by train men. That part of the station is a one-story brick structure.

How the fire started is not known. Some one waiting in the station turned in an alarm, but his name was not learned.

The Jersey City firemen had a hard time reaching the station, as to do so they had to cross one of two bridges over the Morris Canal and then travel about a mile over railroad tracks, the station being surrounded by train yards. Two ferryboats that were at the slip turned streams of water on the flames and several Jersey Central tugboats also helped to drown out the fire. The Fire Department places the loss at about $10,000.

Fire Wrecks Landmark.

One of the city's landmarks, the former home of the late Justice Bradley, of the United States Supreme Court, at No. 536 Broad street, Newark, was partly wrecked by fire Tuesday. The blaze started in the cellar, following the explosion of a gas range, and the flames ate their way rapidly to the roof.

GOVERNOR DEPLORES PUBLIC SCHOOL FADS

John F. Fort Very Rightfully Pleads for Sound Methods.

MAKE SURE OF THE THREE R's.

Our Free Educational System He Truely Says Has Become Top-Heavy—Gives Some Good Advice.

Declaring in his address that breakdown of the mind in latter years is frequently traced to the number of studies of young children; that he favors a return to the reading of the Bible in schools, and that the educational ssytem is topheavy, Governor Fort created a stir at the State teachers convention at Trenton yesterday.

Governor Fort in part said:

"It is always a pleasure to me to listen at college, or other like gatherings, to the commendation and praise which is given to the professors by men who have long since been out of the institution. As we come to after life we realize more and more the force for good that the teacher has been to us. In the days of a quarter of a century or more ago there was less of rush, and I am inclined to think more of care, not only in business, but in the school life, and in practically everything else. In those days men were not in so great a hurry to get riches or to acquire an education. They did things thoughtfully and with due deliberation. The children were not pushed in the schools then as they are now.

"The number of books which children of tender age are seen to carry, and are known to be expected to study, in our time, makes one wonder whether it is not possible that the breakdown of the mind in after years, which so frequently occurs in our time, has not had its inception in the school room.

"It is probably that at least two-thirds of all the scholars in our public schools finished their schooling at 14 years of age or younger. Beside the plain rudiments which are required to be taught by the statute, namely, reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling, English grammar and geography, children cannot be taught a knowledge of cooking, manual and physical training, drawing, music, nature study, Latin, Greek, psychology, astronomy and agriculture at the same time. Of course these latter things may be studied with advantage, but the child that leaves school thus early should be grounded in the rudiments rather than permitted to be moved into what might be called the advanced branches. If manual training is to come, it will have to come as a side study, along with the practical work which the child enters upon in his or her business in life.

"The public schools of our State have increased both in attendance and in expanse very rapidly in the past few years. On every side the schoolhouse has been going up. At the end of the school year of 1901 the value of school buildings was about $17,500,000, and they had increased at the end of the school year of 1909 to about $34,000,000, being an increase in value of $16,500,000 in eight years, and represented by 2,052 school buildings. I question whether any other State in the Union can show such a remarkable increase in school property.

"This is neither the time nor the place to suggest modifications of laws or change in system, but there are many changes, in my judgment, in our school system which can be made to advantage. It is top-heavy. There is a lack of concentration of responsibility. Boards and bodies are too large and should be reduced in size, both in the State and locally. It may be wrong, but there is a feeling existent among the representative men in the State, in the Legislature and elsewhre that improvement can be made in many directions in our public school system, which will give us better results for the expenditures we are making than we are now receiving. An outcropping of this feeling is represented in the Senate committee, which is now inquiring into the public school system and its operation, with a view to suggest corrections and to promote its efficiency. Have we not too much supervision with the State Board of Education, State superin-

TAKE RADICAL VIEW AS TO THE GUARD

Trenton, Dec. 30.—"New Jersey's National Guard is top-heavy with departmental officers" and "the Sea Girt encampment should be given up." These are the opinions of at least one member of the joint legislative committee on revision of the military code. Assemblyman Meyer, of Sussex, chairman of the committee, so declared himself last night following a meeting of the committee. For the Sea Girt encampment he would substitute temporary camps made under practical field conditions.

The joint committee was authorized under a resolution adopted by the Senate early in the last session and concurred in by the Senate only two hours before sine die adjournment.

The committee Tuesday night discussed the information which the members have gathered and on which they will base the recommendations to be made in the report to be submitted to the incoming law-making body. The members of the committee are Assemblymen Meyer and Vredenburgh, of Monmouth, and Senators Bradley, of Camden, and Fielder, of Hudson.

The members of the committee have held seven meetings in the various National Guard armories during the past summer and fall at which regimental officers were present and gave their views concerning the organization and practises of the guard. After the conference Tuesday night Assemblyman Meyer, who has been a member of the National Guard for twenty years, both in New Jersey and New York, stated that he was convinced that the New Jersey guard is top-heavy with departmental officers, who are performing duties at a large expense to the State that ought to be attended to by regimental officers.

"I realize that the adjutant-general and the quartermaster-general are constitutional officers and cannot be touched by the Legislature," said Mr. Meyer, "but in my opinion there are altogether too many men attached to the staffs of these departments, honored with titles of colonel and major, and most of them could be dispensed with without injury to the militia. Why, in proportion to the size of the New Jersey guard, you will find attached to any encampment anywhere else in the country. Not one of these departmental staff officers could be mobolized under the Dick law; the regular army does not recognize them and there is no reason why New Jersey should continue to do so. Our military code should be revised so as to eliminate them, and whatever work they do, mostly in the way of red tape, should be allotted to regimental officers.

Another important conclusion arrived at by Mr. Meyer as a result of the investigating of the committee is that the State ought to abandon entirely the Sea Girt encampment.

"The regimental officers are almost a unit, as we found them, for doing away with the annual encampments at Sea Girt," continued Mr. Meyer, "and I know the enlisted men would welcome such a move. Nowadays the Sea Girt encampment, which costs the State an enormous sum of money, is regarded as a sort of picnic ground. Of course, it is a great rendezvous for politicians through the summer on various occasions, and it is a great sight-seeing attraction for the shore people to offer to tourists and excursionists who visit the seaside resorts in the neighborhood, but it is not particularly helpful to the militiamen. In my opinion it would be the part of wisdom and economy for the State to provide means for the guardsmen to be sent out on trips into the northern part of the State, where temporary camps could be formed and the organization given some practical field experience."

UNDER CIVIL SERVICE BEGINNING FEBRUARY 5.

Rahway, Dec. 30.—The Common Council, at its closing meeting Tuesday night, received a letter from Gardner Colby, secretary of the Civil Service Commission, giving notice that "on and after February 5 that body would come under civil service rules the same to cover dismissals only. Appointments without examinations may be made up to February 5, after which time all appointments must pass through the hands of this commission." The request was also made "That the Council please forward immediately the name of the party who would have charge of dispensing funds in this village."

The officers and members of the outgoing and the incoming city Council were invited by the veteran William B. Hughes, to attend an old and a new reception to be given at the home of his son-in-law, Fred Ayers, immediately following the organization of the new Council at noon, New Year's Day, and participate in a banquet, according to the custom of the past ten or more years. Upon calling of the roll for the closing duties of the Common Council of 1909, that body was declared as adjourned finally.

HUNTERS ARE WILLING TO PAY FOR LICENSE

The State fish and game commission, in reporting of the year's work to Governor Fort, said yesterday that the law requiring resident hunters to take out a license at $1 a gun had proved a benefit to the State, as in the first six months during which this law has been in force $35,356 had been collected from the various county clerks, who have the issuance of licenses to the people.

The commission further says that the law has given impetus to non-residents taking out such licenses, $5,460 having been received for the past six months, as against $2,660 the previous year. The law has been productive of good from the standpoint of controlling the foreignborn hunters, as $600 was received from them for licenses for the past six months, as against $90 the previous year. The resident gunners' license law has been in force only since July 4 last, while the non-residents and foreign-born license law has been in force a few years.

The commission lays emphasis on the fact that no man need take out a license to hunt on his own farm. There have been many silly stories regarding this alleged fact published.

The commission also reports that the license fees from vessels authorized to take menhaden amounted to last year $3,075, as against $2,500 for the previous year, and the commission has been successful in keeping fishing boats from New York from taking food fish within the three miles limit. The curtailment of the duck season, the commission thinks, was responsible for the plentiful bags of ducks this year.

Fines to the amount of $2,345 were collected for the year, and most of them for the destruction of insectiverous birds.

The commission says that it cannot agree that it would be a good thing to allow deer to be hunted with dogs, and that the use of dogs has driven the deer out of the upper part of the State.

Contracts for 100,000 trout for the State streams were awarded during the year, and the commission calls attention to the fact that when the Delaware and Raritan canal was let out of water for the winter there were taken from the streams 4,248 black bass, 5,910 white and yellow perch, 950 crappie, 335 catfish, 80 pickerel and 5,000 bait fish, showing how well the fish multiply in the upper Delaware.

The shad season is spoken of as the best enjoyed in many years, and the commission reports that 1,353 pheasants were liberated during the year, as well as 800 Hungarian pheasants.

Recommendations for legislation are that the season for bass, pickerel and perch shall commence June 15 and yellow and white perch shall be classed as game fish. Another recommendation is that licenses for pound net fishermen shall be increased, and that the licenses shall be between $100 and $200 a year.

The commission calls attention to the fact that about $10,000 can be derived in revenue from the pound net fishermen, and out of the proceeds from this license a game propogation farm can be procured which will raise game cheaper than the birds can be bought for. The purchase of this farm the commission recommends as a matter of economy. Birds for stocking can be raised there, and it is also pointed out that there is a large market for birds raised in captivity, enough to help along the stocking of the State without demands upon the people in the Legislature.

The commission also asks that the civil service law be amended so that game wardens do not come under its provisions. It is pointed out that a game warden who passes a successful examination in Essex would not be worth his salt in Ocean or another of the southern counties of the State because of lack of knowledge of the country. As one of the three highest must be selected the result may be that Ocean will be forced to take a man from Jersey City who knows nothing of Ocean and therefore is quite incapable, although he might have passed a good spelling examination before the civil service commission.

AIME DUMAZEAUD DEAD.

Elizabeth, Dec. 30.—Aime Dumazeaud, the oldest employe at the Union County Courthouse, where he had been for more than fifty years in the county clerk's office, died late Tuesday afternoon, at his home on Washington street, after an illness of only a few days.

He had been at his desk on Monday. He was seventy-four years old, a native of Lyons, France, and had lived sixty-nine years in Elizabeth. He was an old exempt fireman and was an assistant chief in the old volunteer fire department. A widow survives him.

The funeral services will take place at 2:30 p. m. Friday, at his late home. Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, will officiate. The interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

The dead clerk was one of the best informed men on county affairs in Union county and frequently was consulted by politicians.

Still Plenty of Hats

In This Big Two-Day Clean-Up

Those who came yesterday were not disappointed with the hats, trimmed and an untrimmed, that we offered them at such little prices, and the selling was lively from the early morning till late in the afternoon.

Appreciating the fact that many could not get out until tomorrow, we have provided lots equally good to those that were on sale today, so that the choosing will be just as pleasing to you and the values, if anything, greater than they were today.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

One of the subsidary questions raised by the Notts Club is a trifle more complex, and the solution appears to be open to argument. The point put was that if a ball in play was accidentally moved by the player or his caddie, and the movement ceases by the ball dropping into the hole that is being played, what is the position in match play and in a stroke competition?

The answer of the rules committee is that the penalty is one stroke in both cases, and the ball is not replaced and is considered to have been holed. It would seem that here a player gains an advantage from an accident and from an infringement of a rule. In effect the penalty stroke is not imposed at all. The ball has been holed by an accident, and not by the player using his club and his skill. It has been suggested that the justice of the case would seem to be met only by causing a replacement of the ball accidentally holed out by the imposition of the penalty stroke and by another stroke being added for the holing out of the ball.

There is the case of a ball lodging in a tree, and a wall for a decision is raised by the Bredisholm Club. St. Andrews dodges the issue with the retort that this is a matter for a local rule—a suggestion with which many golfers will agree—or, alternatively, that stroke Rule 2 should be applied, allowing a ball to be lifted under two strokes penalty. It was Mr. Balfour who, when playing with Braid and Taylor at Chatsworth, three or four years ago, framed a rule for this incident there by allowing a drop and a penalty of one stroke.

There does not seem to be a uniform practice in respect to the tree penalty, but dropping a ball behind and counting a stroke is generally regarded as fair, especially on courses where trees abound.

Elizabeth, Dec. 30.—A hurry call on the telephone Tuesday afternoon brought the Alexian Hospital ambulance to 214 Broad street, where it was reported that a man was dying. He was found lying in a doorway. When the ambulance reached the scene the surgeon in charge of it discovered the man was intoxicated. The patrol wagon was summoned and the man was removed to the police station. This morning, when arraigned in police court, he gave his name as John Crawford, aged fifty-three years. DEPLORES SCHOOL FADS tendent, county superintendent, High School inspectors, supervising principals, principals, vice-principals and the supervisors of various branches? Should not the supervision be left rather to the localities than to its being forced by statute, or by powers higher up? Would it not be more desirable if the teachers were called together, more particularly in our larger cities, and conferred with and their opinion obtained and their influence felt? If the teachers felt that there was no risk in their gathering together and presenting their views to their local boards of education, and if in the doing so they differed with their supervisors, that no harm would come to them, do you not believe that better results would be obtained? No system of education will be satisfactory which does not leave the teacher in every department and is every grade of the school free to express his or her opinion and to criticise without fear of any personal results to follow, in case the opinion expressed was not in accord with that of the higher official. The strength of the public school system is in the teacher and not in the official that is over him."

T. H. Cummings Must Go.

Much surprised and disappointment was expressed here today when it became known that Thomas H. Cummings, of Hackensack, who for the last few years has been a familiar figure in the Assembly chamber, will not be a member of the official staff of the coming house. The "judge," as Mr. Cummings is familiarly called throughout the State, has held the post of assistant supervisor of bills, but when the steering committee met yesterday Passaic county succeeded in taking the plum away from Bergen.

It was said yesterday that Assemblyman Ward was considering the name of William M. Tietz, of Rutherford, for appointment as assistant private secretary to the Speaker.

NO MORE SLANG FOR THEM!

"For goodness sake, John," said Mrs. Medbury, according to the Boston Post, "be more careful in the language you use around the house. I've been intending to speak to you about it for some time, but it got away from me."

"What's the kick?" demanded her husband, indignantly. "You don't hear me spilling any profanity or anything like that, do you?"

"No, but you will talk slang!" protested Mrs. Medbury, "and I'm getting into the habit so that I'm ashamed to talk to my friends. It's fierce. I mean, it's distressing!"

"I never noticed you talking slang," said Medbury. "Besides, everybody talks a little slang nowadays. What's the principal noise about?"

"There you go now!" said his wife, sharply. "You talk that way two-thirds of the time and I can't help falling for some of it myself—I would say, unconsciously assimilating expressions from your conversation. When any of my friends call I'm in a nervous tremor all the time for fear I'll forget myself and make some kind of horrible break. They're not used to it."

"Oh, I guess you're not so bad," protested Medbury. "They can stand for anything you hand them without straining themselves. I'd like to see any of your set that you don't shape up with on the conversational thing when you put yourself to it."

"That's the trouble," went on Mrs. Medbury, "and that's why I wish you would cut out some of your slang. Then in time I could break myself of the habit. Only this afternoon Mrs. Miggles and Mrs. Jasper were here making arrangements about the lawn party at the church next week, and wet got to talking about the servant girl problem. I told them how annoying Minnie had been and how we planned to let her go, and in my absent minded way, what do you think it was that I said?"

"I couldn't hit it in a thousand years," said Medbury. "Come across with it."

"Well, I was so embarassed afterward I could scarcely talk to them," went on his wife. "I was telling them how Minnie was growing more impertinent every day, and I said 'I think she knows that I'm fixing to put the rollers under her.'"

Medbury pounded his knee with his open palm and shrieked with laughter.

Mrs. Medbury bit her lip and frowned. "You see?" she exclaimed. "That's the way it goes, and it'll all your fault. You've simply got to talk better English around the house, because I'm sure all the women I know are beginning to get wised up on me, and the first thing I know I'll find myself getting ditched—I mean snubbed and ignored. It's really a serious thing, John, and I don't see where you get such a big laugh out of it."

"Neither do I," admitted Medbury. "I'm trying to be serious, no matter how painful. You know I ain't there with that long-faced stuff very much, but I'm really going to try to help you out. I can see where you're likely to get in wrong with these dames that aren't Joseph to your line of talk, and it isn't right. I appreciate that. I'm going to chop."

Oh, will you try, John?" exclaimed Mrs. Medbury, eagerly. "That's fine and dandy! We've simply got to frame it up some way, so we won't use so much slang. Don't you see it my way?"

"Surest thinf you know, kiddo!" exclaimed Medbury, enthusiastically. "You can count on me being there with my hair in a braid when it comes to the reform gag. Nothing but the purest wells of English undefiled for mine after this—just watch my smoke!"

"That's the real goods!" said his wife in delight. "Now I know we can put it over."

THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

"The first day in England," says an American traveler, according to Youth's Companion, "my heart jumped into my throat several times. Riding on top of a bus, the driver would always turn toward the left when we were about to pass another vehicle, and, although I knew that that was the English custom, I held on tight and got shivers anticipating a collision every time. One morning I stepped up to a policeman at King's Cross, to get my bearings, and as he was disposed to be talkative, I kept him company.

"Among other things I asked him whether there was any rule requiring pedestrians to keep to the left. No, he told me, it was only for the roadway that the rule held.

"I then asked him why it was that in England they always turned to the left, whereas in all other countries the rule was to turn to the right.

"'Oh, it's very important to keep to the left,' he said seriously. I knew it was very important to observe the rule of the road, but why turn to the left?

"'Well,' he said, 'I'll show you. Now you come here,' and he led me to the middle of the roadway. 'You see,' he continued, 'how the traffic moves along the two sides of the road?'

"Yes, I saw, and a pretty sight it was, too—a string of all sorts of conveyances coming toward us on our right, and moving away from us on the left, as far as the eye could see.

"'Well, now—and he was very impressive—'suppose you were driving along in the middle here, and another kerrige was coming the other w'y, and suppose you turned to the right, don't you see you would be getting in the w'y of all those vehicles?'

"Yes, I saw that.

"'Well, that w'y we always turn to the left.'

"I learned afterward that the 'bobby' expected a tip for all the information he had given me."

Useless Argument.

"What do you mean by coming home at this hour and in such a condition?"

"Well, Mary—y'see I staid a lil' late at the Thompsons' playing bridge."

"That's a nice story! It happens that the Thompsons have been here all the evening."

STAGS AND THEIR ANTLERS.

A stag and his antlers are almost as inseparable in the mind of the sportsman as in the mind of one to whom deer stalking is nothing but a name, says The Country Gentleman. Yet there are not only hornless varieties of the family cervidae, but not a few members of the great red deer group are found to have been denuded by Nature as well as by accident of the crowning glories of their race and sex.

Stags without horns are called Hummie stags, and they are far from being the helpless creatures one might reasonably have imagined them. They have been known to fight and to conquer heavily antlered stags of their own weight. The appendages known as antlers are so far from being universal among the cervine tribes that naturalists prefer to rely upon other characteristics in their definitions of the several families and groups. But a hornless stag is so far an exception that the system of judging the merit of the stalkers' spoil by the character of the head and the number of tines or points is certainly the best that could be devised.

Many years ago an antler with fifteen points was dug up from an Irish bog. Assuming an equal number on the antler that was missing, the mighty hart to which the horns belonged would have been a stag not of twelve or thirteen, but of thirty points. Such prizes are not, however, nowadays likely to fall into the lap of the Scottish deer stalkers, still less will they be able to send to the stuffers such magnificent examples as those which may be found in many an old German schloss.

The continental deer have always been more heavily antlered than the British, a fact which may partly be accounted for by their having access to much better feeding than they are able to procure in Scotland. But remembering that heads of eighteen and twenty points have been killed in this country, it seems quite reasonable that any head with tines in excess of the "royal" should be distinguished by a special designation.

There is some difference of opinion as to what constitutes a royal hart. Strictly speaking the head should not only possess "brow," "bay" and "tay," and three on the top, but these last three—the "sur royals," as they are called—should form cups in order to qualify the head as "royal." The more generally accepted proposition that a royal head is a head of twelve tines, is however, also the most convenient in the awarding of honors where honors are due.

Fair Play.

"Mamma," said the little boy the day after Christmas, as he lay in bed and dutifully took the paregoric and other things, "you said yesterday that I ought to be sorry for all the poor little children that couldn't have as much candy and cake and things as I got, didn't you?"

"Yes, dear."

"Well, do you suppose those poor little children are sorry for me today?"—Judge's Library.

An Irreparable Loss.

"What has happened to me?" asked the patient when he had recovered from the effects of the ether, relates the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"You were in a trolley car accident," said the nurse, "and it has been found necessary to amputate your right hand."

He sank back on the pillows sobbing aloud.

"Cheer up," said the nurse, patting him on the head, "you'll soon learn to get along all right with your left hand."

"Oh, it wasn't the loss of the hand itself that I was thinking of," sighed the victim. "But on the forefinger was a string that my wife tied around it to remind me to get something for her this morning, and now I'll never be able to remember what it was."

PSYCHE BOWS.

They're lovely.
They are dainty.
The bow is of tulle.
It is worn at the throat.
It is caught with a jeweled clasp.
This clasp usually is more or less in butterfly form.
Hence the name which indicates Psyche, or the soul.
An exquisite little affair is but a string of tiny pearls bent into butterfly form. It costs $63.

A New Danger.

"I was fined a hundred dollars and costs this morning," said the owner of the aeroplane, sadly.

"What for?" queried his friend.

"My chauffeur lost control of the machine, and it bumped into and smashed some fellow's air castle," answered the high flier.—Chicago News.

WHITE PLAGUE DEFEATS AT STATE SANATORIUM

Dr. Samuel B. English, superintendent of the Sanatorium for Tuberculosis Diseases at Glen Gardner expresses in his annual report the belief that the increased agitation on the subject of tuberculosis and the awakening of the people to the fact that permanent improvement can better be obtained in early cases, is largely responsible for the gratifying results attained at the institution during the past year. The report shows that total cures were effected in thirty per cent of the cases treated, the disease was arrested in forty-four per cent of the cases, improvement was shown in fifteen per cent and no improvement in only six per cent. The percentage of fatalities was only one.

At the close of the preceding year there were 103 inmates, of whom 53 were males and fifty females. During the year 178 males and 142 females were admitted, making a total of 320. There were 156 males discharged and 140 females, a total of 296. This left 75 males and 52 females, a total of 127, in the sanatorium at the close of the last fiscal year. During the year 867 applicants were examined for admission, of which 463 were accepted, 172 deferred and 367 rejected. Of the 320 admitted, 83 paid $5 weekly, the remainder being treated free.

Forty-two patients left the sanatorium with a residence of less than one month and are not considered in the final results. These fail to react to tuberculin tests, were homesick or unwilling to follow the prescribed rules of the institution. The average daily number for the entire year was 118.5. The average length of residence was six and a half months, an increase over the preceding year of two months. The average gain in weight per patient was fifteen pounds. The maximum male gain was forty-three and a half pounds, and the maximum female gain forty-eight and a half pounds. While 259 patients gained in weight, only twelve lost weight, the average loss being 5.5 pounds. There were 24 who neither gained nor lost.

SCOTTISH RITE MASONS HONOR "PATRON SAINT."

Scottish Rite Masons everywhere united yesterday in paying honor to the memory of Gen. Albert Pike, known as the "patron saint" of Scottish Rite Masonry, on the one hundredth anniversary of his birth. Plans for a widespread observance of the centenary were perfected at the meeting in Washington last October of the Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Masons for the Southern jurisdiction. In further commemoration of the anniversary the Supreme Council has distributed among its members 200 medals, bearing an image of the head and bust of General Pike, and with an appropriate insrription.

Though General Pike is best remembered for his services to the Masonic fraternity, these do not by any means constitute his only claim to fame. In the course of his stirring career he fought with distinction in two wars, attained National prominence as a journalist, and was known as one of the most able lawyers of his day. He also found time to write much cerditable poetry.

General Pike was a product of Masachusetts, and in his youth attended Harvard University, and subsequently taught school at Newburyport. At the age of 21 he went West and engaged in exploraing the country. In 1832 he located in Arkansas, where he taught school for a time and then engaged in newspaper work. In 1835 he was admitted to the bar. Upon the outbreak of the Mexican War he recruited a company of cavalry, which he led at the battle of Buena Vista. He returned to his extensive law practice in 1849, and in 1853 transferred his office to New Orleans, returning to Arkansas in 1857. As attorney for the Choctaw Indians, he obtained the award of nearly $3,000,000 from the United States Government.

At the beginning of the Civil War he was appointed Confederate Commissioner to negotiate treaties of alliance with the Indians. He was appointed a brigadier-general in the Confederate States army and took a leading part in the battles of Pea Ridge and Elkhorn. In 1866 he removed to Memphis, where he edited a newspaper, and two years later he went to Washington to practise law.

General Pike was grand commander of the Supreme Council of thirty-third degree Masons, and was also grand commander of the royal order of Scottish Rite Masons. He complied numerous Masonic rituals and also wrote a famous reply to Pope Leo XIII's bul against Masonry.

Women At Institute.

New Brunswick, Dec. 30.—The attendance at the Farmer's Institute yesterday numbered sixty persons, five of whom were women. The regular program was carried out. There is now on exhibition in the building a fine display of fruit and corn, the products of the college farm. The E. B. Voorhees Agricultural Club hold meetings each day to discuss ways and means of adding to the usefulness of the club.

WARDS OF THE STATE ARE COSTING MILLIONS

New Jersey this year spent $1,807,195 for the care of 10,000 inmates of its penal and charitable institutions, this sum representing a weekly per capita cost varying from $11.90 to $1.75. This is set forth in the annual reoort of George B. Wight, Commissioner of the State Department of Charities and Corrections.

The exact cost of the penal and correctional institutions of the State was $600,804, and of the charitable institutions, $1,206,390. This represents a net increase over the preceding year of $130,465, there being a decrease of $31,119 in the cost of the penal institutions and an increase of $160,574 in the cost of the charitable institutions. The total number of persons was 10,220, this being an increase of only five over the number cared for during the previous year.

Dr. Wight gives particular attention to the work of the Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glen Gardner, of which he says:

"It is doing excellent work along the line marked out for it by law, but its object continues to be largely misunderstood by the public. Constant applications are being made by indigent and friendless patients suffering from consumption, and great is their disappointment when denied admission to the institution. But it is not a hospital, and cannot be under the statute creating it. It is a sanatorium for incipient cases and for these alone. Tuberculosis is declared to be a contagious disease, and if so the public safety demands that it receive public attention. Provisions should be made speedily for the erection of hospitals for advanced cases. But who shall erect these hospitals, is the question."

The concluding paragraphs of the report are devoted to a discussion of the subject of convict labor, and Dr. Wight renews his suggestion of former years that the earnings of prison labor, after the cost of conviction and board have been deducted, be paid to the families of the prisoners if they have families or to the prisoners themselves on their release.

BURNS HIS CHRISTMAS TREE.

Five-Year-Old Sets Match to It, Imperilling Three Lives.

Anxious to see what would happen if he touched a burnining match to the beautiful Christmas tree which Santa Claus brought early on Christmas morning, Willie Williams, five years old, of Orange, placed himself and his little brother and sister in dire peril, along with their mother, who hurried frantically to their rescue.

Mrs. Williams went out in the afternoon and left the children playing in the room where the tree was. On her way home she saw the blazing tree through the window. Dropping her bundles, the mother ran screaming into the house, and was relieved to find that the children, though still in the room, were ye safe from harm. She got them out and left the work of putting out the fire to the firemen, who did it before more than $100 damage had been done. Willie said he found the match near the tree and could not resist the temptation to make a pretty blaze.

NOSE BLEEDS 20 HOURS.

Hackman Unable to Stop Flow After Being Punched.

New Brunswick, Dec. 30.—William Weingart, a hackman, almost bled to death yesterday as the result of a blow on the nose administered bgy Frank McCormick, another hackman. The men quarreled yesterday because Weingart got a fare which McCormick claimed belonged to him. Weingart was struck in the nose several times. His nose bled all night, and yesterday morning Dr. Rice, who was attending him, notified the police and McCormick was arrested and held, pending the result of Weingart's injury.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. F. M. Donohue was called in by Dr. Rice and they decided upon an operation. Weingart bled for twenty hours and is in a very weak condition.

Kuser as fourth vice president of the respective concerns.

A quarterly dividend of one and one-quarter per cent, was declared by the directors of the Public Service Corporation, payable December 31, on stock as of record at the close of business yesterday.

Tearing Down Building.

The portable building, located on the corner of Somerset street and Somerset place, which has been used as a restaurant for several years, is being torn down and will be removed. It was formerly a tin-type gallery.

PLENTY OF EGGS FOR GLEN GARDNER

Governor Fort in his message to the Legislature it is reported, will recommend an appropriations of $3,000 to the New Jersey State Tuberculosis Hospital at Glen Gardner. The money, if appropriated will be used for the establishment of a scientific egg-raising plant at the institution.

As eggs are one of the chief diets of the Glen Gardner Hospital, as well as other State institutions, Governor Fort claims that the investment will be a big money saver to the State. The idea of the Governor is to have the plant conducted by the inmates of the institution, those who are able to work.

It is also understood that a recommendation for an appropriation for the same purpose will also be made for the State reformatories at Rahway and Jamesburg.

TRAVELING IN A "KAJARAH."

The kajarah, a traveling carriage of Persia, consists of two cage-like boxes, suspended one on each side of a mule, says Youth's Companion. The interior of these boxes some times boasts a little low seat, but as a rule is innocent of any such luxury. In "Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia," Mrs. M. E. Hume-Griffith tells of these carriages and of the troublous experiences of their occupants. Two persons of about the same weight must sit one on each side, or the result is disastrous.

I remember once, she writes, being with a large caravan. In one of these kajarahs was traveling a government official and his wife. He was very tiny, she was quite the reverse, the result being that the little man was generally up in the air, while the opposite side of the kajarah was weighed down nearly to the ground.

They made all manner of experiments in their endeavor to strike the balance, gathering stones and depositing them in the lighter side, tying bags of fuel to the outside of the kajarah, but all of no avail. At last, in disgust and anger, the woman jumped out without giving her husband any warning. The result, to the onlookers, was ludicrous.

The wife refused all that day again to enter the kajarah, preferring to walk, till one of the muleteers offered her a seat on the top of one of the baggages mules. Her husband was soon balanced with stones picked up by the wayside, and traveled for the rest of the day in peace and comfort. At the end of the stage, however, his wife would not speak to him or cook his dinner for him, and the man came to one of my husband's assistants, and begged him to act as mediator. Even among Moslems there are some strong-minded women.

I have traveled many miles in one of these kajarahs, and found them very comfortables and restful, even after riding for hours. When traveling by night, I have slept for hours at a stretch in one of these kajarahs, the steady, measured walk of the mule favoring slumber. Some times, however, the monotony is broken by the mule suddenly dropping to its knees, and you find yourself deposited on the ground, shot out like an arrow from a bow.

Guilty.

On an assault and battery case tried in a Cleveland court the prosecuting witness testified at length that the defendant had knocked him senseless and had then kicked him for several minutes. "If this man's attack rendered you unconscious," demanded the magistrate, "how is it that you know he kicked you when you were down?"

This question seemed to floor the witness. He was lost in reflection for some moments; then, brightening he replied:

"I know it, Your Honor, because that's what I would have done to him if I'd got him down."

Busy Papa.

"Mamma," asked little 3-year-old Freddy, "are we going to heaven some day?"

"Yes, dear, I hope so," was the reply.

"I wish papa could go, too," continued the little fellow.

"Well, and don't you think he will?" asked his mother.

"Eh, no," replied Freddy, "he could not leave his business."—Tit-Bits.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 2, 1910.

Topic.—Through this year with God.—Num. ix, 15-23; x, 10. (A New Year's consecration meeting.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The march of the children of Israel through the wilderness from Egypt to Canaan has ever been taken as a type and symbol of the Christian's life in this world. The way to them was new, and they needed a guide, and God furnished them with one in the pillar which was cloud by day and fire by night. When and where it traveled the people of God followed; when and where it rested they rested. Back of "the pillar of fire by night and the pillar of cloud by day" was, of course, God Himself, and hence it was really He who led them. They went through that period of life with God, and so year by year we should advance under God's leading and guidance. Today we stand upon the threshold of another year, and we can have no better motto for the new year than "Through the year with God."

In the study of this incident in the journey of the Israelites we can readily see why we should go through this year and through all years with God. But, preliminary, it may be well to notice the expression "with God." The topic says that we should go with God, not God with us. We often speak of having God with us. It is far more important that we be with God. We may want to go many places where God will not go with us, but need never worry about going anywhere with God. "Where He leads me I will follow" should be our consecration. Of Enoch, one of the two translated patriarchs, it is said, "Enoch walked with God," and not "God walked with Enoch." Therefore we may well sing and pray while we sing:

Oh, for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb!

1. We should walk with God because He is a divine guide. No human being knows where the pathway of life may lead us in the year upon which we have entered. But God does. He alone is an infallible guide, and if we will but follow Him we cannot go wrong. It is true He does not place a visible pillar of cloud or fire before us, but He has given us His word, "as a lamp to our feet and a light to our path." The Bible is our chart and compass over life's sea. Therefore "search the Scriptures" and follow its commandments and you will be with God in the new year. Ask Him in prayer when in perplexity or doubt, and He will show you the true way.

Ask the Saviour to help you,
Comfort and strengthen and keep you.
He is willing to aid you;
He will carry you through.

2. We should walk with God because He is an ever present guide. Pastors, parents and human guardians cannot be with us at all times and in all places. If so, the moral and spiritual life of many young people who fall would otherwise be kept clean and pure. But God is an ever present God. When tempted and tried, listen to Him as He speaks to you through conscience. Remember that God sees you and is present to help you if you will put your trust in Him and desire Him to do so.

3. We should walk with God because without Him life will be a failure. Had Israel disobeyed the leading pillar they would never have reached Canaan. Without God we are without Christ and without any hope for the future life.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xii, 41, 42; xiv, 19-28; xxiii, 20-25; Ps. xxv, 8-10; xxxi, 1-5; cix, 1-5; Neh. ix, 19; Isa. xi, 25-31; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Luke i, 76-79; John xiv, 1-7.

C. E. International Headquarters.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor, a worldwide organization embracing 70,000 societies with nearly 4,000,000 members, after having dwelt in hired quarters for twenty-eight years has taken the first steps toward erecting a permanent home and international headquarters. A site for the new building was recently bought on Huntington avenue, Boston, within a stone's throw of the fine group of buildings erected by the Harvard Medical school and the Harvard Dental school. The international headquarters building will be constructed of Indiana limestone. It will be five stories high and, besides containing the offices of the society and the editorial rooms of the Christian Endeavor World, will have a number of offices and stores for rent. The building will thus become an income producer for the society, which has been remarkably successful in carrying on its religious work economically. The entire cost of the building, including site, will approximate $200,000. Gifts for this building have come not only from Endeavorers in the United States, but from all parts of the world. There is hardly a country on the globe where there are no Christian Endeavor societies and hardly one from which no gift has come. The other day the Endeavorers of Hawaii sent $78.50, and the messengers that brought the gift added $50 more as a personal contribution.

Genuine Spirituality.

Genuine spirituality is the deadliest foe to all forms of immorality. One cannot be spiritual and selfish, or spiritual and ill tempered, or spiritual and censorious, or spiritual and sordid. It was thus that Paul warned Christians against greed, which he linked with unchastity and boldly characterized as idolatry. Spirituality never lifts a person above the ordinary human obligations, but it infuses into these a new dignity and sacredness.

THE SINS OF FIA FYE

By ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

(Copyright, by Short Stories Co., Ltd.)

Fia Fye, whose real name was Sophia Fidelia Williams, lived with Aunt Lou and Uncle Chad in the white house with the green shutters, on Third street, in Wautuska. The reason she lived there was because Fia Fye was an orphan, which means that your papa and mamma have gone away and will never come back. But some day you will see them again—when the Angel takes you.

Aunt Lou was Uncle Chad's sister, and Uncle Chad was the best man in the whole world. He worked in the bank where the bright pennies are, and he laughed a great deal. Aunt Lou did not laugh so much—in fact, she hardly ever laughed—but she was a dear auntie.

"I am afraid," said Aunt Lou, a great many times, to Uncle Chad, "that Fia Fye is not a normal child. She is so serious, and I never heard of such a good child. She is almost uncanny."

This was before Fia Fye learned the advantages of sin.

Fia Fye was rather uncanny in some things. Her eyes were too large. People always said:

"Oh, yes, I know Fia Fye. She is that Williams child with the big eyes."

One day Aunt Lou decided that Fia Fye was old enough to go to Sunday school. Miss Grace, who lived in the brown house across the street, had been talking to Aunt Lou, and Miss Grace taught the infant class at Sunday school. She wanted Fia Fye. She loved Fia Fye—as everybody loved her—and she promised to let Fia Fye sit right next to her and hold her hand. The next Sunday Fia Fye, in her prettiest dress went to Sunday school.

Miss Grace did not teach her little girls from a leaflet or from a book. She sat in the midst of them and told them nice stories and gave them pretty cards to take home and let them ask questions. Fia Fye asked a great many, and when she came away she had learned something very important. If a little girl was a good little girl, some day the Angel would come and take her away; but if she was a bad little girl the Angel would never, never take her. To be bad was to sin and the Angel never took sinners.

Uncle Chad led the singing at Sunday school, and he always walked home with Miss Grace, except when she walked with Billy Webster, and to-day he and Miss Grace seemed to have a great many things to talk about, so Fia Fye had nothing to disturb her thoughts on the way home. It was clear she had been making a great mistake; she had been inviting the Angel to carry her off. Instead of being as good as possible it was necessary for her to be as bad as she could. She must sin.

At Miss Grace's gate Uncle Chad paused. He was clearly not half through with the interesting things he had to talk over with Miss Grace.

"Now, Fia Fye," he said, "you run across home, like a good little girl."

Fia Fye stood and looked at Uncle Chad. She did not move. Her heart beat fast with brave rebelliousness. She was shocked by her temerity, but glad to be sinning. It was a triumph over the Angel.

Miss Grace smiled. "Let her stay, Chad," she said.

"All right. You may stay," said Uncle Chad, and Fia Fye felt her sinfulness pass away. She was sorry. How could a person sin successfully if the wrong became the right so easily?

Fia Fye sat on the porch step while Uncle Chad and Miss Grace talked.

Fia Fye loved Miss Grace. Ever since she had lived with Aunt Lou, Fia Fye had found in Miss Grace a suitable companion for her years. Miss Grace did not do foolish things with dolls as the little girls did, nor did she treat Fia Fye as an odd child, as other ladies did. She answered questions and did not laugh at them, and she never hugged and kissed Fia Fye except just at the right time—when Fia Fye wanted to be hugged and kissed.

Fia Fye sat on the steps and listened as long as she could bear it. From time to time she opened her mouth to speak, but Uncle Chad and Miss Grace were chatting so eagerly that there was no opportunity for a little girl to say anything. There was nothing on Miss Grace's lap but a fan, and at length Fia Fye quietly removed the fan and started to climb upon Miss Grace's knee.

"Don't Fia Fye," Uncle Chad admonished. "Miss Grace doesn't want you on her lap."

Fia Fye set her lips firmly and edged farther on to the coveted knee.

"Let her be, Chad," Miss Grace urged. "I like to hold her. I would like to steal her away from auntie, and keep her forever and ever. Wouldn't I, Fia Fye?"

"If you wanted to steal another member of the family," said Uncle Chad, "I think you could be accommodated. I know one who leaves himself lying around quite promiscuously, just to tempt you, but you won't have him."

"If he was as good as Fia Fye," laughed Miss Grace, "I might be tempted, but he smokes, and he teases me, and he isn't as good as Fia Fye."

Uncle Chad did not seem the least bothered by this. He laughed. Fia

Fye looked from one to the other. She longed to be like Uncle Chad.

"Of course," Uncle Chad said, with his eyes still laughing, "I know I am not as good as I might be. Teasing is so natural to me."

The little girl stared at Uncle Chad with troubled eyes. Then she saw his eyes were twinkling and she sighed with relief. It was a joke, evidently. A joke was something Uncle Chad said when he wanted you to think he meant what he didn't mean.

"And I?" asked Miss Grace.

"You?" said Uncle Chad, and his eyes lost the joke look and took their "really truly" look. "I have known ever since I first met you that you were an Angel."

Like one who is stunned Fia Fye relaxed her grasp of Miss Grace's hand. She slid slowly from her lap and stood a moment gazing at Miss Grace with horror, trembling; and then, before Uncle Chad or Miss Grace realized it, Fia Fye had flown at the smiling girl and was tearing and pulling the light, fluffy dress, and scratching the white wrists and hands that vainly tried to hold her off.

It did not last a minute. Uncle Chad grasped the frantic little figure in his strong arms and bore her across the street. When he set her in a chair before Aunt Lou she was sobbing, but her eyes were quite dry. She clung to Uncle Chad's coat when he tried to go. He told Aunt Lou quickly and forcibly of Fia Fye's strange fit of temper.

They agreed that Fia Fye must be ill—she never acted so—and Uncle Chad was told to fetch the doctor. Neither of them said she was a bad girl, and she glared sullenly at them.

Fia Fye waited until she heard Aunt Lou moving the dishes in the dining room and then slid quietly from the chair and climbed the front stairs and glided along the upper hall until she came to the door of Uncle Chad's own room. On the dresser stood an oblong box of cedar wood, around one end of which was a green paper band.

Now she raised the lid of the box and listened. Aunt Lou was still getting tea, for the sound of dishes came up the back stairs. Fia Fye took from the box a long, black cigar. It seemed enormously large and she tried to find a smaller one, but they were all of a size. She bit off the end of the cigar, as she had seen Uncle Chad bite them, and lighted the other end.

It was very, very nasty. Nothing, she felt sure, could ever induce men to make a practice of smoking, except the fear of the Angel.

Fia Fye was a very sick little girl for a while, but when the doctor came he only laughed his big, shaggy laugh.

"Eaten something that did not agree with her," he said. "She will be herself in the morning."

Aunt Lou, however, sat in Fia Fye's room that evening and, Fia Fye, after a long thought, in which she considered whether she would have to smoke a cigar every day, turned to Aunt Lou.

"I'm bad," she said; "I'm a bad, bad girl," she said pleadingly.

"No, Fia Fye," she said, kindly. "You are a good little girl, and you always will be."

Fia Fye turned on her face and wept. Aunt Lou's verdict plainly plainly meant a cigar every day. The way of the transgressor is hard. And Fia Fye fell asleep.

When she awakened—it seemed as if she had slept for days, but it was only 15 minutes later—Aunt Lou had gone, and Uncle Chad stood beside the bed, and Fia Fye smiled and held out her hand. They were fellow sinners."

"Miss Grace has come over to see how you are getting on, Fia Fye," he explained. The little figure in the bed sat up very suddenly and with one glance at Miss Grace sprang out upon the floor and clung to Uncle Chad's leg.

"Take her away! Don't let her get me!" she cried. "Take her away."

Uncle Chad gathered Fia Fye into his strong arms and held her close.

"She won't take you, girl, if you don't want her to."

Fia Fye hung tightly around Uncle Chad's neck, pressing her face into his shoulder.

"She will! She will!" she moaned.

"No, I won't," Miss Grace declared positively. "I promise never to take you until you want me to. Never!"

"And won't you never stand by my bed at night?" asked Fia Fye, her face still hidden.

"No, never."

"Not even if I'm good?"

"Not even if you are good."

Fia Fye raised her head a little.

"Are you going to take Uncle Chad away?" she asked.

Miss Grace looked across at Uncle Chad and smiled.

"I wouldn't take your Uncle Chad under any circumstances whatever," she said.

"Oh! I say," exclaimed Uncle Chad. But Fia Fye did not allow him to say more.

"Are you going to take Aunt Lou?" she inquired anxiously.

"No; not even Aunt Lou," said Miss Grace.

Fia Fye raised her head quite off of Uncle Chad's shoulder and looked at Miss Grace with amazement.

"Who are you going to take" she asked.

"Nobody," Miss Grace declared.

"Not even Billy Webster?" asked Uncle Chad.

"No," said Miss Grace, softly, "not even Billy Webster."

"Never?" asked Uncle Chad.

"Never," said Miss Grace.

Fia Fye studied Miss Grace's face, and she was quite satisfied with what she saw there. So was Uncle Chad.

"Well," said Fia Fye scornfully, "I guess you ain't much of an Angel. You can rock me to sleep now."

SARATOGA IN 1790.

Now that the ancient glories of Saratoga are to be revived, a description of the famous spa by a visitor of 119 years ago is interesting, says Harper's Weekly. The visitor was Elkanah Watson, of Massachusetts, a man of repute in his day, whose memoirs, including his journals of travels in Europe and America from the year 1777 to 1842, and his correspondence with public men and reminiscences and incidents of the American Revolution, were published by his son in 1856.

Watson visited Saratoga in 1790, and writes thus about the place: "The succeeding September I made a tour to the mineral springs at Saratoga. Here I spent a day bathing in a trough and drinking the exhilarating water which gushes from the centre of a rock. I met with about a dozen respectable people sojourning at a wretched tavern. The wildness of the region and the excessively bad accommodations made me recur to the condition of Bath in the barbarous ages, when, several centuries before Christ, as the legend says, the springs were discovered by their salutary effect upon a herd of distempered swine wallowing in the mud.

"The Saratoga waters were discovered about twenty years ago, I was informed, by Mr. Ball, of Ballston, in following a deer track; but it is supposed their existence was known to the Indians. The remarkable medicinal qualities of these springs and their accessible position must render this spot at some future period the bath of America. At present it is enveloped in rudeness and seclusion, with no accommodations appropriate to civilized man. The rock through which the water issues by a narrow passage has been probably formed by petrification. Vessels are let down through this fissure or natural well to procure the water for drinking.

"There is no convenience for bathing except an open log hut, with a large trough similar to those in use for feeding swine, which receives water from a spring. Into this you roll from a bench. This water appears to be strongly impregnated with saline ingredients highly charged with fixed air, and is almost as animated as champagne wine. Its taste is grateful, but it leaves an unpleasant impression upon the palate. Those accustomed to it, however, regard it as a great luxury. It is in high estimation as a specific in all scorbutic affections, gout, rheumatism, etc. These springs are situated in a marsh partly encompassed by slight and pretty eminences, along the margin of which the road winds. A little off from the highway I visited a new spring, which is much more highly charged with mineral elements. This is called the Congress Spring.

"From Saratoga I proceeded to Tryon's, a low, one-story tavern on a hill in Ballston. At the foot of this hill I found an old barrel with the staves open, struck into the mud in the midst of a quagmire surrounded with trees, stumps and logs. This was the Ballston Spring. I observed two or three ladies walking along a fallen tree so as to reach the fountain, and I was disgusted at seeing as many men washing their loathsome sores near the barrel. There was also a shower bath, with no protection except a bower of bushes. Tryon's was the only public house, no buildings having been erected below the hill. The greatest number of visitors at one period the past summer was ten or twelve, and these were as many as could be accommodated.

Arraigned before Judge Joline in Camden, Philip McDonald, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery on James F. Carlin, sixty years old, who afterward died, was ordered to pay a fine of $100 and costs. He had been in jail since November 30.

In the absence of the clerk, a sneak thief entered Wilson's coal office, at Second and Chestnut streets, Camden, Tuesday, and carried away a bag containing about $40 from the safe. The clerk gave the police a description of a colored man he saw hurry from the building.

The Finance Committee of the Passaic County Board of Freeholders met Tuesday afternoon and completed the work of auditing the accounts of the county. A report was made at the meeting yesterday afternoon that the records are all in first class order and that there is a small balance of $2,000 in the treasury.

Anxious to reach her home Tuesday afternoon, Miss Blanche Bender, of Wenonah, attempted to cross a partly frozen snowbank, and broke through into the snow over her head. George Greenig, passing a few moments later, saw a pair of hands above the snowbank and dug out the young woman.

Alfred Thomas and Howard Frisby, of Vineland, are in jail on the charge of stealing a rooster from Mrs. Mary Allen, a widow, who bought it for Christmas. Miss Allen, a daughter, followed the negroes over fences into the town. She will claim the $100 reward offered by the Poultry Association.

An early morning fire at 30 Steuben street, Jersey City Tuesday, drove four families into the snow-covered street, each person scantily clad. Neighbors provided shelter for them. The blaze was discovered by Policeman John Dundon. It started from an overheated stove in the rear room of a saloon, above which were flats, and practically wiped out the place.

A score of men have dug a passageway through the snow from Swedesboro to Centre Square, to allow Undertaker Hannold to reach the body of Mrs. McGlincy, who died on Sunday. Mr. Hannold made several attempts to get there after being notified, but failed, and the men have been working night and day. The undertaker reached the farm Tuesday afternoon.

Judge Speer and a jury in the Circuit Court, Jersey City, Tuesday, heard testimony in a suit for $3,000 instituted by Della Blake, of the Bronx, against Hanna A. Howley, administratrix of the estate of Thomas Brawders, who died last April. Miss Blake, at her home, had nursed Mr. Brawders for almost a year with the understanding that she was to be remembered for her faithfulness in his will, but the will showed no bequest to her.

There was an exciting scrimmage at Kaighn's Point, Camden, Tuesday night when three girls, shirtwaist strikers of Philadelphia, attacked Fedora Bishop because she had taken a job in a place on Chestnut street, where the strikers had been employed. After a crowd of at least a thousand persons had gathered about the combatants, the three girls were arrested and locked up in the city jail. They gave the names of Ida Livivitz, Nellie Fisherman and Mamie Schlernick, all of Philadelphia.

Cries of "Police, police!" and the rattle of a patrol wagon with the First Precinct reserves in front of 120 Fremont street, Jersey City, startled that usually quiet neighborhood at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning. But Michael Fallon, putting his revolver in his pocket, came out and explained that it was all a mistake. Hearing suppressed voices and footsteps in his hallway, Fallon had thought burglars were there and had made the outcry before he learned that his neice had brought her sweetheart in out of the cold. A policeman hearing the outcry called the reserves.

Crossing the continent to claim his bride, Hyman Rodinsky, of Denver, Col., arrived at the home of Miss Louisa S. Brown, at Franklinville, about the same time the blizzard did. Preparations for an elaborate wedding were made, but owing to the storm the minister failed to arrive. The principals braved the elements, and started out afoot for Clayton, three miles. The roads were so banked that in many places they were compelled to take to the fields, but Miss Brown knows every foot of the ground. They were married at the Clayton Presbyterian manse by Rev. W. F. S. Nelson.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"The Call," Joseph Byron Totten's drama of Mexican life, will be presented by L. S. Sire tonight at the Plainfield theatre. The scenes are laid in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains in Mexico. The story tells of the love of a beautiful half-breed Spanish girl for a young American whom she had met a year before in a small Mexican town and of the hatred of one Don Pedro de Scavillo, leader of a band of bandits whose retreat is in the foothills at Devil's Pass. How the young American is captured with his sweetheart and held for a ransom of 50,000 pesos, and how the bandit discovers the sweetheart is the sister of this beautiful Spanish girl, and how he vows vengeance on the American only to lose his own life as does the Spanish girl all for the love of the American. The production is elaborately staged and the cast unusual.

"The Climax," a play in three acts by Edward Locke, with music by Joseph Carl Breil, will be seen here at the Plainfield theatre, December 3. "The Climax" comes as a final argument to the much discussed question, "should the stage instruct as well as entertain." Joseph Weber, who stands sponsor for the delightful little play during the run at his own theatre in New York, was constantly in receipt of applications from college professors and clergymen requesting that some arrangement be made by which their followers could use the play.

the ante bellum days in Dixie, mark every scene and climax in "St. Elmo," the attraction at the Plainfield theatre, matinee and night, January 1. The play is a dramatization by Willard Holcomb of Augusta J. Evans Wilson's celebrated novel. The title role of "St. Elmo" is being played by Robert Lowe, who is ably assisted by Miss Beatrice Worth as the heroine, Edna Earl. The production and staging is under the direction of the well known Vaughan Glaser, and is one of the most elaborate dramatic offerings of the year.

HOSIERY.

There was a time when women were satisfied to save the finest pair of black stockings and to stow away for best use the daintiest of shoes, but nowadays the question of hosiery agitates women as much as coat suits and evening hats.

The woman who has plenty of money buys silk stockings to match her gown and even indulges in designs embroidered over the instep. She cannot originate or transfer a design correctly, therefore she has a pattern stamped on the stockings by a competent person.

For the bride who is to be married in white there could be no more acceptable gift than white silk stockings. These may be plain, embroidered or enriched by inserts of a good quality of lace.

NEW YEAR'S SPORTS AT LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

An elaborate program of indoor sports will be on tap at the Y. M. C. A. on New Year's day, the stellar event of which will be a basketball contest between the local Y. M. C. A. and Williamsbridge. The preliminary game will be between the Y. M. C. A. "second" team and the North Plainfield High School. The Williamsbridge goal shooters are a crackerjack aggregation but Manager Listman is anticipating a victory. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

At 1:30 o'clock six Sunday-school Athletic League teams will begin operations. The games scheduled are First Presbyterian vs. First Baptist, Trinity vs. Hope, and Crescent Avenue vs. Scotch Plains.

In the morning there will be an examination of boys' classes in gymnastics to which the parents and friends are invited. At 10 o'clock the Y. M. C. A. Junior basketball five will play Hope chapel. This contest will be followed by a game between the Junior Midgets and Hope Chapel Midgets.

DRAFTING THE LAW INQUEST REQUESTED

The committee appointed at a meeting of the Union County Bar Association Monday to consider the recommendation of the October Grand Jury that police justices be lawyers and be given a jurisdiction of wider scope, in order that the attention of the jury might not be taken up with petty cases of assault and battery sort, is preparing a specimen bill which it will submit to the next meeting of the association for consideration. The members of the committee are making a thorough study of all the statutes that have any bearing on the situation, and of a similar bill that was introduced in the Legislature from Passaic county two years ago.

The section of the bill which will be given the most serious attention is that providing for the manner in which police magistrates, invested with greater power by virtue of the bill, shall be elected or appointed. The methods of filling such offices in the larger cities are varied and the committee has been unable as yet to come to a decision on this point.

In discussing the situation this morning, a member of the committee said: "This movement does not emanate from the Union County Bar Association, but from the recommendation of the Grand Jury. As a rule, the public is prejudiced against anything which lawyers go on record as favoring. They say, 'The lawyers are so strong for this or that, there must be something in it for them. Where do we come in?'

In this particular instance, the putting of a lawyer in an office is involved, so I can see where we will come in for plenty of adverse criticism. That's the reason I want it made clear that the change which would be recommended in a bill is the wish of the Grand Jurors—laymen—and is not something which has its origin with the bar.

"It's ridiculous to have the attention of the Grand Jury taken up with cases of little or no importance when they could be disposed of by a police magistrate just as well. And it's only right that a police magistrate should be a man capable of charging a jury and while there are some who can, the vast majority cannot do it."

RECTOR LEADS GRAND MARCH.

Heads the Dancers at Annual Parish Event.

Westfield, Dec. 30.—The third annual masquerade party of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Sunday school was held Tuesday evening in the Westfield Casino. Nearly 200 were present and the costumes were beautiful and funny. Dancing continued until early this morning.

The grand march took place at 10 o'clock and was led by the Rev. Sydney Cross, rector, and Miss Jessie Richardson.

Held For Union County Police.

After a formal complaint had been made by James L. Headley, of Union township, that James Gormley, alias Bob Harrison, held at the First Precinct station, had stolen a horse and buggy from him, the judge ordered that Gormley be turned over to the Union county authorities. Gormley had formerly worked for Headley. He lives at 77 Bell street, West Orange.

Emery Signs With Reading.

James Emery, who covered third base for the Plainfield Baseball Club last year, has signed with the Reading Tri-State League club, the contract having been prolmulgated by President Jacob L. Weitzel, of the Reading Club. He will report at Reading in the spring for a tryout. His friends do not think there is any doubt but that he will make good.

Monroe Avenue Church Services.

Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will preach a New Year's sermon at the church Sunday morning. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the Sunday-school exercises will be held and in the evening Rev. E. B. Gearhart, of Newark, a representative of the Anti-Saloon League, will speak.

GOVERNOR'S LUNCHEON WILL BE A NOTABLE ONE

Union County Assemblymen yesterday received invitations to be the luncheon guests of Governor Fort at Lakewood a week from tomorrow, and, needless to say, all three are planning to journey to Lakewood.

Governor Fort stated some time ago in announcing his plan for a luncheon at Lakewood that instead of limiting invitations for that annual function of State to the members of the Senate, he proposed to invite all the members of the incoming Legislature and the heads of State departments without regard to political affiliations or personal views. He recalled that last winter and two years ago he had entertained the Senators at Lakewood, and followed that with a luncheon, having the Assemblymen as the principal guests during the session at Trenton. He decided this year to invite the whole Legislature to partake of his hospitality at the Laurel House, the famous hotel which he annually visits for some time during the height of the Lakewood season.

In social functions like that to be given next week, the Governor has eschewed politics. He has been annoyed and a little amused by the weird stories that have been woven about the invitations for this year's social session of the Legislature. He has met most of the members of the incoming Legislature, but has had no opportunity to talk with them informally. He proposes to give himself that opportunity next week, and is hoping that there will be no jarring note to mar the luncheon, because attempts have been made in public print to magnify political or partisan differences into personal feeling.

MISS JULIA D. LEMATTY G. H. LEIVERS' BRIDE.

Miss Julia D. LeMatty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John LeMatty, of West Fifth street, and George Howard Leivers, of Philadelphia, were married at 5 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a small company of relatives and friends.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Grace LeMatty, as bridesmaid, while Harry Leivers, brother of the groom, was the best man. After the ceremony, congratulations were offered and supper served. After spending a short time in Pennsylvania, the couple will reside here. The groom is employed at the Hall Signal Company works at Garwood.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The basketball team suffered defeat at the hands of the High School of Commerce, of New York, yesterday by a score of 46 to 24. The game showed conclusively that the local team was short of practice. Last year the locals smothered the visitors from New York, and perhaps held them too cheaply. Doane played the star game for P. H. S.

The juniors and part of the sophomore class enjoyed a sleighride to Westfield last night. It was delightful going but cold coming back.

The class of '08 will hold a dance at the Fanwood fire house tonight. A large attendance is expected and a good time is assured.

A Horse That Laughs.

"The Laughing Horse," a big representative of the Laugh Trust, at Proctor's this week, is the funniest burlesque on a circus ever seen and is a distinct novelty here and is sure to make a big hit. Will C. Cowper & Co. present their great western sketch, "The Frontiersman." Its a playlet that will hold ones interest from the start. Sprague & Dixon in a "Mile of Laughs," live up to that reputation for long distance laughs. The Alpha Comedy Four are a colored quartet of entertainers, that are hard to beat in catchy clever songs and dances. The films d'art tour the world each day.

Feast of Circumcision.

January first being the Festival of the Circumcision of Christ, the service on that day at Grace Episcopal church will be morning prayer and a celebration of the Holy Communion at 10 o'clock in the morning. For the remainder of the day the church and parish house will be closed.

—Neuman Bros. call the attention of their many patrons to New Year specialities, including fancy Indian river oranges and grape fruit, Tangerine oranges, fancy table apples and pears, pineapples, English hothouse grapes, Malaga grapes; pull and layer raisins, nuts of all kinds and crystallized fruits.

WILBUR FISK STARTS BRAIN CLEARING HOUSE

The "New Thoughters" have established a trust. They have gathered in one fold the heads of the various schools of philosophy, psychology, metaphysics and "progressive thought" in New York city, and the prospects are there soon may be a corner in transcendental ideas.

All the "isms" will be coralled, all the "centers of thought" will be connected and disciples of truth will receive inspiration from a single source. This new trust, it is said, is under the guidance of Wilbur C. Fisk, of Harvey Fisk & Sons, bankers, who is a "New Thoughter," and is interested keenly in bringing the various movements of progressive thought together.

He has financed the new trust, and has guaranteed the payment of the rent of the headquarters at 142 West 80th street, New York.

"The Philalethian Society" is the name of the new organization. The title is derived from two Greek words, meaning "lovers of truth." The promoters of the new society call it "the clearing house of ideas," for here will be exchanged theories on reincarnation, telepathy, spirit dances, divine metaphysics, music as an aid to spiritual growth, the catagorical imperative, musical theapeutics, theosophy, Zoroasterism, Buddhism and Confusianism and various phases of the so-called "New Thought" which originated in the days of the first philosophers.

Hither will come "lovers of truth," as Plato and others gathered about Socrates. The promoters aim to make the new society the great forum of "New Thought," and they expect to discuss so many and varied ideas that the novitiate who enters the hall may expect to come away with his mind throbbing from the effects of a spiritual cocktail.

But there is where the trust ideas come in. The aim of the "Advanced New Thoughters" who are behind the present movement is to have a free discussion of differences of philosophies, there by reaching the points on which all agree. The leaders in the new society perhaps expect to reach a common ground of agreement, and thus gradually emphasize the points of agreement, harmonizing the various schools and circles, and gradually welding them together into a compact organization. Perhaps Socrates and Mrs. Annie Besant will be made to agree, and Dowie and Plato may be reconciled as teachers of the same truth. Anyhow, a trust is a trust, and it has made strange bedfellows before this.

Fisk has been a "New Thoughter" for several years, receiving instructions from Dr. Charles B. Patterson. He is a keen financier, and is said to have as clear and far-reaching ideas in philosophy as he has in finance. Several other millionaries who have gained success in the business world are interested in the project. Among them is Richard Ingalese, California gold mining promoter, who spends part of his days within the earth, and the other part above it. He originated the clearing house idea, and suggested it to Fisk. Both Mrs. Ingalese and Mrs. Fisk are keenly interested in the movement. It is expected, when the first meeting is held on next Tuesday evening, Vedantists, Theosophists, Psychologists, Hetaphysicians, Sunrisers, Spiritualists, followers of Confucius and Plato may be expected to be present and sanction the utopia of "advanced thought."

New Factory at Lincoln.

The Bongartz Company, of New York, manufacturers of automobile accessories, have purchased at Lincoln a plot of ground containing 100,000 square feet upon which they will erect a plant, costing $10,000 for the manufacture of specialties. This makes the second manufacturing company to locate in Lincoln this year. The American Cement Tile Manufacturing Company completed their main building and began operations December 1.

Red Men to Hold Dance.

The annual ball of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, will be held Friday night, February 4, at Saengerbund Hall. The committee in charge comprises the following: Charles H. Halliwell, chairman; Charles Holstein, secretary and treasurer; Peter Sheridan, John W. Ludgate, George I. Forgesen, Walter Wilson, Charles Meyers, George Ivans, Frank Schropfer and Jeremiah Griffen.

Had Sleighride and Dance.

Miss Mabel Hamilton, of Verdon street, North Plainfield, entertained a party of thirty young folks on a sleigh ride last night going to Westfield and return in one of Frank Mobus' big sleighs. On the return the party repaired to Debele Hall and danced until an early hour this morning to music furnished by J. A. Denney and B. A. Paroubeck. Refreshments were served at midnight.

John Coyle Receives Tapestry.

John Coyle, of West Front street, has received the handsome piece of tapestry, which was made by the Sisters at the College of Mt. St. Mary and which has been in possession of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus. The tapestry, representing a woman, is 3x6 feet and is a work of art, and greatly admired.

ZERO WEATHER HERE; COAL DEALERS BUSY

Sergeant John Neagle, the weather prophet, forecasts for today, fair weather with continued cold tonight; Friday, fair and not quite so cold; moderate west to south winds. According to the official announcement the minimum temperature this morning was two degrees above zero and the maximum was 27 degrees.

Reports have been received from various parts of the city that thermomemeters registered as low as two, three and four degrees below zero at an early hour this morning. These are unofficial figures. It was reported as the coldest morning of the winter season and the majority of the householders found it exceedingly difficult in keeping warm during the night. The coal barons smiled with glee over the low temperature as they pictured their rapidly-disappearing coal piles.

Some of the coal dealers found it difficult to make prompt deliveries today, owing to a scarcity of horses. It is easy to get help, but the means of transportation are limited.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

There will be communion and reception of members Sunday morning at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The Christmas entertainment will be held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church on Tuesday night, when the Sunday school will give a cantata.

The Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The members are requested to bring sewing materials.

The Christmas entertainments at Warren chapel was at 3 o'clock this afternoon for the primary department and at 8 o'clock in the evening one will be held for the main school.

The missionary prayer meeting was held at Warren chapel, last night at 8 o'clock, when the pastor, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, spoke on the life of William Duncan, missionary to Alaska.

Watch-night services will be held at the West End Tabernacle tomorrow night, when addresses will be made by Philip A. Vroom, J. H. Manning and William DeMeriti. The service at the tabernacle Sunday night will be conducted by Hughes Fawcett.

The Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church held its Christmas entertainment this afternoon when there was a party for the children of the primary department. At 8 o'clock tonight an entertainment will be given for the older members of the school.

New Year's Reception.

Following his usual custom, the Reverend E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, will be at home to his friends and members of the congregation on New Year's day, Saturday next, between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock.

A. M. Vanderbek, of Verdon street, has been detained at home for several days with a painful attack of lumbago.

Mrs. William J. Ford, of 222 East Fourth street, who has been detained at the hospital for the past week suffering from an affliction of the eyes, is gradually improving.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE days that followed the return of Mallory and the O'Brien family to Maple Grove were days of worry and anxiety for all. The outlook was not precisely calculated to induce jubilation. As the result of the sudden break with Mallory's partner hard times were at the very door and hovered depressingly over the household. Crawford had lost no time in calling for a settlement of his loan and a dissolution of partnership. Mallory did not have and could not raise the wherewithal to meet the demand, and the foreclosure of the mortgage was the impending consequence.

The trainer was well aware that the summary sale at auction of the horses and training quarters which Crawford would insist upon regardless of loss to himself was not likely to net more than one-third of their value and that he would be left penniless to all intents and purposes. His association with Crawford, therefore, instead of bringing the substantial advantage he had anticipated and which its continuance would have insured, for the business was beginning to prosper, had left him in a worse position than he was in before. He could not even conclude the sale of Lady Belle, for Crawford's first move had been to obtain an injunction restraining him from disposing of any of the stable property.

All the work of his life had gone for naught. All his years of waiting for Patsy in the hope of being able to win for her a position of comfort and dignity had been spent in vain. He had simply cheated himself and her of the happiness that might have been theirs during that time. He ground his teeth with impotent rage at the thought of it. Nothing remained for him but to wrest what bliss he could from the years that remained by marrying Patsy at once and to begin all over again the struggle for a living by hunting for a job. To renew, handicapped as he was, the pursuit of fortune which had eluded him like a will-o'-the-wisp was not to be thought of, at least not then. Never for a minute, however, did he regret his treatment of Crawford. With the certainty of even worse befalling him he would have done the same thing in the same circumstances.

Patsy was for waiting a while longer and returning to the stage in the meantime, but this proposition he refused absolutely to consider.

"You've sacrificed yourself enough for me an' your family, girl," he said. "an' I'll stand for it no longer. Your father 'll get a place somewhere. He knows his business an' ain't afraid to work, an' we'll help 'em if we can."

Mallory had hopes that through McGovern or some of the big men with whom he had come in contact since starting in business for himself he would be able to procure an executive position in one of the more important racing establishments, and he purposed in this event to take care of O'Brien.

The O'Briens themselves viewed the prospect anything but hopefully. It was a very serious matter indeed for the old couple to be deprived of the money which Patsy for so long, and recently both Nora and Patsy, had supplied. They had been able to save a little, it was true, and the careful Patsy also had managed to put some by, but their combined resources would not last long. The house in which they lived with Mallory was a very comfortable one. They had become much attached to the place and to the beauties of its surroundings. The thought that it was to be sold over their heads increased the heaviness of their hearts, already filled with grief at the misfortune which had overtaken Mallory, the real cause of which had been kept from O'Brien, who had been given to understand that the dispute with Crawford had arisen over business matters.

Their worry was added to not a little by Nora. She had strenuously rebelled against returning with them, and to overcome her resistance her mother had had to threaten to disclose to her father the girl's dealings with Crawford. Brought home against her will, she was sullen, irritable and quarrelsome and thought only of how she could throw off the restraint placed upon her and get back to New York and the theater.

Aside from Mallory, who was sustained in his trouble by the consciousness of the nearness of his marriage and by the encouragement of his bride to be, the only person who preserved any semblance of cheerfulness was Patsy. She was to become Mrs. Mallory immediately the work of winding up the stable business had been concluded, and the mere fact that she was with him and her other loved ones every day made her happy. She could not be downcast and refused to believe that everything would not come out right in the end. To her love made all things easy, and its glamour was upon everything.

She and Mallory had decided that when the time to leave Maple Grove arrived they would be married without fuss of any kind and take up their abode temporarily in the flat owned jointly by Patsy and Nora in New York, where he would be in personal touch with the men who could employ him. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were to remove their belongings to a little house in the village of Maple Grove, where they were to reside with Nora until further notice.

It was about a week after their return home and while all were under the influence of that feverish restlessness which accompanies the sudden sense of nonproprietorship of a place that one has regarded as one's own and of the imminence of departure that the household was surprised one afternoon by a visit from the Duke.

Mrs. O'Brien was alone in the kitchen when, transformed as Patsy had seen him, he drove up in the village hack and alighted.

"Hiv'n help us, who's this?" she muttered, taking stock of him for a moment through the window and then hastily dusting the chairs with her apron. "Must be some wan come to buy the stable."

The Duke knocked and walked in without waiting for her to open the door.

"Don'tcher know me, Mrs. O'Brien?" he questioned, his face beaming.

There was no mistaking his voice and his accent.

"Bless the choild, 'tis the Dook. Well, Oi declare!" she exclaimed, beaming in turn. "Oi thought sure yez was the prisident or the Prince av Wales, yez looks so smart."

"Me togs ain't so dusty, are they?" he said. "Bought 'em in London. 'Ad 'em myde to measure in a swagger shop in 'Igh 'Olborn. Twig the gyvry tie pin!"

"Ye're rale beautiful," she declared. "an' clane enough to eat. Oi niver seen yez look so clane."

"I've wallered in a mariner's gryve, otherwise a barth, every d'y since I went away," he told her proudly.

"A bath every day! Ye're too hoigh toned for Maple Grove. But don't stand twistin' yir hat in yir hand; sit down an' tell us where you've been an' phwat's happened to yez."

She sat down herself and prepared to listen to his story, but just at that minute Patsy and Nora, who had seen the hack approaching and wanted to know who the caller was and what he wanted, came downstairs.

Patsy was glad to see the Duke again. Her gratitude for his kindness to her in her trouble and for his discretion in refraining from asking questions had not diminished. She advanced, with a smile and a cheery greeting, and shook hands with him cordially. Timidly and blushing deeply, he extended his hand to Nora. The girl, who had been eying him with wonder, gave him her own limply.

"Ain't it fine for you all to be 'ere," he said. "It feels like comin' 'ome. You was all so awful kind to me that I just 'ad to come down an' see you as soon as I could."

"'Tis wilcome ye are, an' Oi'm glad to see yez," the old woman assured him. "Yez have come a long way, an' must stay to have a bite with us."

"Thank you, mum. I'd like to st'y altogether if me old plyce's goin'," he said.

"It isn't, me poor bhoy, an' yez have had yir journey for nothin'," she replied sadly. "Mister Mallory 'd give it to yez if he could, Oi'm sure, but he can't. The stabie's goin' to be sold, an' we'll be lookin' for jobs oursilves, so ye'd better take the first train back. Oi wisht ye'd 'a' written; 'twould have saved yez the expinse."

"The styb'e's for syle? Wot for?" asked the surprised Duke. "Don't it p'y?"

"It ain't that, an' Oi can't give yez the partic'lars, seein' they don't concern yez. The partnership's broken, that's all."

"Bli' me tight! 'Oo'd 'a' thought it!" he ejaculated. "How about the Shrimp; 'as 'e gone?"

"Yes; he's already gone."

"Too bad. I'd like to 'a' seen him."

Pressed by Mrs. O'Brien, the Duke explained the reason of his summons by telegraph and recounted the story of his trip to England. She already knew as much of his family history as he had told to Nora.

"Me uncle, mother's brother, 'oo we caime to America to look for, wusn't 'ere at all," he said. "He'd gone to Austrylia, where 'e myde a fortune. 'E pegged aout larst year an', not 'aving any other relations alive, left £50,000 to mother an' me. 'Is lawyer faound aout where mother was—an' there you are. Mother's still on the other side, but I caime back. I got 'omesick. No one ain't been kind to me like you 'ave. An' I wanted to arsk Mr. Mallory's adwice, 'cause I know 'e'd adwise me stryght. I'd like to invest some of me $150,000, an' I don't know nothin' 'ceptin' 'orses. D'you think 'e'd tyke me into business with 'im instead of breakin up the styble? I'd like the chanst if it don't cost too much, an' mother'd be satisfied, I'm sure. She's worryin' abaout what I'll do with me money."

He added, feeling apologetic at daring to place himself on anything like a level with his former employer, who he held in great respect:

"You see, if I'm in the business with Mr. Mallory 'e might put me in the w'y of becomin' a jockey. I'm goin' to be a gryte jockey one of these d'ys."

He ventured to look at Nora, whom this announcement was intended to impress. She had listened to his story at first with disdainful indifference, but as it proceeded her interest grew until it became very deep. She began to see all kinds of qualities in the Duke which, strangely enough, had not been visible to her before. For the first time it struck her that he was good looking, and when at last he overcame his bashfulness sufficiently to glance in her direction she was smiling at him amiably, and her gaze meeting his set the blood pulsing wildly through his veins and his heart to beating violently.

When Mallory and O'Brien came in from the stables a little later the former had already been made acquainted by Patsy with the Duke's story and desires. That evening there was a lengthy conference between the trainer and the ex-stable boy, who remained for the night as the guest of the family. The next day both started for New York, and the Duke knew as much about the financial conditions and possibilities of the stable as Mallory did himself.

About the most amazed man in New York was Richard Crawford when his loan and Nora's debt were repaid and his partnership interest in the training stable as determined by the dissolution proceedings duly settled. He was further balked of his revenge by the fact that neither Patsy nor Nora sought another engagement on the stage. Nora had become suddenly reconciled to staying at home and, to the delight of her parents, had recovered her vivacity—likewise her ingenuousness. The one person she was disagreeable with was the Shrimp, who had returned to Maple Grove in the capacity of head stable boy.

Mallory was helped not a little in the reorganization of his affairs by the fact that Mr. Perkins—no one save Mrs. O'Brien continued to call him the Duke, and he liked to be so designated by her—had insisted, against Mallory's advice, on buying Lady Belle for himself at the price offered for her by McGovern. The purchase was made for sentimental reasons that Mallory could know nothing about, but the retention of the mare proved a big thing for the stable subsequently. In fact, Dan's new partner developed an enterprise and ability that lifted the business upon a plane where Mallory admitted in his heart of hearts that he unaided in this manner never could have placed it.

Mr. Perkins was very fond of Lady Belle, but he no longer needed her as a confidante. He was bent on murmuring his soul's secret into other ears when the proper time and opportunity should come, and he had every reason to hope that it would not be unfavorably received.

[THE END.]

DAINTY HANDKERCHIEFS NEEDLE-WOMEN MAY MAKE.

There is a variety of ways in which dainty handkerchiefs can be made at home. Those with quarter-inch hemstitched hems with a line or two of drawn work border above it appeal to the woman who prefers this kind of stitchery to plain embroidery.

Books can be had giving full directions for different drawn work stitches. If one happens to own some of the handkerchiefs worked by the Mexicans the designs can be easily copied by anyone who is accustomed to such fancy work.

Another simple and easily made handkerchief of good style has a tiny embroidered scallop as shallow and delicate as possible. Run the scallop with darning cotton on both edges of the scallop and buttonhole closely and evenly.

The only other embroidery need be a small medallion in one corner, containing the initials of the person to whom the handkerchief is to be given. This can be a delicate floral wreath or some conventional scroll work, done in fine silk stitch.

If this seems too much trouble, small initials in block letters should be embroidered in one corner. It is important that every style of these hand-made handkerchiefs be marked, as it gives the individual touch and adds much to their appearance.

If there are to be half a dozen handkerchiefs for one person, two of each kind would afford variety. A handsome gift would be the tiny scallop described with block initials in one corner, all worked in color.

The mercerizer cottons can now be had to wash well, and in lovely shades. When the work is kept delicate and fine and soft blues, pink and lavender are used, such handkerchiefs are hard to tell from the imported ones that are in such favor with smartly dressed women. There is a tone of the old Alice blue that is especially good; to be preferred to baby or turquoise tones, says an exchange.

Plain hemstitched handkerchiefs without the drawn work border are lovely, with a tiny wreath of forget-me-nots in the corner, or a slightly larger oblong spray of the same flower. It should be in the corner diagonally opposite the spray.

Handkerchiefs with edge of needle point are particularly good style just now. The edges of the handkerchiefs are first rolled and the roll loosely buttonholed with stitches about an eighth of an inch apart.

Into five of these stitches make another row of loose buttonholing, then a row of three more stitches, then one to finish the point. In working the row of three it will be necessary to throw the thread in the opposite direction. Take several small stitches on the side of the point to bring the thread back to the first row, then make the second point in the same way.

Use a fine linen thread for this edging. Some persons do it with mercerized cotton, but the other wears better.

Showing Mercy.

"Young gentlemen," announced the professor in English literature, "tomorrow I wish you to come prepared to discuss this sentence from the works of Henry James."

"The entire sentence, professor?" groaned the class.

"Well, take it as far as the first semi-colon."—Pittsburg Post.

NO GREATER CITY FOR NORTH HUDSON TOWNS

The referendum has again failed in New Jersey. Tuesday the voters of the six towns and townships forming what is commonly known as North Hudson were called on to vote on the question of consolidating them into one city. Not more than 30 per cent. of those entitled to go to the polls and vote "Yes" or "No" availed themselves of the right.

There had been public meetings in every town and the benefits and advantages of the plan had been discussed and the "stand-patters" had had their say, but nothing could bring the voters to the polls. The six towns concerned—Weehawken, Union Hill, North Bergen, West Hoboken, West New York and Guttenburg—occupy all of Hudson county from the northerly line of Jersey City and Hoboken to the Bergen county line. Combined they have a population of about 90,000.

DAUGHTER'S PRESENCE MAKES WIFE UNHAPPY.

Jersey City, Dec. 30.—Just how far a stepmother's rights in her husband's household extend if the husband is a widower with an adult daughter, was partly defined by Vice-Chancellor Stevenson Monday, in the suit of Rose W. Bross, of Arlington, against her husband, Joseph H. Bross, of West Nutley, for separate maintenance. The court, while outlining his views, will hear oral testimony in the case January 12.

Mrs. Bross objects to living with Miss Bross, her husband's daughter by a former marriage. She instituted suit for separate maintenance two weeks ago, but the first hearing ended in an adjournment as a reconciliation seemed possible then. That Bross was willing to abide by the Christmas message of "Peace on earth, good will to men," was evidenced by his letters read at the hearing in court Monday. In one letter to his wife, he wrote, "in this season of good will and good cheer it should be easy for all to forget past differences and live together like sensible persons." Mrs. Bross replied in trenchant terms. She said the daughter had "talked against" her and opposed her, and that, since the girl was able to earn her own living as a dressmaker, it was her father's "duty to send her to take care of herself." Only on that condition, she said, would she return to her husband.

"You can have peace or war, just as you prefer," Mrs. Bross wrote. "It is a matter of indifference to me. I wish you a merry Christmas."

When the vice-chancellor had heard the letters read, he remarked:

"I may say right here that if this plaintiff is seeking an independent living and refusing to live with her husband because he has a daughter I shall not grant any such order as sh asks. If it had been shown that the daughter had treated her stepmother cruelly, that would have been another case, but a wife has no right to tell her husband not to support his daughter by a former marriage, even if the daughter is grown up and able to take care of herself. Mrs. Bross knew when she was married to this widower that he had children, and she took him for better or worse.

Two years ago Mrs. Bross started a suit for divorce in New York, and was allowed $10 a week alimony, but when the case was called for trial she failed to appear and it was dropped.

AN OLD STAGE COACH WITH SOME HISTORY.

After standing in the alley west of Paterson's livery stable since 1873 the stage coach Sam Houston was torn to pieces yesterday and the timber cast in a waste heap, reports the Austin (Tex.) Statesman. The Sam Houston was the victim of city legislation, it having been ordered moved from the alley, but being in such a dilapidated condition it could not be moved. The coach was torn to pieces and another relic of the early Texas days has passed into history.

If the old stage coach could talk it could tell of some hair raising events that would probably make the "blood and thunder" stories look like thirty cents Mex. It made its first run between Austin and Brenham in the year 1841, when Texas was filled with Indians and bad men. Six and eight mules were driven in good weather and eight in muddy weather.

In its day the Sam Houston was the scene of many a fight and holdup. The wood was marked in numerous places by bullet holes, which were all that remained in history of many of the fights in which the coach was the centre of battle. Guards were always carried along with the coach in the early days to prevent Indian attacks and holdups by bad men who wanted to rob the mail.

Some time ago a movement was started to have the Eam Houston preserved as a historic relic of early Texas days, but the move failed to bear fruit and now it is too late.

The Sam Houston made its last run from San Antonio to Austin in 1873. It was abandoned and had to get out of the way, for the railroad took its place, and now it had to be taken out of the alley because it was deemed unsightly and in the way.

WANTS TO COMPROMISE TO AVOID A LAWSUIT.

Morristown, Dec. 30.—To avoid a long and tedious lawsuit, started by Antonio Costa against Morristown for $150,000 damages, growing out of the installation of the local sewerage system, an effort will be made to settle the difference out of court.

As already told, summons in the suit were served on City Clerk Toms, Thursday, although as yet no declaration has been filed.

Mayor Theodore Ayers said Monday that he thought it would be better to arbitrate the troubles than to incur the expense and annoyance of a lawsuit. Not that he feared the town would suffer financially because of such a suit, but because suits at law were uncertain and unsatisfactory.

There would be no trouble over using the sewers when the disposal plant is ready for use, on account of the lawsuit, the Mayor said, as Costa had declared his work completed and simply wants his money. He did not believe any injunction would be sought to prevent the town from using the sewers, or any technicality resorted to by Costa in order to put the town to inconvenience.

The sewers, he thought, would be ready for use by summer at the latest and house connections should be made as soon as the weather permits. When spring comes, the Executive declared, the city authorities would take up each street and see that the proper connections with the sewers are made. Where they were not the town would do the work and charge the cost to the property owner.

At the office of Clyde Potts, the sewer engineer, it was said that the sewer system should be in operation by June 1 and possibly earlier. It depended, the engineer said, on what sort of winter weather prevails. The repair work to the sewer, which is now under contract, it was stated, would soon be finished.

LONG COATS ARE CUT ON STYLISH LINES.

Street suits of the two-piece variety almost invariably show the long coat over a skirt in comfortable walking length, and these long, well-cut coats over the short skirts have a style and grace never achieved by the limp, trailing skirts and flapping coat tails of the directoire mode.

Colors are also more pleasing to the refined taste this winter. Only on afternoon costumes of the more dressy sort are the perishable lavender and berry shades seen. Good, honest dark grays, a deep, strong green, navy blue and a rich marine blue are the favorites for street suits, and these colors are seen in heavy materials like cheviots, wide-wale serges and diagonals and coarsely woven home spuns.

Often the diagonal weaves show welts of color on a ground of black, giving a very harmonious and pleasing tone. In other instances two shades of the same color in the popular two-tone effect are used.

These long coats are quite plain in style, the trimming consisting only of flat braidings and very large buttons effectively placed. Striking effects are produced by the manner of cutting, all sorts of oddly shaped gores and sections overlapping each other, and pleats being often set into the coat below the hip line. Many of the printzessen coats have these odd shapings in the gores, but these models are proverbially graceful and distinguished in line, and the unusual shape of the sections seems to produce exquisitely beautiful lines.

The printzess top coats are most distinguished, and the beauty of these topcoats is that they may be worn in all sorts of weather over the daintiest frocks. One may don a delicate lavender or rosecolored cashmere or silk costume now and venture to a bridge party in the most inclement weather, secure in the certainty that one's frock is completely covered and protected by the long coat. The topcoats are smart, too. Every woman who can own two handsome out-of-door garments should possess one of these long coats, which will come in handily for automobile wear and for evening wear over light dresses, as well as for general street wear this winter.

If the suit coats are unique in cut, the topcoats far exceed them in this particular. Some of the French topcoats seen at the Deauville-Trouville races were wonderfully put together, sections being lapped upon sections in bewildering manner. The French topcoats are mostly of homespuns in neutral colorings and two-tone effects flecked with white. American women seem to prefer the plain fabrics, like diagonal serges and meltons, for these long coats, and some of the models, fastening low at the hip and with smartly built lines, are extremely distinguished in style.

As colder weather approaches big fur collars are beginning to appear on the topcoats, huge, round, "bear" muffs matching the collars in most luxurious effect. These cloth coats, with handsome fur collars and muffs to match, are really smarter now than the coat of fur for walking and general wear, the all-fur garmen being reserved for a carriage or limousine wrap over evening costumes.

CELEBRATING CHRISTMAS

PRESENTS ARE DISTRIBUTED.

Addresses, Carols, Recitations and Refreshments Are Features of the Programs.

Following are some of the Christmas festivals held last night:

The primary, beginners' departments and cradle roll of the First M. E. church Sunday-school enjoyed their festivities in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon. The chapel was crowded with children and their parents and all had a good time. Mrs. Thomas McDonald, who has charge of the primary department and cradle roll, and Miss Edna French, of the beginners' department, were in charge, assisted by other teachers and helpers.

An informal program was rendered by members of the primary department. There was a recitation by Roswell Ewart, an exercise by Charlotte Carpenter, Carrie Cregar, Thelma Dawson, Lois Beekman and Margaret Dunavan; another exercise by Warren Moyer, Loren Pope, Russell Lynn and Arthur McVoy; recitation, Howard Fisher and a selection by a choir of children. The children in the beginners' department also gave a short informal program of carols and exercises.

The children then marched into the rear parlor where they were seated at long tables for refreshments. Ice cream and cake were served to them, while the parents received cocoa and wafers. While the children were all seated, Santa Claus in the person of Arthur Humble made his appearance by the way of a ladder from the gallery and he delighted all with his clever antics, after which he distributed gifts to all.

Those who acted as helpers were Miss Mattie Humble, Miss May Randolph, Miss Dawson, Mrs. Maurice McGrath, Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull, Miss Gertrude Sharp, Miss Minnie Sharp, Miss Susie Jackson, Mrs. Arthur T. Goodenough.

"What Happened to Santa," is the name of the Christmas cantata given by the Sunday school of the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night. The church was crowded with members and friends and the whole affair was enjoyed greatly. Superintendent George E. Hall was in charge of the exercises. The characters were as follows:

"Santa Claus," Martin Stutsman; "Sexton," Charles VanWinkle; "Jack Frost," William Hadley; "Scribble," Santa's secretary, George E. Hall; "Sparkle," queen of the faries, Clara Hadley; "Roma," queen of the gypsies, Miss Emily Runyon.

In addition to choruses of fairies, tots, gypsies and brigands there were several other features. This cantata was given by the school two years ago, and proved to be such a success that at the request of a number of interested parties, it was decided to repeat it this year.

"Betsey Jane," the rag doll, was impersonated in his inimitable fashion by Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, and he made a hit last night. After the cantata there was the usual distribution of gifts to members of the school, while the teachers were all remembered in a special way. Altogether it was one of the best entertainments given by the school in a long time.

Christmas entertainments were held in Holy Cross church, Trinity Reformed and the First Presbyterian churches last night at which the usual Christmas trees were denuded of their gifts for the children of the various Sunday schools. At Holy Cross the carols were sung by the children assisted by the full vested choir. The presentation of gifts to the children ended a pleasant evening.

At Trinity Reformed Professor Hendrickson, a magician from New York and Robert McKay, a professional impersonator and ventriloquist amused an immense audience of parents and children. Prof. Hendrickson's work as a magician and shadowgraph artist elicited much applause. Mr. McKay, was splendidly funny in his impersonations and kept the audience in good humor by his ventriloquial work. The cantata given be the junior C. E. members on Wednesday afternoon was successfully repeated last night and was very pleasing.

At the First Presbyterian church some very effective tableaux were given by the scholars. These tableaux represented different phases of Christmas time in different places and circumstances and were beautifully executed. H. Warren Rankin entertained the large audience with some sleight of hand manoeuvers

XMAS EXERCISES AT GRACE M. E CHURCH

The program of Christmas music prepared for last Sunday for Grace M. E. church, which was postponed because of the storm, will be given on Sunday. There will be a quartet consisting of Mrs. E. D. Young, soprano; Miss Florence Nichols, contralto; Alexander Dresselt, tenor, and Clarence Steiner, bass, and a chorus choir. Miss Alice Carroll is the organist and director. The following numbers will be sung:

Morning—"Sing Oh Sing This Blessed Morn," J. H. Rogers; "The Glad Tidings," John Hyatt Brewer; "There Were Shepherds," Charles Vincent; "Sing Oh Heavens," Berthold Tours.

Evening—"The Strain Upraise, Alleluia," Dudley Buck; "O Little Town of Bethlehem,' George B. Nevin; soprano solo, "Night of Nights," by Mrs. E. D. Young, Vandewater; "The Night Song of Bethlehem," Dudley Buck.

LADIES AUXILIARY, A.O.H. DANCE LARGELY ATTENDED

An enjoyable dance was held in Saengerbund Hall, last night, under the auspices of Ladies' Auxiliary, Division No. 1, A. O. H. There was a large attendance and the merry-making continued until an early hour.

A feature of the ball was the presence of F. Hennessey, an Irish piper of New York, who dispensed music for jigs and reels for the older folks downstairs, while the younger generation enjoyed itself with the waltz and the schottishe on the main floor.

The committee in charge was comprised of the Misses Jennie Griffen, Mamie Casey, Anna Corgan, May McGauley, Anna Kearns and Mrs. A. Reilly. It was the fourteenth annual dance given by the society.

ROUTINE TRANSACTIONS OF THE CITY FATHERS

The Common Council for 1909 held its final meeting of the year last night, when all business pending was either disposed of or referred to the 1910 body. The reports of the city judge, overseer-of-the-poor, chief of fire department, chief of police, city physician, city clerk, shade tree commission and street commission were presented and filed, it being understood that the substance of them will be published in the newspapers.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of seventeen permits last month and a total of 295 for the year. Andrew Jennings, treasurer of the firemen's pension fund, reported the total amount on hand as $6,853.86, and Horace G. Adams, District Court clerk, reported receipts for the past month to be $103.13, disbursements, $30.43, with a balance of $72.70.

Mr. Buxton offered a resolution which was adopted, providing for the borrowing of $6,500 on account of fire fund and $1,500 on account of poor fund.

At the conclusion of the evening's business City Clerk J. T. MacMurray read the minutes of the meeting, they were approved and the Council adjourned sine die.

Professional Talent at Warren.

Members of Warren chapel Sunday school, instead of entertaining, as is usual custom on Christ mas, were entertained this year. An excellent entertainment was presented by professional talent yesterday afternoon by New York talent. At the conclusion of the program ice cream, cake and coffee were served. The primary department was also entertained by the artists in the afternoon.

Dr. Dager to Speak Here.

Rev. Dr. Forest E. Dager, the wide-world Sunday-school teacher and writer of Sunday-school papers, such as the Sunday-school Evangel, will teach the lesson for the following Sunday and give practical thoughts along the line of teacher-training in the lecture room of the First Baptist church next Tuesday night. The public is invited.

St. Mary's Services.

Four masees will be celebrated at St. Mary's church tomorrow beginning at 6:30 a. m. The Christmas music will be repeated at the New Year's services. The Sunday school will hold its exercises in parochial school hall on Sunday afternoon at 2::30 o'clock.

—Tomorrow will be New Year's day and The Daily Press will not be issued.

OVERSEER OF THE POOR REPORT FOR THE YEAR

Overseer of Poor Alexander Ayers' report was especially gratifying, as it showed that through the successful operation of the city farm resulted a net saving of $1,200 in the maintenance of the city almshouse over the expenses of last year. As a result of the excellent crops on the farm this item was held down to $3,137.56 during 1909.

The total disbursements of the poor department was $8,250.50. This amount includes the expense in maintaining the city home, and also $1,500 which was allotted to Muhlenberg Hospital for the care of indigent patients. At the present time there are fourteen inmates at the home. There were four deaths during the year. Persons claiming miscellaneous attention during the year number 1,207.

That the farm is sure to be a big money saver is shown by a few detail items in Mr. Ayers' report. The produce, fruits, etc., raised on the land was divided as follows: 1,000 bushels of vegetables and fruit; 1,950 bundles of cornstalks; 5,000 ears sweet corn; 100 pumpkins, 200 melons, 400 cucumbers, 300 peppers, 175 egg plant, 40 bushels apples, 278 dozen of eggs, 88 pounds butter and 100 chickens.

Appended to the report of the overseer of the poor was the annual statement of City Physician C. B. Lufburrow. During the year he made 158 visits to the poor and 102 visits to police headquarters. He also examined seven candidates for police jobs.

MORE MEN NEEDED FOR POLICE FORCE

Chief of Police Kiely's annual report as presented to the Common Council last night gives the data of the workings of the department for the past twelve months. The total number of arrests for the year were 910 of which 676 were whites and 234 colored. The whites embroced 21 nationalities. A total of 57,400 reports were turned in by the various police officers. The total amount expended during the year including the salaries of all the officers was $30,221.73.

In his recommendations for improvements in the department Chief Kiely suggests the increase of the force to make it adequate for the demands made upon it. Extra men are needed in the center of the city for the regulation of traffic and he also suggests that additional call boxes be installed.

Another important recommendation is made as to the time of labor for the patrolmen. The chief believes that eight hours is enough for ayn man to work and the salaries paid the men should be equal to those paid in any other part of the State. This would obviate the feeling that exists among the men that their salaries are not commensurate with the duty performed.

In conclusion Chief Kiely thanks the citizens who have given him loyal support in the discharge of the duties of his department and refers to the able assistance rendered by City Judge William Runyon and assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr. The Mayor and police board also come in for a mark of appreciation from the chief. He also paid a high tribute to the men under him who have so efficiently guarded the public welfare.

ARREST CHARLES GEER ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE.

Charles Geer is in trouble again. After being free for just one week he was arrested by Chief Weiss this morning on an embezzlement warrant issued by Justice Snape at the behest of Dr. Groszmann.

According to Dr. Groszmann's version of the case, Geer sold him a wagon last July. After the deal, acting on the suggestion of Geer, Dr. Groszmann turned over an old wagon for him to sell.

It is alleged in the complaint that Geer sold the wagon but failed to reimburse Dr. Groszmann. The value of the vehicle is placed at $15.

Justice Snape held Geer for the Grand Jury.

WORK OF STREET DEP'T

Commissioner Gavett's Interesting Report of the Year's Improvements.

TELLS OF THE DUST PROBLEM.

Many Things Are Needed Among Them Proper Numbering of the Houses, He Says.

Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett's report which is signed by the Councilmanic Committee on Streets and Sewers gives in detail the expenditures for the year 1909 and a complete list of the streets and roads which have been treated for the settlement of the dust problem and tells of the material used in an endeavor to minimize the nuisance created by dusty thoroughfares. Liquid asphalt has been used in streets newly opened up and various qualities of oil, including Tarvia, Dusteline, Texas Oil and Standard Oil, have been used with varying results.

Mr. Gavett says:

"As noted in our report for 1908, the contractor for constructing brick pavement failed to make the necessary repairs at the expiration of the six months during which he was required to keep the pavement in order, and these repairs were made during the summer, the cost of the work being charged to the contractor.

There are other places now needing repair, which have developed since tre period for which the contractor was responsible, and it is recommended that they be attended to in the spring, and that all necessary repairs be made promptly in the future so as to keep the pavement in good order.

Mr. Gavett says that the frequent repairs to the streets and roads has been made necessary by the phenomenal increase in automobile traffic. Amiesite was used on some of the streets and is recommended by the street commissioner for future use. This material properly prepared for use costs 55 cents per square yard, or 97 cents per lineal foot for a strip 16 feet wide.

Tarvia, grade X, was used on the renewal of the grade on West Front street near Grant avenue with good results. The testing of dust preventatives have been continued during the year and it may safely be said that all the preparations tried have met with approval. Renewals of Tarvia B were made on Park avenue by request of the residents on that street, from Fourth street to South End avenue. This preparation has proved very efficacious. Tarvia is not a dust absorber, but prevents the formation of dust to a considerable extent and this material, applied to Grove street late in 1908, is still in good order.

The Texas and Standard Oils are similar in appearance and are applied cold, the Texas Oil being somewhat more enduring. Both oils remain hard during moderate rains, but after continued storms, where there is much traffic, the surface softens to some extent, more so than is the case with Tarvia B.

Material used, Tarvia B; gallons used per square yard, .4174; cost of material per square yard, .0255; cost of spreading per square yard, .0050; total cost per square yard, .0305.

Material used, Dustoline; gallons used per square yard, .2089; cost of material per square yard, .0146; cost of spreading per square yard, .0015; total cost per square yard, .0161.

Material used, Texas Oil; gallons used per square yard, .3884; cost of material per square yard, .0175; cost of spreading per square yard, .0025; total cost per square yard, .0200.

Material used, Standard Oil; gallons used per square yard, .3669; cost of material per square yard, .0122; cost of spreading per square yard, .0025; total cost per square yard, .0147.

A total of 81,939 gallons of Tarvia B, Dustoline, Texas Oil and Standard Oil were used and the total length of streets treated was 22¼ miles. The total area covered was 252,490 square yards and the cost of above materials was $3,816.92. The cost of applying the materials was $597.87, making an average cost of 1¾ cents per square yard for materials and labor. The above amounts are exclusive of repairs and inclusive of streets constructed with Tarvia X and Liquid Asphalt binders.

The work of oiling the streets in 1909 was begun on April 17, and was practically completed on August 31, a small quantity being applied in October, but such late oiling is not to be recommended.

It is very desirable that all streets should be repaired before being oiled, but it was impossible to

SHADE TREE COMMISSION REPORT FOR 1909

The Shade Tree Commission also presented its report to the Common Council last night and in it is found some food for reflection on the preservation of the elms of which the city is proud. The commissioners state that during the year the spraying of trees has been of such great benefit that most of the trees sprayed have been preserved. And trees on private property have been sprayed so that the spread of the elm beetle has been to some extent stopped. The commission would urge upon the owners of shade trees the necessity of spraying, thus helping to eliminate the pest.

The commission has been much interested during the past year in the proposed Greenbrook park, partly because of our identification with the city park, and partly on account of our serving with a committee of the Common Council in investigating and reporting on the plan.

We feel that it is unusual for a town to have offered to it an area of such beauty and landscape possibilities, and we trust that due consideration may be given the project, so that Plainfield may not be obliged, in the future, te pay high prices for inferior land for park purposes after it is too late to secure suitable tracts on reasonable terms.

The commission spent all the money appropriated and the income from the sale of wood, etc., i. e. $2,727.67 and there is a balance due Munson Whitaker Co. for spraying elms $104.17. The cost of furnishing and setting out new trees was $435.67.

TWO 5,000 GALLON OIL TANKS FOR MFG. PLANT

The Spicer Unversal Joint Company was given permission to install two five thousand gallon fuel oil tanks on its property by the Common Council at its meeting, last night, all the members voting for the resolution except Mr. Mygatt and Mr. Clay. They objected on the grounds that more definite plans be drafted and approved by Corporation Counsel Marsh for the proper protection of the city.

In response Mr. Taylor said that the company agreed to install the tanks under the direction of Fire Chief Doane and to take every precaution against fire or accidents. Owing to the nature of the fuel oil, which it is proposed to use, Mr. Taylor said he did not think there could be any danger. Mr. Mygatt amended the resolution to lay the matter on the table, but the amendment was lost and the original resolution adopted.

No action was taken regarding the application from the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company for permission to install a large gasolene tank on its property. Mr. Taylor said that he had made arrangements to have an expert from a large concern come to Plainfield and give the members a talk on the subject. He had learned that there is now a tank of 40,000 capacity in New York city. At Mr. Taylor's suggestion there will be a meeting of the Council as a committee of the whole, together with auto garage owners on Thursday night, January 6, when the expert will address them. He has also offered to assist in drafting proper specifications for the installation of such a tank as proposed.

COUNCIL TRANSFERS RAFFERTY LICENSE

Upon the request of Mrs. Bridget Rafferty and her daughter, Miss Mary Rafferty, executrices of the estate of John Rafferty, the Common Council at its final meeting of the year, last night, transferred the saloon business conducted by Mrs. Rafferty's late husband, to Godfrey J. Weinman, of Fair Haven. They informed the members that the business had been sold to Mr. Weinman, while the latter, in a communication, confirmed the statement of the executrixes that he had purchased the business.

Councilman George S. Clay stated that the license committee had investigated the matter and inquired into the character and standing of Mr. Weinman, found everything satisfactory and recommended that the license be transferred. This was done without a dissenting vote. It is expected that Mr. Weinman will re-open the saloon on Park avenue at once.

CHARMING FUNCTION GIVEN FOR DEBUTANTE

One of the most brilliant social functions of the season was the debutante dance given, at the Park Club, last night, by Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, for their daughter, Miss Gladys Peck, who was formally introduced to society a few weeks ago. There were about 175 guests present, including a number from out-of-town, and all joined in showering congratulations and best wishes on the charming young woman.

The clubhouse was lavishly decorated for the occasion, there being a gorgeous profusion of beautiful flowers, including roses, carnations, potted plants, and other flowers appropriate to the Christmastide season. The clubhouse was transformed into a floral garden and it never looked better.

Dancing began about 8:30 o'clock and continued until 2 o'clock this morning, with an intermission at midnight for refreshments. The music, which was a feature, was furnished by VonBar's Orchestra, of New York. The program included all of the popular dances and there were numerous encores.

FRANCIS WOOD DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Francis Wood, for many years a prominent resident of this city, died this morning at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, after a long illness with Bright's disease. His two daughters, Miss Katherine Wood, and the married daughter, whose home is in London, were with him when he passed away. The latter arrived in New York about a week ago.

Mr. Wood left Plainfield about fifteen years ago and during recent years had made his home at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York. His wife, who was the daughter of Mr. Esterbrook, of pen fame, died many years ago. Wood was associated with the 'Esterbrooks in the manufacture of pens until a few years ago when he retired.

During the greater part of his life, Mr. Wood was a Friend, but recently he became a communicant of the Episcopal church, being received into the membership of one of the New York city churches. He never took a prominent part in affairs in this city, but in a quiet way exerted a great influence in civic matters. Annoucement of the funeral and burial will be made later.

YOUNG LIFE CRUSHED OUT

Lourraine C. Hurtt Fatally Squeezed by Coal Cars Near South 2nd Street.

HAD PREMONITION OF DEATH.

Young Brakeman, Married But Three Months, Conscious to the End.

Lourraine C. Hurtt, twenty-two years old, was crushed to death between the bumpers of two freight cars which he was uncoupling in the rear of 674 South Second street yesterday afternoon at about 3 o'clock. Death was not instantaneous, but followed an hour after the accident. He was attended by Doctor Pittis and removed as quickly as possible to Muhlenberg Hospital where he expired.

As far as can be ascertained Mr. Hurtt was uncoupling cars at the trestle at Rheaume's coal yard and had been warned that it was dangerous and to be very careful. He exercised the greatest care in doing the work, but in spite of it was caught between the cars just as he was about to step from between them. He fell through the trestle to the street below and while not unconscious seemed to realize that he was fatally hurt.

His greatest concern seemed to be for his wife and mother, the latter because he had been the main support to since the death of his father five years ago. On the way to the hospital Mr. Hurtt continually referred to his mother and his wife, who is only a bride of three months. It was said this morning that the young man had had a premonition of the accident which killed him and had spoken of it recently to his wife and mother who had urged him to use extraordinary precautions.

Mr. Hurtt was well known to everybody in Plainfield and was in high standing with the Central Railroad officials. His wife and mother are prostrated from the shock and the family has the sympathy of all. The funeral services will be held on Sunday afternoon at the residence of his mother, No. 442 West Front street, at 2:30.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL AT CHILDREN'S HOME

The annual Christmas festival at the Children's Home was held yesterday afternoon, when the large and handsome tree was lighted by electricity, and the members of the board of managers provided lots of good things for the children. Among those present yesterday were the children of the Home, as well as former members of the family, who returned for the celebration. A turkey dinner was provided for thirty, under the direction of Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, assisted by Miss Ella Serrell, Mrs. E. E. Parvin and Mrs. C. E. Horn.

Through the generosity of many friends, lots of good things were provided the children. The girls received dolls and the boys were presented with games, while there was a general distribution of candies, pop-corn, etc. as well as articles of wearing apparel. One society in Plainfield sent a large number of toys. In all about $60 in cash was received for the work. This afternoon the children have been invited to a home of one of the interested women and a good time will be provided for them. The board of managers as well as the children are grateful for the many kind acts of friends as well as for the gifts.

Plainfield, N. J., December 31, 1909.

do this in a number of cases this year.

It cost $5,212.82 this year for sprinkling with water the streets not treated with dust preventives. We suggest that next year an early start be made in oiling the streets, employing several gangs, and that water sprinkling be done only where absolutely necessary.

Extensive repairs were required last spring on East Front street east of Leland avenue. The worst places were underdrained and the whole street was given a good resurfacing with increased crown.

Farragut road, Rahway road, Putnam avenue, parts of West Fourth street and Madison avenue were also repaired.

On the Watchung avenue hill, between Woodland and Belvidere avenues, the serious raveling of the macadam was remedied by spreading a layer of hot Tarvia X, into which half-inch stone was rolled. This work was done in September, and although the surface of the street, before repairing, was very unfavorable, being composed of loose stones and dirt, it is now in excellent condition.

We would recommend the early opening of East Fourth street, from Richmond street to the angle point near Washington street, in order to remove the obstruction at the latter point.

Perhaps there is no small thing which causes so much unnecessary annoyance as the wrong numbering of houses. Earnest efforts have been made to have the correct numbers substituted for the wrong one and new numbers put on where none existed, but neither newspaper warnings nor postal card requests seem to be effectual, as a recent canvass shows that there are still at least 500 houses with incorrect numbers or with none at all.

The Street Railway Company paid $1,589.62 as its proportion of the cost of repairing streets and removing snow.

There are 49.63 miles of macadam streets in the city, 0.78 mile of brick pavement and 0.07 mile of concrete (alley) pavement.

Some work has been done in establishing and monumenting street lines and much more remains to be done, as these monuments are in constant danger of being displaced by excavations.

Sewers.

There are now 44 miles of sanitary sewers, 396 manholes, 137 flush tanks and 12 direct flushing connections. Owing to the dry weather and consequent diminution in the amount of ground water infiltration, the flow of sewage has not materially increased during the year, being now about 1,600,000 gallons per day. There were 236 connections made with the sewers in 1909, making the present total 3322. 36 of the above connections were made with sewers draining to the pumping station, making a total of 112 connections to these sewers. The pumping plant has operated successfully during the year, the average quantity pumped being now 45,000 gallons per day. The pumps are overhauled occasionally to replace diaphragms, ball valves, etc., but the only regular attention required is about one hour, morning and night.

The cost of special work at the disposal works during the past year may be briefly summarized as follows:

Foreman, labor and carts, $1,096.55; stone, $620.87; drain tile, $234.45; tools and supplies, $81; total, contact beds, $2,032.87; cost of additional scuttles in septic tanks and covering weir channel, $151.89; total, special work, $2,184.76.

The detailed statement of receipts and disbursements for streets and sewers is as follows:

Receipts—Streets: Regular appropriation, $35,000; special appropriation for steam rolled and scarifier, $2,300; Public Service Railway Company for repair and oiling of streets, $1,528.85; sale of stone, pipe, etc., $18.96; sale of tar barrels, $21.50; use of steam roller, men and teams by contractors and others, $839.92; money due Italians and others, location not known, $2.35; total, $39,772.35.

The disbursements equal the total receipts, being $39,772.35. The amount of receipts and expenditures for sewers was $13,749.22.

Amount certified to assessors for removing snow and ice from sidewalks (to be included in tax bills), $664.16; amount paid on account of cost of streets macadamized by contract in 1909, $7,253.78; five per cent. retained for six months, $381.77; amount charged against property owners for flagging, curbing and concrete sidewalks, $2,824.57.

Respectfully submitted, William L. Gloak, Charles C. Randolph, Herbert Buxton, Frederic E. Mygatt, Francis L. Montgomery, Committee on Streets and Sewers.

Andrew J. Gavett, City Surveyor and Street Commissioner.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF FIRE CHIEF T. O. DOANE

The annual report of Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, presented to the Common Council, last night, contains several recommendations, in addition to enumerating the strength of the department, both as to men and apparatus and horses. He states that there are now placed and in use 346 hydrants, twenty-four of which are four-way. The water pressure west of Richmond is stated to be about 75 pounds; throughout the Netherwood section about 30 pounds and east of Richmond street and north of South avenue the pressure will average about 60 pounds.

Chief Doane recommends that the city provide more water pressure, and if this cannot be done by the water company, then he says some means must be employed whereby this greater pressure may be obtained. He renews his request for a large steamer on the ground that the water pressure is not sufficient for the city under present conditions.

It is further recommended that with the rapid development of motor propelled fire apparatus and its installation in most of the fire departments throughout the country, that steps be taken to secure such apparatus for Plainfield. Chief Doane says that this kind of apparatus is no longer in the experimental stage. The request that a heater be placed in No. 1 Engine House to keep the water warm in the boiler of the steamer is renewed and also that more hydrants be placed on Front street, between Watchung and Central avenues.

The chief calls attention to the fact that the floor under the stalls in No. 1 Engine House needs immediate attention. Another important recommendation made by Chief Doane is that the wages of the regular firemen be increased. He says that at present the men are not receiving living wages, that the schedule of pay is now less than in any other city the size of Plainfield. He says it should be at least $1,000 a year after five years' service with a gradual increase of $50 a year thereafter until the salary reaches $1,200 a year.

Attention is called to the recent occupancy of the new engine house in the Netherwod section, and Chief Doane adds that he trusts that the city will see its way clear to build up the department during the coming year in keeping with the city's rapid growth. He thanks the police department, Mayor Fisk and the members of the Common Council for all assistance, and acknowledges the faithful work performed by the men of the department.

The report calls attention to the fact that a contract has been made with the Gamewell company for the installation of a six-circuit switchboard and repeater with necessary storage batteries at headquarters and recommends that the incoming Council will place all fire alarm wires underground.

The report also states that during the past year there were 113 alarms of fire as follows: 'Phone, 61; box, 42; verbal or still, 8; special, 1; false, 1. The causes of fire are reported as follows:

Chimneys and defective flues, 23; woods, grass and trees, 21; debris, 11; stoves, 9; unknown, 9; locomotive sparks, 6; fireworks, 3; gas jet, 3; lamps, 3; children and matches, 2; lantern, 2; heater, 2; spontaneous combustion, 2; cigar, 2; automobile, 2; out of city, 2; smoke, 2; candles, 2; oil stove, plumber, compound lightning, turpentine, paint and false one each.

The amount of duty performed by the department follows:

Small extinguishers 36; no duty, 32; chemical engine, 11; beaten out, 7; hydrant stream, 6; combination chemical, 5; hydrant stream and chemical, 5; small extinguishers, 3; chemical and hydrant, 3; pails water, 2; combination and small extinguishers, 1; steamer and hydrant, 1; thrown out, 1; total, 113.

The insurance and losses are as follows:

Loss on buildings, $6,406.50; insurance on buildings, $145,450; loss on contents, $5,601; insurance on contents, $147,150; total amount of insurance, $292,600; total amount of insurance collected, $11,312; total loss insured and uninsured, $12,007.50; value of property involved: Buildings, $231,850; contents, $205,600.

which pleased everyone. The children were given candy, ice cream and cake. There was no tree.

The primary department of the First Baptist church held an enjoyable Christmas entertainment in the lecture room of the church yesterday afternoon. Mrs. J. A. Powlison, the superintendent, was in charge, assisted by the teachers of the department. The program follows:

Song, "Away in a Manger;" Christmas lesson, Mrs. Hannah Flanders; prayer and Lord's prayer; song, "Christ Was Once a Little Baby;" recitation, Florence Douglas; duet, Everett Case and Dorothy Lee; recitation, Harry Allen; semi-chorus, "Rock the Cradle;" address, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; song, "Merry Christmas Day." After the program there was a distribution of gifts as usual.

The Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church was attended by a large number of people and was thoroughly enjoyed. The children presented a little cantata entitled "Santa's Success," and it was given with supreme confidence and ability. The characters were: Maud, Kathleen Phillips; Madge, Helen Weseman; Millie, Martine Weeks; Jack, Donald Updike; Joe, Albert Bentley; Jimmie, Roy Wyckoff; Hard-working Brown, Phillip Phillips; Fairy Queen, Elizabeth Martin and Santa Claus, Warren Weseman. There were carpenters, college boys and girls, Goblins and lots of little fairies, who all acquitted themselves nobly. Miss Jean Millar presided at the piano. The cantata was under the direction of Miss Fuller and Mr. McClymont. A collection was taken for the Antonio Arrighi, Italian mission in New York city, which netted quite a sum.

Christmas was observed by the members of Grace M. E. Sunday school yesterday afternoon. In the evening the main school listened to an enjoyable program in which the special feature was the presentation of the cantata, "Mrs. Wiggs in the Cabbage Patch."

The cast was the Misses Jennie and Helen Nelson, Florence Hoagland, Adah Van Horne, Minnie Nelson, Etta Bodenheimer; Ronald Conroy, Samuel and Clarence Bodine and Benjamin Shuck. Miss Florence Conroy rendered a solo "Silent Night." The program was aranged by Miss Mary G. Steiner.

The entertainment was supervised by Miss Belle Lunger and Miss Alice Carroll.

Laughing Horse at Proctor's.

"The Laughing Horse" is the one big hits at Proctor's theatre this week. Did you ever see one laugh? If not don't miss the chance. The act is a burlesque on an old-fashioned circus, clowns, strong man, tumblers, rubes and the laughing horse. After that spasm, the Alpha Comedy Four, will keep you laughing with good, wholesome fun. Will C. Cowper & Co. in their western playlet, "A Texas Ranger," tells a thrilling tale of Mexican treachery and is finely acted. Sprague & Dixon pass over the footlights witty talk, catchy songs and a hundred laughs. The films de'art are the best yet.

POLITICS SAID TO BE BACK OF ACCUSATION.

Elizabeth, Dec. 31.—Antonio Tizzano, proprietor of the Berkeley Hotel, Berkeley Heights, was arrested on Broad street here shortly before noon yesterday by Sheriff's Deputy Thomas L. Carey on a warrant charging him with selling liquor without a license.

The complaint against him was made by George F. Wahl and Gustave Deinlein, both of New Providence. They alleged they entered the hotel and found half a dozen men drinking there.

He was taken before Police Justice James P. Kelley, of this city, who issued the warrant and who held him in $200 bail to await the action of the January Grand Jury.

County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt, of Elizabeth, who is Tizzano's counsel, furnished the necessary bonds and his client was released. Back of all this, it is alleged, is a bitter political fight between two Republican factions in New Providence.

George Wahl, one of the complainants, is a son of John F. Wahl, who for several years was Republican freeholder from the township, but was finally defeated by insurgent Republicans. The other complainant, Deinlein, was for sixteen years a Union County Court constable, but was also beaten, it is claimed, for re-election by the faction that turned down Wahl.

Deinlein was for several years proprietor of the Berkeley Hotel and afterwards sold out his interest to a man named Davis, who in turn disposed of the place to the present occupant. The property is owned by the Rising Sun Brewing Company of Elizabeth.

DIVORCE DECREE FOR MRS. R. H. SPRINGFIELD.

Trenton, Dec. 31.—Chancellor Pitney has signed a decree divorcing Mrs. Nettie F. Springfield, of Linden avenue, Montclair, from her husband, Robert H. Springfield, of Orange. Mr. and Mrs. Springfield were married at East Orange on December 9, 1903. She was then living with her uncle, Charles Williams, at Caldwell, but subsequently made her home with her father. The husband continued to live with his sister.

According to the testimony taken before Special Master Cortland Parker, Jr., the cause of the separation of the Springfields seems to have been the infatuation of the husband for Miss Emily Ewie, of Teaneck. Miss Ewie herself said she first met Springfield in 1905 at Coney Island. Subsequently he called upon her at her father's home, and she thought he was a single man. He proposed marriage to repair a wrong she declared he had done her.

SHAW'S DREAM OF HEARST.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 31.—"If Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft and William Jennings Bryan were to die today, and candidates for the Presidency were to be nominated under the direct primary system, Robert M. La Follette would be the candidate of the majority party and William R. Hearst of the minority party," said Leslie M. Shaw, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, in an address to the Indiana Teachers' Association Wednesday night.

"What their platforms would contain, the most imaginative and radical man, not to say revolutionary, would not dare to predict."

Refused Recount; Brings Action.

Atlantic City, Dec. 31.—Counsel for Thomas L. Goldenberg, who was defeated for the office of councilman-at-large at Absecon by one vote and was refused a recount by Judge Endicott in the Circuit Court, will institute quo warranto proceedings when Charles D. Krause, his successful opponent, takes his seat on January 1. This move will carry the whole matter before the Supreme Court for review and again subject to judicial test the right of Senator Edward A. Wilson to vote in Absecon while he occupies a cottage in this city.

Police Appointments Deferred.

Bayonne, Dec. 31.—The City Council, which is now Republican, but will become Democratic on January 1, held its final business session yesterday, and failed to appoint ten more policemen, as was expected. Mayor-elect John J. Cain sent a protest as a citizen against the proposed appointments of patrolmen, and said he considered the force sufficient if properly divided. Before adjourning the Council passed a resolution calling upon Mr. Cain to refrain from making any police appointments in his term.

Hearse on Sled Runners.

Washington, N. J., Dec. 31.—The funeral of William H. Osmun was held at his late home at Changewater and also at the Methodist church at that place Tuesday afternoon. Owing to the badly drifted roads the hearse was on sled runners. The funeral cortege traveled in sleds and was compelled to go through fields in some places. It was about five miles from the church to the Washington Cemetery by way of Port Colden and Washington, the shorter road being completely blocked.

Mrs. John D. Runyon and her sister, Miss Boice, of Park avenue, are planning to spend the rest of the winter south, and will leave some time next month.

Fat Reducing Ideas are Proven Nature's Best

Fat is food turned into the wrong kind of material for the body. Instead of the blood taking up the food we eat and giving it to the body in the form of good, hard, sound flesh, nerve and bone, fat is thrown into the tissues and is packed around the organs and beneath the skin. This at last tears down all the vital forces of the system and destroys not only manly health and comeliness, but likewise results in death. The sure way and the best way is to take a Marmola tablet after each meal. You may then eat what you will, and when you will, and the stomach and digestive organs will turn the meal into the very kind of nourishment you most need. Fat is stopped at once and the fat you have is removed in a way that nature herself suggests, at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces per day, and there are no flabby rolls of skin and deep wrinkles left to remind you of the days when you were fat. Every druggist sells these tablets, which are made after the famous Marmola Prescription. They are harmless, but thousands prove that they do reduce fat just as we say they do. If you can't buy them from your druggist or you do prefer send 75c cts., the price of a case, to The Marmola Company, Dept., 988, Detroit, Mich., and they will send same to you by return mail in a sealed and unmarked package.

Legacy Brought Threatening Letters.

Trenton, Dec. 31.—Because Salvatore Vizzini was unable to keep his legacy of $300 a secret, he has been threatened on three occasions with letters demanding that the money be placed at certain spots designated on pain of death for failure. The missives were crudely decorated with Black Hand insignia, and Vizzini was so scared yesterday he turned the letters over to a patrolman. The police investigated, but could not trace the writer, who is believed to be some one who heard Vizzini tell of his inheritance and wrote the letters as a joke.

Runaways Went Two Miles.

Califon, Dec. 31.—After running two miles, a runaway team belonging to Liveryman George L. Hoffman, of this place, were caught at Middle Valley by former Postmaster Joseph Apgar yesterday afternoon. Mr. Hoffman was driving a spirited team hitched to a sleigh near Vernoy, when the horses took fright and ran away. The sleigh struck a stone, upsetting the vehicle, the occupant being thrown out. They ran toward Middle Valley, dragging the sleigh, which was badly broken.

An Easy Way Out.

"Here, you," said the conductor, angrily, "you rang up a fare. Do that again and I'll put you off."

The small man standing in the middle of the crowded car promptly rang up another fare. Thereupon the conductor projected him through the crowd and to the edge of the platform.

"Thanks," said the little man. "I did not see any other way to get out. Here's your dime."—Success Magazine.

MARKETING BY TELEPHONE
THERE are many lines of business in which most of the sales should be made by telephone. Groceries, meats, fish, fruit, coal, livery, trucking, may be ordered as well by wire as in person. Customers should be urged to order by telephone. It is more convenient and saves time for both buyer and seller.
You cannot consistently advocate this method of buying unless your own telephone equipment is adequate to receive the public's orders without delay.
The Telephone Company has some ideas on bigger business for you, and time-and-money saving through the use of its service. Call Contract Department and ask about it.

STRAIN TOO GREAT.

Hundreds of Plainfield Readers Find Daily Toil a Burden.

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and from my experience with them, I feel that I cannot give them too much praise. I have to do a great deal of stooping at my work and I think that my kidneys became weakened in this way. I suffered from a dull, grinding pain in my back and also had attacks of rheumatism. Another source of annoyance was irregular passages of the kidney secretions. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's drug store and I was soon in good health. Since then hard work has brought on one or two slight attacks of backache but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to give me instant relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Why Don't You Economize on Coal?

is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

In "The Climax" the author, Edward Locke, attempted and succeeded in writing a play of unusual charm. This fact alone regardless of the New York stamp of approval, which it bears, should make the play a most welcome visitor when it comes to the Plainfield theatre tonight. The jaded theatrical appetite has long craved for something more palatable than the wronged woman and the ruined financier. "The Climax" is a comedy of sentiment and melody. The idea is new, the construction is novel, the dialogue brilliant and the musical background is exquisite. The situations are natural and the presentation unlabored.

"St. Elmo," the novel that every woman knows, and every man will accordingly be obliged to take her to see, has been dramatized at last, with the full consent and approval of the authoress, Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson, and will be the special attraction matinee and night, tomorrow, at the Plainfield theatre. What makes the event of interest is the fact that Willard Holcomb, who dramatized "St. Elmo" successfully, produced his play in Richmond, Va., the wartime home of Mrs. Wilson, and received her approval as well as exclusive rights to stage her story.

Trenton Husband Wants Divorce.

Trenton, Dec. 31.—Divorce proceedings which promise plenty of sensation, judging from the papers filed in the Court of Chancery Wednesday, have been commenced by Charles Greenman, of General Greene avenue. He makes the statement in the petition that his wife was guilty of infidelity on a number of occasions up to and including November 27 of this year. Greenman and Miss Edith H. Sutton were married in Stamford, Conn., November 24, 1895. They have two boys who are in the custody of the mother, and whose custody the husband asks for.

CITY GETS $2,133.00 FROM DOG LICENSES

Among the interesting reports presented at the final meeting of the 1909 Common Council, last night, was that of City Judge William N. Runyon. It showed that $745.50 had been received during the year in fines, and after disbursing $138.55 for various expenses, the balance, $606.95, was turned over to City Treasurer W. F. Arnold. He reported disposition of cases as follows:

Number of cases appearing, 910; fined, 130; committed, 86; on probation, 88; sentence suspended, 495; held for the grand jury, 56; pending, 11; held for juvenile court, 2; complaints dismissed, 16; under bonds, 2; transferred to other departments, 24.

City Clerk J. T. MacMurray's report showed that $2,301.00 had been received from the licenses of hackmen, peddlers, junkmen, auctioneers, etc., while 948 dogs had been licensed, which at $2.25 each, made the total receipts $2,133.00. Six kennel licenses were granted at $10 each, a total of $60 and 39 dpulicate tags were issued at fifty cents each, a total of $19.50, making the total receipts $4,513.50, which has been turned over to the city treasurer.

The report of City Physician Dr. C. B. Lufburrow showed that he hal made 102 visits to police headquarters during the year. He also gave a detailed statement regarding the inmates of the almshouse and treatment given.

SALVATION ARMY XMAS GIFTS DISTRIBUTED.

The Salvation Army hall was packed to the doors last evening with poor children and their mothers, at the Christmas tree celebration. A very large tree touching the ceiling, beautifully decorated and lighted with electric lights enclosed in Japanese lanterns stood alongside of the platform.

A very interesting program had been arranged. Instrumental music was furnished by a quartette of the best local musicians and was greatly appreciated by all, especially the boys who joined in by singing, when a well known air was played.

Captain Hewitt sang a solo entitled "The Army Bonnet." One of the pleasing events was the singing of appropriate Christmas choruses by twelve newsboys, each one carrying his bundle of papers under his arm. At the close of the songs each boy received a warm cap.

About twenty children from the Army Sunday school occupied the platform and furnished a large part of the program.

A box of candy and an orange was distributed to each child, besides quantities of toys, stockings, gloves, caps and sweaters. As the service came to a close each of the youngsters with their arms full of good things proceeded to their homes feeling that after all Christmas had brought them a great deal of joy.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

The regular monthly vesper service will not be held on Sunday as usual, the date of the service being put forward to Sunday, January 9.

All of the classes in the association will be resumed on Monday, January 3.

Attendant at Miss Taft's Wedding.

Miss Margaret Lowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lowe, of New York, formerly of Park avenue, was the only attendant of Miss Louise W. Taft at her marriage yesterday to George H. Snowden at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Taft, West Forty-sixth street, New York. President Taft, an uncle of the bride, was one of the guests. Miss Lowe gave a dinner on Monday at her home, No. 67 East Sixty-sixth street, for the bridal party, one of the ushers being Howard Corties, whose summer home is Road Ending, this city.

Gave His Wife $129.

It has been the custom of a Plainfield man each year to save up money in small denomination and on the last day of the year make a present of the amount to his wife. Last year he saved pennies and a considerable sum was saved. This year the man decided to save nickels and when the saving were counted up today he found he had $129 which he gave to his wife as a New Year's gift.

To Organize Band.

All members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. living in Dunellen, whether members of William G. Holton Council or not, and who are interested in the formation of a brass band are invited to meet at the hall on Tuesday evening, January 4, when the band will be formally organized and steps taken to provide instruments. All juniors are expected to be interested in the project.

Horse Is Missing.

Louis Kornfield, a driver for Voehl's bakery, reported to the police this morning that his horse had run away from Voehl's alley and had gone in the direction of North Plainfield. He did not seem to be worried very much as he said Mr. Voehl's name was painted on the cutter to which it was attached and somebody would bring the animal back.

BRIDGEMAN TELLS OF "THE FARTHEST NORTH"

The Christmas entertainment for the main school of the First Baptist church was held last night, and consisted of an exhibition of Robert E. Peary's views of "Farthest North," including several taken on his last trip, when he reached the pole. The lecture was given by Herbert S. Bridgeman, of the Brooklyn Eagle, who has been secretary of the Peary Arctic Club for several years.

In the minds of those present there seemed to be no doubt but that Peary reached the North Pole after hearing the graphic story as told by Mr. Bridgeman. He was introduced by L. V. F. Randolph, and in this connection there was an interesting incident. The two men had never met before, although Mr. Bridgeman had published several complimentary articles in his newspaper concerning Mr. Randolph and there had always been a feeling of high regard for each other.

The views shown by Mr. Bridgeman were exceptionally fine, some of them being exhibited before. The pictures did not show the exact spot reached by Peary, but Mr. Bridgeman, by the aid of a map, showed the audience the route taken by the explorer and how he reached the coveted goal. No direct reference was made by the speaker to Dr. Cook, although indirectly he spoke of "others" who had laid claims to accomplishing the task. The lecture was highly instructive and greatly enjoyed.

WELCOME MEETING AT SALVATION ARMY SUNDAY.

There will be a welcome meeting at the Salvation Army, East Second street, on Sunday evening, to Adjutatt and Mrs. Jackson and their musical family. The Adjutant has just arrived in this city from Harrisburg, Pa., to take charge of the Salvation Army Industrial Home at Fourth and Richmond streets. The local corps in charge of Captain and Mrs. Hewitt are preparing a welcome service which will be very interesting.

The usual watch-night service will be held this evening commencing at 10:30 p. m. A cordial welcome is extended to attend all services.

Christian Endeavorers to Act.

It is quite likely that the local Christian Endeavor Union will take some action on the letter addressed to all the Christian Endeavor unions of the State by Frederick W. Johnson, superintendent of the department of Good Citizenship and Sabbath Observance of the N. J. C. E Union. The letter calls attention to the danger of the repealing of the Sunday law in this State. The unions are urged to take this matter to heart and work for the maintaining of the law. The local union will also probably take action on the matter of Local Option during the coming month.
